SPECTACULAR POLO THRILLS SPECTATORS AT OPENING OF TOURNAMENT AT BROADMOOR

Cheyenne Mountain and Prairie Dogs Victors; Games Replete With Sensational Plays

Spectacular, dashing, breakneck polo thrilled 1,500 people yesterday afternoon at the opening of the invitation tournament of the Cheyenne Mountain Country club, marking the revival of the sport in [illegible]. A kindly sun shone on Broadmoor field and the crowd of society folk, Cheyenne [illegible] in the [illegible], and the lovers of daring [illegible], fine [illegible], a clear sky and of mingling in [illegible]

[illegible] Mountain [illegible] club, 16; [illegible] Country club, 8½.

Prairie Dogs Take Second.

The second game, between the Denver Prairie Dogs and the Sheridan Polo Ranch club, was won by the former, score 5 to 3, and presented defensive work that the first match did not produce. In the second game, during the first half the [illegible] of the Denverites was too much for the Englishmen from Wyoming, but, undaunted, they came back in the second, shot three goals from difficult angles and played a brilliant defensive game.

Yesterday's play was for the Foxhall Keene cup and was a scratch event, none of the players being handicapped. The final matches for the cup will be played Wednesday, when yesterday's winners will meet in the handicap event.

Foxhall Keene, great American poloist and, until injured, captain of the United States trophy defending team, wore the brown and white of the Cheyenne club, but did not reach his stride until the second period, when [illegible]

Webb Plays Brilliant Game.

[illegible] first, not [illegible] with his [illegible] down the field, his brilliant strokes and sharp defensive play brought the stands to their feet time and time again. Aided ably by Hobbs, Pacific coast star, who proved a bulwark on defense, Harrison, whose long shots won him plaudits, and Foxhall Keene, whose knowledge of teamwork and of angle shots rounded out the team, Webb again and again led charges toward the Denver goal, many times by a hair's breadth missing the ball, but at other times sending it bounding toward the posts.

Only a complete moving picture can describe a polo game; so fast, so varied and so changeable is the play, the poloists intermingling one instant and at the next off on a dash to all angles of the field.

Many witnessed polo for the first time and many, thrilled by its call for all that is best in the man and the pony, will witness the remaining 14 games.

Fashionable Crowd Attends Match.

The field, somewhat soft, was not as fast as it will be next week, but it

BRIDE OF TWO MONTHS KILLED BY STREET CAR

Headlight Blinds Motorman and Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Arterberry Are Struck While on Track

Mrs. Thelma Leona Arterberry was almost instantly killed and her husband, Willard B. Arterberry, a carpenter residing near Adams Crossing, [illegible] of Colorado City, was dangerously injured about 10:45 o'clock last night when they were struck by eastbound car No. 46 of the Colorado Springs and Interurban Railway, in charge of Motorman Virden and Conductor Schneider. The car was just passing a westbound car. It is supposed that the couple were so absorbed in avoiding the westbound car that they did not notice the approach of a car behind. Arterberry was rushed to St. Francis hospital and put immediately on the operating table, suffering from severe injuries and possible concussion of the brain. The body of Mrs. Arterberry was taken in charge by Coroner Beyle.

Married Few Weeks Ago.

Mrs. Arterberry, only 19 years old, was a bride of less than two months. The couple were married July 4 last, on the porch of the home of W. L. Moore near Adams Crossing.

Mrs. Arterberry before her marriage was Miss Thelma Leona Courtney and came here last spring to visit her sister, Mrs. E. A. Hutchinson. Willard B. Arterberry came to this city last April from Claremore, Okla., to work with his two brothers, Fred Arterberry and Walter W. Arterberry, building garages in the Park View addition in Manitou.

Shortly after he came here, his brother Walter and L. Febring began to joke Arterberry about Miss Courtney, and offered him a wedding if he would marry her on or before July 4. Arterberry, much to their surprise, carried out the dare, and they, true to their promise, gave the couple a wedding supper. Arterberry was 40 years old the day he married.

Mrs. Arterberry spent most of yesterday baking and cooking for a picnic which the family had planned to hold in the canons today. Last night she and her husband came to Colorado Springs to attend a vaudeville show, and were on their way to their home when the accident occurred, and the wife met her death. They had evidently ridden beyond Adams Crossing, the place where they should have left the car, and probably got off at the entrance of the James [illegible] place, just west of Adams Crossing, and were walking back toward their home.

Not Told of Wife's Death.

This explanation is in great part borne out by what Arterberry himself said just after the accident. He was never entirely unconscious, although practically delirious most of the time. While he was being carried from the car to the Connor house he kept muttering, "Is this where we get off?" and like expressions. It indicated the [illegible] prominent [illegible] in his mind, for he was unfamiliar with the locality, [illegible]

EUROPE ASKS HUERTA YIELD TO U. S. PLAN

Even Japan Interposes Her Influence in Support of Peace Proposal

FOREIGN PRESSURE GREAT

Mexico Must Make Overtures, Gen. Trevino Is Called to the Capital

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Great Britain, France and Japan are among the nations which have interposed their influence upon the Huerta administration in Mexico in support of the efforts of the United States to bring about a peaceful settlement of the revolution.

While administration officials were silent today regarding this phase of the situation, there was a lively interest manifest in diplomatic circles here as to the probable effect of foreign pressure on the Huerta government.

It was learned that the Mexican authorities hoped President Wilson would not read his message to congress next Tuesday as he had planned, which showed a disposition to prolong the negotiations.

Mexico Must Make Overture.

Unless some tangible overture, however, is received within 48 hours from the Huerta officials, indicating a desire to [illegible] the fundamental proposals of the United States, the president will proclaim to congress and to the world the attitude of this government toward the southern republic.

The fact that diplomats from some of the very countries, which not only have formally recognized Huerta but whose bankers hitherto have floated loans for him, are using their influence on the Mexican administration, is calculated to produce something definite shortly. Official reports to the state department show the Huerta regime to be in desperate financial straits, with [illegible] of getting funds [illegible]

Client Squabbling With Counsel Over Procedure; Is Most Complicated Affair

SHERBROOKE, Quebec, Aug. 23.—Harry K. Thaw, squabbling with the Dominion's leading lawyers retained to prevent his return to the Matteawan State hospital for the insane, from which he escaped on Sunday morning last, was apparently as much in ignorance tonight of the next move in his case as the casual idler around the Sherbrooke jail.

For two hours his counsel conferred this afternoon, debating whether they would produce Thaw in court on a writ of habeas corpus on Wednesday or [illegible] surrender him to the immigration authorities and [illegible] to Vermont, a procedure [illegible] was said, [illegible] had agreed. Bankers, in Conference at Chicago, Point Out Defects in Currency Bill

WILL RECOMMEND CHANGES

Service to Country Should Be Greatest Aim of Measure, Say Financiers

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Bankers from all parts of the country at the end of a two days' conference here today agreed on a number of important amendments to the Owen-Glass currency bill now pending in congress and appointed a committee of seven to go to Washington and endeavor to have the changes incorporated in the measure.

On motion of Luther Drake of Omaha, the following committee was named by Chairman [illegible] of New York to go to Washington and [illegible] the recommendations of the conference to President Wilson, Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and [illegible]:

James B. Forgan, Chicago; George [illegible] W. Reynolds, Chicago; [illegible] Norwalk, Conn.; R. [illegible], Atlanta; Sol Wexler, New Orleans; Joseph Chapman, Minneapolis, and [illegible] J. Wade, St. Louis.

COLORADO SPRINGS WILL BE CAPITAL OF TWENTY-FIVE STATES BEGINNING TUESDAY

Convention of Governors This Week Brings Many State Executives to Colorado

More than half the states of the Union will be minus a governor from tomorrow until Saturday this week, and during that time Colorado Springs will be, in a way, the state capital of those states, when the fourth annual conference of governors meets here for a week of Colorado air and sunlight and hospitality to mix with its business sessions. It will be work in the mornings and play in the afternoons and more play at night for an entire week, according to the [illegible] schedule perfected so far.

Included in the entertainment will be a ride over the convict-built road to Canon City, a grand reception followed by a grand ball at the Antlers hotel, an afternoon at Broadmoor watching some of the most famous American polo players perform before a society crowd rivaling that of Newport, an All-Colorado products banquet costing $5.00 a plate, and a picnic dinner in Mount Manitou park, two miles above sea level, followed by a joint All-States reception in Manitou.

Twenty-five Governors Coming.

Probably 25 governors and 10 former governors with their wives and families, besides Franklin K. Lane, secretary of the interior, will attend the conference. In addition many officers and representatives of the American Automobile association will be present to discuss road problems and the coast-to-coast highway. Governor E. M. Ammons of Colorado and Colorado Springs will be the hosts of the conference, assisted by Manitou and the various state societies in the Pikes Peak region.

Work of importance will come before the conference and discussions [illegible] the friendly pro and con of the week.

Radical changes in state government will be [illegible] questions of state [illegible] as are involved in state efficiency and economy; the [illegible] of state legislatures; the growth of administrative commissions and state election [illegible] will be threshed out. The presence of [illegible] Governor [illegible], who [illegible] the cause of commission form of government for the state, should lend great interest to the conference.

Many Matters to Be Discussed.

Other topics of interest that will come before the conference are flood protection in the Mississippi valley; farming methods as explained by Senator Fletcher of Florida, who recently returned from several weeks in Europe in the study of farming methods, will address the conference, and, in general, any and all plans to raise the standard of state government will be discussed.

What promises to be a most interesting discussion, that of state economy and efficiency, will be hindered somewhat by the inability of Governor Cruce of Oklahoma to come and take part in the program on account of an extraordinary condition of affairs whereby his lieutenant governor, an aged man, is constantly open to the machinations of the governor's political enemies at the expense of the state.

Probably the most lavish entertainment in honor of the visiting governors is the All-Colorado banquet to be given at the Antlers hotel next Thursday night by the Colorado Springs Chamber of Commerce. Everything at

SPECTACULAR POLO THRILLS SPECTATORS AT OPENING OF TOURNAMENT AT BROADMOOR

Cheyenne Mountain and Prairie Dogs Victors; Games Replete With Sensational Plays.

Spectacular, dashing, breakneck polo thrilled 1,500 people yesterday afternoon at the opening of the invitation tournament of the Cheyenne Mountain Country club, marking the revival of the sport in Colorado. A kindly sun shone on Broadmoor field and the crowd of society folk, Cheyenne mountain [illegible] auspiciously in the [illegible] ground, and the lovers of daring athletics, fine horses, a clear sky and of mingling in the [illegible]

The [illegible] of the players. Of [illegible] Cheyenne Mountain Country club [illegible] after [illegible] of the [illegible] the [illegible] at the [illegible] led the [illegible]: Cheyenne Mountain Country club, 10; Denver Country club, 8¾.

Prairie Dogs Take Second.

The second game, between the Denver Prairie Dogs and the Sheridan Polo Ranch club, was won by the former, score 5 to 3, and presented defensive work that the first match did not produce. In the second game, during the first half the rush of the Denverites was too much for the Englishmen from Wyoming, but, undaunted, they came back in the second, shot three goals from difficult angles and played a brilliant defensive game.

Yesterday's play was for the Foxhall Keene cup and was a scratch event, none of the players being handicapped. The final matches for this cup will be played Wednesday, when yesterday's winners will meet in the handicap event.

Foxhall Keene, great American polo-ist and, until injured, captain of the United States trophy defending team, wore the brown and white of the Cheyenne club, but did not reach his stride until the second period, when his training and horsemanship displayed itself. He [illegible] late on the field and for the first time since he fell in practice at Meadowbrook field [illegible] in June and broke his collar bone, mounted a pony for participation in a game.

Webb Plays Brilliant Game.

At first, not cognizant of [illegible] others' individual tactics, the local team played an individual play, in which Dr. Gerald B. Webb, [illegible] of the fine ponies of the Country club stables, excelled. Webb's dashes down the field, his brilliant strokes and sharp defensive play brought the stands to their feet time and time again. Aided ably by Hobbs, Pacific coast star, who proved a bulwark on defense, Harrison, whose long shots won him plaudits, and Foxhall Keene, whose knowledge of teamwork and of angle shots rounded out the team, Webb again and again led charges toward the Denver goal, many times by a hair's breadth missing the ball, but, at other times sending it bounding toward the posts.

Only a complete moving picture can describe a polo game, so fast, so varied and so changeable is the play, the poloists intermingling one instant and at the next off on a dash to all angles of the field.

Many witnessed polo for the first time and many, thrilled by its call for all that is best in the man and the pony, will witness the remaining 14 games.

Fashionable Crowd Attends Match.

Convention of Governors This Week Brings Many State Executives to Colorado

More than half the states of the Union will be minus a governor from tomorrow until Saturday this week, and during that time Colorado Springs will be, in a way, the state capital of those states, when the fourth annual conference of governors meets here for a week of Colorado air and sunlight and hospitality to mix with its business sessions. It will be work in the mornings and play in the afternoons and more play at night for an entire week, according to the schedule perfected so far.

Included in the entertainment will be a ride over the convict-built road to Canon City, a stand reception followed by a grand ball at the Antlers hotel, an afternoon at Broadmoor watching some of the most famous American polo players perform before a society crowd rivaling that of Newport, an All-Colorado products banquet costing $7.50 a plate, and a picnic dinner in Mount Manitou park, two miles above sea level, followed by a joint All States reception in Manitou.

Twenty-five Governors Coming.

Probably 25 governors and 10 former governors with their wives and families, besides Franklin K. Lane, secretary of the interior, will attend the conference. In addition many officers and representatives of the American Automobile association will be present to discuss road problems and the coast-to-coast highway. Governor E. M. Ammons of Colorado and Colorado Springs will be the hosts of the conference, assisted by Manitou and the various state societies in the Pikes Peak region.

Work of importance will come before the conference, and discussions and decisions of nationwide significance are expected as the fruits of the friendly pro and con of the week.

Radical changes in state government will be considered, and such questions of state policy as are involved in state efficiency and economy, the distrust of state legislatures, the growth of administrative commissions and state election expenses will be threshed out. The presence of Governor George H. Hodges of Kansas, who this spring advanced the cause of commission form of government for the state, should lend great interest to the conference.

Many Matters to Be Discussed.

Other topics of interest that will come before the conference are flood protection in the Mississippi valley, farming methods as explained by Senator Fletcher of Florida, who recently returned from several weeks in Europe in the study of farming methods, will address the conference, and, in general, any and all plans to raise the standard of state government will be discussed.

What promises to be a most interesting discussion, that of state economy and efficiency, will be hindered somewhat by the inability of Governor Cruce of Oklahoma to come and take part in the program on account of an extraordinary condition of affairs whereby his lieutenant governor, an aged man, is constantly open to the machinations of the governor's political enemies at the expense of the state.

Probably the most lavish entertainment in honor of the visiting governors is the All-Colorado banquet to be given at the Antlers hotel next Thursday night by the Colorado Springs Chamber of Commerce. Everything at

BRIDE OF TWO MONTHS KILLED BY STREET CAR

Headlight Blinds Motorman and Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Arterberry Are Struck While on Track

Mrs. Thelma Leona Arterberry was almost instantly killed and her husband, Willard B. Arterberry, a carpenter residing near Adams Crossing, west of Colorado City, was dangerously injured about 10:45 o'clock last night when they were struck by eastbound car No. 46 of the Colorado Springs and Interurban Railway, in charge of Motorman Virden and Conductor Schneider. The car was just passing a westbound car. It is supposed that the couple were so absorbed in avoiding the westbound car that they did not notice the approach of the car behind. Arterberry was rushed to St. Francis hospital and put immediately on the operating table, suffering from severe injuries and possible concussion of the brain. The body of Mrs. Arterberry was taken in charge by Coroner Beyle.

Married Few Weeks Ago.

Mrs. Arterberry, only 19 years old, was a bride of less than two months. The couple were married July 4 last, on the porch of the home of W. L. Moore, near Adams Crossing.

Mrs. Arterberry before her marriage was Miss Thelma Leona Courtney and came here last spring to visit her sister, Mrs. E. A. Hutchinson. Willard B. Arterberry came to this city last year from [illegible], Okla., to work [illegible] his brothers, Fred Arterberry and [illegible] Arterberry, building [illegible] in the Rock View addition in Manitou.

Shortly after he came here, his brother Walter and [illegible] began to joke Arterberry about Miss Courtney, and offered him a [illegible] if he would marry her on [illegible] Arterberry, much to [illegible] carried out the dare [illegible] to their promise, gave [illegible] wedding supper. Arterberry was [illegible] years old the day he married.

Mrs. Arterberry spent most of yesterday baking and cooking for a picnic which the family had planned to hold in the canons today. Last night she and her husband went to Colorado Springs to attend a vaudeville show and were on their way to their home when the accident occurred, and the wife met her death. The [illegible] had ridden beyond Adams Crossing, the place where they should [illegible] and [illegible] west of Adams Crossing [illegible] were walking back toward their home.

Not Told of Wife's Death.

This explanation is [illegible] borne out by what Arterberry [illegible] said just after the accident. He was never entirely unconscious, although practically delirious most of the time. While he was being carried from the car to [illegible] the expression [illegible] he was informed [illegible]

[illegible]MAN RIGHTS VS. PROPERTY RIGHTS

Mitchell Urges Strikers to Obey the Law, but to Stand Firm

CALUMET, Mich., Aug. 23.—John Mitchell, second vice president of the American Federation of Labor, in addresses to the copper mine strikers at Calumet and Houghton today, declared that the American federation is heartily in accord and sympathy with the Western Federation of Miners "in the effort it is making to better conditions of life and labor for the miners in this field."

He praised the strikers, particularly the non-English-speaking men, for their unity and courage, and the women and children of the strikers for their cooperation.

Mr. Mitchell expressed the belief that the men would win if they stood firmly together, put faith in their labors and obeyed the law. He declared it was the right of the men to organize, and, commenting on the refusal of the operators to arbitrate with the Western Federation of Miners, said the governor should say to the companies, "Arbitrate or the state will not spend its money for your protection and send the militia to camp on your property."

Human Rights vs. Property Rights.

Mr. Mitchell said he placed a higher value on human rights than on property rights. He believed both men and strike leaders had pursued every honorable means to secure redress of grievances.

The injunction sought by the Western Federation of Miners to restrain Sheriff Cruse from employing assistants from outside of Houghton county, was not granted by Circuit Judge O'Brien today, the judge believing he had no power to grant such an injunction.

Mr. Mitchell will go from here to Washington. Asked whether he will [illegible] in the district he stated that would depend on what he [illegible] here today. He [illegible] to get in touch with the operators. J. M. Walker, [illegible] of the Illinois Mine Workers of [illegible], who accompanied Mr. [illegible] [illegible].

[illegible] music during the evening. The [illegible] affair will be strictly [illegible] while [illegible] and silk hats [illegible] will be [illegible].

[illegible] Big Affair.

[illegible] at the banquet will cost $7.50 [illegible]. Two hundred tickets will be sold and 100 reserved for the governors and guests. The most delicious of Colorado products will be served, from two big elk revolving on a spit turned before a charcoal fire by clockwork, to the best fruits and vegetables obtainable throughout the state. Nothing stronger than Manitou mineral water will be served to drink.

As official host of the conference, Governor Ammons will entertain Tuesday night with a reception at the Antlers, followed by a grand ball. Beautiful decorations, the best of music, evening dress and artistically designed dance programs will assist Colorado hospitality.

A taste of American [illegible] and English athletics will [illegible] the governors Thursday afternoon when they attend the polo games at Broadmoor. Before a standstand representing American society easily on a par with that of New York and Newport, Foxhall Keene and other great American polo experts will perform. The flutter of beautifully-gowned women, the dash and daring of keen-blooded, fearless athletes, the snap of the cool Colorado air and the sparkle of rarified skies should leave with every member of the conference a lasting picture of what Colorado Springs has to offer to the guardians of the nation's statehood.

All-States Reception.

Manitou will assist Colorado Springs with a picnic dinner two miles above sea level, followed by an All-States reception tendered by a host of former and visiting residents from the various states represented at the conference. Then there will be individual receptions by states to individual governors, an automobile parade of one state's machines, and a flying trip via automobile over the convict-built roads toward Canon City.

As souvenirs the governors will carry away individual programs for the conference, each one bearing the name of a governor on its front and including a complete program for the week, pictures of mountain scenery throughout the Pikes Peak region and blank memoranda sheets. Each governor will also be presented with a souvenir box of ores from the mining districts of the state, through the courtesy of Thomas R. Henehan, state commissioner of mines. The specimens will be mounted and tabulated.

Gov. McGovern Due Today.

The first arrivals for the conference, Governor Francis E. McGovern of Wisconsin and his secretary, Miles C. Riley, are expected to reach here today. Governor Dunne of Illinois is expected Tuesday morning, and Secretary of the Interior Lane tomorrow. The latter probably will inspect the Pikes Peak water supply and the forest reserve there, since there is a movement in congress to take this reserve out of the control of the department of agriculture and place it in the hands of the department of the interior. Through his visit it is possible that Colorado Springs will secure complete control of the watershed, an end long desired.

At present many of the governors have rooms reserved at local hotels for the week. State societies and Chamber of Commerce committees are preparing to meet each governor at the train when he arrives. Arrangements have been made to have the sessions in the ballroom of the Antlers hotel instead of in the Chamber of Commerce rooms, as first planned. To accommodate a limited audience seats will be put in the conference hall for visitors, and the hall will be beautifully decorated. Entrance to the banquet and reception will be by ticket only. A large number of press representatives, including those of the Associated Press, the United Press, and Denver papers will be present.

Conference Held Each Year.

The function of the conference is to bring the governors together once a year in joint meeting for comparison and discussion of current problems in statehood, which includes everything from rural credits to divorce. The executive committee consists of Governor Ammons of Colorado, Governor McGovern of Wisconsin and Governor O'Neal of Alabama. Governor McGovern is chairman, Governor Fort of New Jersey, treasurer, and Miles C. Riley of Madison, Wis., secretary.

Roosevelt Called First Meeting.

The governors' conference was first held in 1908, when President Roosevelt invited the governors to the White house to consider the question of a conservation of national resources. The second conference was held in 1910, and yearly ever since.

At the meeting in Richmond, Va., last year, a committee was appointed to take up the matter of rural credits and provide a plan for the establishment of rural credit banks and other organizations to aid people engaged in agriculture and other pursuits distant from credit and trade centers. Reports from this committee are expected at the conference.

Governor Blease of South Carolina made history at the conference last year when he took the platform and advocated "mob law" and defied conventional law with his famous "to — — with the constitution!" He will attend the conference here this week.

ready restive because of deferred payments.

Huerta's Resignation Emphasized.

So important is this aspect of the situation regarded that an air of tense expectancy prevailed tonight in official circles where it was believed some pronouncement would be forthcoming from Mexico City.

The insistence of the United States on a constitutional election and the elimination of Huerta as reiterated positively by administration officials—a position which Mr. Lind had been instructed to emphasize. Only concessions by the Huerta government it is believed here, now will persuade President Wilson to hold up the presentation of his message.

The president finished the document today, read it over to Secretary Bryan and will discuss it on Monday with members of the senate and house committees on foreign relations.

The sending of a special envoy from Mexico to Washington further to discuss the situation with President Wilson is regarded as a dilatory move. It is known that the Washington government has made it clear that such a procedure would not alter the views expressed in its first note. It is believed, however, that the Huerta officials now have abandoned the idea of sending an envoy and are seeking to develop a new basis for negotiations.

Trevino Called to Capital.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 23.—The return of Gen. Geronimo Trevino from the United States to his home at Monterey and the announcement that he is coming at once to the capital have given rise to the report that the administration is contemplating some concession to the demands of the Washington government. General Trevino has been for some months in California, having gone there after having been summoned to Mexico City last March, when it was rumored that Provisional President Huerta was planning to resign in his favor and take the field against the rebels.

The fact that he is making another hurried trip to the capital through a rebel infested country by a roundabout route is regarded here as significant. General Trevino is one of the oldest Mexican generals and is esteemed by the rebel leaders as well as the adherents of the administration.

Negotiations between the Mexican and American governments appear to be quiescent. The embassy evidently is not expecting any developments of importance before the delivery of President Wilson's message on Tuesday. Mr. Lind, the president's personal representative, still professes optimism regarding the ultimate success to some degree of his mission, although he is not very communicative on the subject.

A special meeting of the Huerta cabinet was held tonight. The meeting is said to have resulted in a determination to publish Monday the notes exchanged between Washington and Mexico.

France May Not Receive Envoy.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—The Agence Nationale says it is practically certain that both President Poincare and M. Pichon, the foreign minister, will decline to receive Francisco de la Barra, the former provisional president of Mexico, who recently was appointed minister to France. His position, it is said, is considered similar to that of Gen. Felix Diaz, special ambassador now on his way to Japan, whom the Japanese government has refused to receive officially.

Allows Shipment of Arms.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—President Wilson has granted permission for the exportation of 2,000 rifles and 250,000 cartridges to the Huerta government. All but 1,000 rifles which go to Vera Cruz from New Orleans will be shipped from El Paso via Juarez. Some of the latter already have gone. Although it was the first permission granted since June 25, and many applications have been turned down, it was declared no change had been made in the government's policy and officials pointed out that the neutrality proclamation permitted the president to authorize shipments at his discretion.

Unofficially, it is said, the United States is not averse to having the Huerta garrison at Juarez well armed to discourage attack and a battle on the border with its consequent complications. Neither is this government averse to saving the line of communication between Vera Cruz and Mexico City kept open as an avenue of egress for foreigners in Mexico City. No general shipments will be permitted.

Huerta Imports Arms.

EL PASO, Tex., Aug. 23.—Permits were granted today, according to customs and military officials here, to the Huerta government to export 500,000 rounds of ammunition and 1,000 rifles to Mexico. This is in addition to the 40,000 rounds of ammunition and 300 rifles permitted to cross yesterday. Rebel sympathisers have telegraphed to congressmen at Washington protesting at the permission granted to the Huerta government.

Mexican federal officials received telegraphic orders from New York today for $250,000 gold. This is to be used to pay the troops in Juarez said to be in a state of mutiny because of lack of pay.

Rebels Heading South.

EL PASO, Tex., Aug. 23.—Pancho Villa and his rebel band are not on the Mexican Central railroad waiting to attack supply trains headed from Juarez for Chihuahua, according to information received here today by Americans. This information is to the effect that Villa and his rebel band passed south through Madera, Chihuahua, last Sunday headed for the mountains. The supply trains which have been loading in Juarez since Monday are still held in the border city. The exact reason is not known. It is generally believed, however, that the delay is due to nonreceipt of money for the troops who are to guard the train.

tonic. If New Yorkers could only see for themselves what Colorado Springs has to offer, your hotel accommodations would not be sufficient.

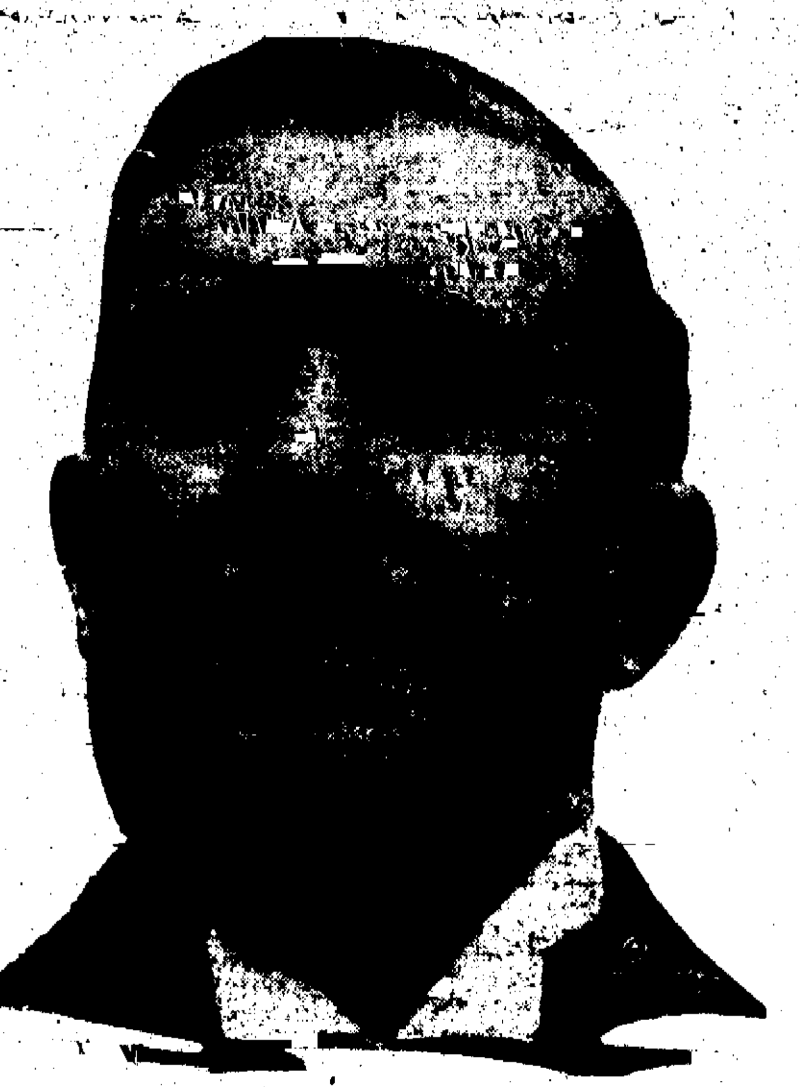
"The tournament arranged by the Country club is what the game needs. It means here that men sacrifice their time and money and energy for the sake of the game and it will bring results. The play in the games today was surprising to me. The ponies are fast, and the crowd and the field and the weather—all surprised me. It also [illegible] that polo will be a great favorite here and that there is opportunity to develop some wonderfully fast teams.

"The international series surprised all of us. We knew but little of the strength of the British or of their ponies' fleetness, but we knew our own strength and knew they would have to 'go some.' They couldn't go quite fast enough."

Mr. Keene brought with him a dozen fine mounts, two of which were used in the international series. He is a great lover of horses and spent considerable time after yesterday's goals examining the ponies brought here for the tournament.

GOV. COLQUITT SLASHES APPROPRIATION BILL

AUSTIN, Tex., Aug. 23.—Governor Colquitt, in a series of vetoes today cut nearly $3,500,000 out of the appropriation bills passed by the special session of the legislature, which ended Tuesday. As reduced, the appropriation for the next two years totaled approximately $11,600,000.



TAMMANY BOSS, CHARLES F. MURPHY, WHO CAUSED NEW YORK LEGISLATURE TO IMPEACH GOVERNOR SULZER

This is one of the latest photographs of Charles F. Murphy, Tammany boss who has such a grip on New York state that he could cause the legislature to impeach Gov. William Sulzer. Ten months ago Murphy caused a Democratic state convention to nominate him for governor. There was never a better photograph of Murphy than this.

WOOL SCHEDULE IS PASSED BY SENATE

Rapid Progress Made on the Tariff Bill in Committtee of the Whole

WASHINGTON, Aug. [illegible]—Rapid progress on the tariff bill was made today in the senate. The wool schedule was disposed of so far as it will be considered by the senate in the committee of the whole and a deep inroad was made to the free list.

Though no vote was taken on free wool, the decisive showing on that having been deferred until the bill comes from the committee of the whole, the finance committee rates on wool manufactures were agreed to without amendment and there was every indication that raw wool will remain free. The Penrose, La Follette, Smoot and Catron substitutes for the schedule will come up when the bill appears in the senate proper.

Only a part of the free list, a portion of the paper schedule and the sundries schedule remain to be considered in committee.

Among the articles on the free list ratified today were agricultural implements, beet and sugar cane, machinery, alcohol, horses and mules and animals for breeding, apatite, asbestos, bauxite, bibles, bread, biscuits and many others.

MAN DROPS DEAD WHILE HUNTING

GRAND LAKE, Colo., Aug. 23.—A. J. Moore of San Antonio, Tex., dropped dead from heart failure while hunting grouse about four miles west of Grand Lake this afternoon. Moore was wealthy and was widely known through the southwest on account of his philanthropy, which was effected mainly through the Baptist church organizations. He, with his wife, was a guest at the summer cottage of Jay Adams of San Antonio, at Grand Lake.

MARTIN SUCCEEDS BROWN AS GEN. MGR. OF D. & R. G.

DENVER, Aug. 23.—Announcement was made today of the appointment of W. S. Martin as general manager of the Denver & Rio Grande railroad, succeeding E. L. Brown, recently placed in charge of operation of both the Denver & Rio Grande and the Western Pacific. Martin has been assistant general manager since 1907.

ORCHID ROMANCE FLOWER

From the Brooklyn Eagle.

The orchid is the flower of romance and adventure. It might be called, also, the universal flower. In its season it can be found growing on Long Island, within a short ride of Brooklyn. It is the flower sought for amid the wilds of South America, India and the little known parts of the islands of the sea.

Some of the most exciting experiences in foreign lands fall to the lot of orchid hunters. They push into unfrequented parts in the hope of securing some new genus, and when they do, no end of money is made in introducing the flower which nobody outside of the discoverer and the introducer has ever seen.

Some years ago a collector was sent by an English house to New Guinea to procure a "dendrobium," which was then very rare. He went to the country, dwelt with the natives for months, faring as they fared often under very trying conditions, and found a magnificent collection of orchids in a native burying ground. The flowers were blooming among the exposed bones and skulls. After much hesitation, the natives allowed him to remove the orchids, some of them still in the skulls. The natives sent along with the beautiful flowers a little idol to watch over the spirits of the departed as represented by the skulls, which were also taken. The plants sold at fabulous prices.

Sometimes the orchid hunter will come across a tree completely covered with orchids of a variety of colors. These are what are known as terrestrial orchids. They are carried through the air by the wind and lodge on trees and become parasites. They fasten themselves where they lodge and grow and blossom. Sometimes a number of different varieties of differing colors fasten on the same tree, and when they blossom the sight is superb.

INFURIATED MOB WOULD LYNCH STREET CAR CREW

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 23.—A mob of several hundred persons blocked a street and threatened the lives of a street car crew here tonight after Georgia Ottenano, 20 months old, had been struck and dragged under a car in the Italian quarter. As the car stopped the mother crawled beneath and pulled out her baby and held it up, mangled and bleeding. Frank Holmes, motorman, and J. L. Robinson, conductor of the car, alighted to secure the names of witnesses. Instantly a crowd surrounded them and there were cries of "Lynch them."

The presence of a riot squad from police headquarters was necessary to rescue the men.

M'CALL IS TAMMANY LEADER IN NEW YORK

Gaynor Will Be Independent Candidate; Hot Campaign Now Is On

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Edward E. McCall, chairman of the public service commission, was tonight designated as mayoralty candidate by the Democratic city committee.

Mr. McCall's selection by the 630 delegates as leader of the Tammany forces was unanimous, as has been forecast since it appeared from yesterday's announcements that the Tammany leaders had decided not to renominate Mayor Gaynor, and that he would be nominated by the "Gaynor league," with a complete independent city ticket of its own. There were reports that friends of Mayor Gaynor would attempt to stampede tonight's convention for him, despite the leaders, but no such move materialized.

Herman A. Metz was unanimously designated for comptroller. Congressman Joseph A. Goulden was unanimously selected for president of the board of aldermen.

Col. Roosevelt Will Not Attend Party Meet in Chicago

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Aug. 23.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt will not attend the birthday celebration of the Progressive party, to be held in Chicago on August 30. He so announced tonight while here on his way to New York from a several weeks' outing in northern Arizona. Further than this, the colonel declined to discuss the subject.

Colonel Roosevelt will be in Chicago Monday, remaining there only long enough to change trains for New York. He said he might confer with several Progressive leaders while there, but that he had no special appointments. Accompanying the colonel east are his sons, Archie and Quentin, who made the trip to Arizona with him.

The former jurist demanded a trial by jury and arguments on his motion were commenced by attorneys.

JEWESS TO WED INTO BRITISH NOBILITY

London society has been agitated by the announcement of the engagement of Miss Sybil Rachel Betty Cecile Sassoon, a beautiful Jewess, to the Earl of Rocksavage. The British nobility has held aloof from such mixed marriages and they have been very rare, but the Earl of Rocksavage stands so high in noble society that his bride will doubtless be received.

She is the daughter of Sir Edward Sassoon, who had been knighted. He was a member of parliament from Hythe. Her brother, Sir Philip Sassoon, succeeded his father as a member of parliament from the same constituency. Miss Sassoon is only 19 years old; the earl is 30. He is the elder son of the Marquess of Cholmondeley. He served in the South African war.

MEN SMOKED BEFORE AMERICA WAS FOUND

Pieces of Pipes Used in Classical Times Have Been Unearthed Tobacco Is Not the Only Substance to Be Employed

Paul Beaumont, in the Minneapolis Journal.

Many a philosopher of the smoking room, sitting at ease and watching the blue smoke curl, has wondered who invented the pipe. Probably his mind wanders back some 350 years and there sees the origin and introduction of the pipe.

We are taught that the Indians were the first to smoke. We are supposed to have learned smoking from them. Thus Christopher Columbus and his men coming in contact with the Indians for the first time in 1492 began to smoke. On returning to Spain pipes were likely presented to friends as one of the strange products of the new world.

All this is very well. But mankind smoked long before Columbus discovered America.

In the first place tobacco is not the only plant smoked. Even the small boy knows this, but it is somewhat forgotten with years. Who will prove that there were no smokers aboard the ships of Columbus? Might it not be reasonable to suppose that the chief surprise the discoverers experienced at seeing the Indians smoke was that they did not smoke the same substance? Very likely they exchanged "tobaccos" and adopted the Indian brand because of its superior flavor.

Now comes the question: Did anybody smoke tobacco before the Indians? This question must be answered in the affirmative. Positive proof may be hard to find, but in the Eleventh century in the [illegible] dynasty, the Chinese framed laws to regulate the use of tobacco. Therefore it is probable that they had known and used tobacco for some time.

If scientists are right regarding relationship between Indian and Mongolian, tobacco is a native of Mongolian plains and was brought to America by adventurous members of the Mongolian race.

Pipes have been unearthed in many localities from deposits that surely go back to ancient history. In 1844 at [illegible] France, upon examining certain Roman tombs, an antiquarian discovered unmistakable pieces of clay pipes. Other finds of the same nature were made in 1845 and 1856.

In his work on the Hadrian wall, built some time in the reign of the Roman emperor Hadrian (A. D. 117-138), [illegible] speaks of pipes found among objects certainly dating back to the days when the Romans barred the way for Picts and Scots. The same writer speaks of like discoveries made elsewhere, notably in Northumberland and in London.

Few classical writers mention the pipe, but Herodotus and Pliny do. Pliny says that the barbarians smoked to cure coughs and to make themselves [illegible]. Possibly these people began to smoke for medicinal purposes and continued for pleasure.

Thus smoking must not be considered a product of our times. As archaeological research advances we have reason to believe that Solomon was nearly right when he said that nothing was new under the sun.

MRS. W. GOULD BROKAW AT LAST WINS DIVORCE

Mrs. W. Gould Brokaw, who was one of the most beautiful women in New York city, and whose domestic troubles have been aired in the courts for several years, has at last won a divorce from her husband. That is, a referee who heard the case has recommended to the court that she be granted a decree. As the recommendation is so strong there is little doubt the court will indorse it.

GOV. SULZER BLAMES MURPHY FOR TROUBLE

Not Fearful of Outcome of Case, Though, He Tells Friend in Letter

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Gov. William Sulzer of New York asserts he has no fear of the ultimate result of the impeachment proceedings which have been instituted against him. He expressed this belief in reply to a letter from Representative Lafferty of Oregon, who made Mr. Sulzer's letter public tonight. Mr. Sulzer says none can conceive the obstacles which beset his path. He emphatically declares the charges against him are groundless, and says Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany hall, and his followers know there is no basis for the publicity campaign they are conducting against him, but are pursuing it with the knowledge that it may prove disconcerting to him and worry Mrs. Sulzer.

Speaking of Murphy, he said:

"When the political boss found out he could not control me, and make me a rubber stamp, he did everything in his power to destroy me politically. When Boss Murphy told me he would destroy me if I did not do his bidding, I defied him to do his worst, and the fight for good government will go on, and ultimately triumph. With the aid of the recent people of the state, I shall go forward. I cannot do otherwise."

THAW'S LAWYERS

for that matter, has such a legal snarl within snarl, case within case, been before the courts.

In brief, Thaw is held on a commitment charging him with being a fugitive from Matteawan, where "he was confined on a criminal charge." This is an error. Acquitted of Stanford White's murder on the ground of insanity, he was held there on no charge, but as a lunatic.

Both sides have admitted that the commitment is defective, and it was conceded that he would be released on the writ when arraigned. "Why not, then," Thaw's lawyers were asked by the immigration authorities, "cancel, as it were, all your objections to his being held, turn him over to us, have a hearing at Coaticook, where he was first locked up after crossing the border, and we will deport him to Vermont?" It will then be up to New York state to extradite him."

Up to Minister of Interior.

But the agents of the immigration authorities are subordinates, and Thaw's lawyers believe that the final decision in the matter of deportation will come from the minister of the interior, who is at present in Vancouver on his vacation. Facing such a predicament it was said tonight that the habeas corpus hearing would be held on Wednesday, as previously set.

Another possibility was suggested. Thaw would come into court, plead not guilty to the present charges and demand trial. This, it was said, might not take place until the October term of court.

"How about it?" Thaw was asked.

"Wait for Roger," he said.

O'Mara was thus literally the missing keystone in the Thaw forces tonight, and William T. Jerome, Thaw's old enemy and prosecutor, was the missing general of the New York forces.

It was said here that Jerome, retained by the New York attorney gen[illegible] Sunday. Thaw [illegible] particularly [illegible] when told Jerome was hurrying here.

"So Willie's Coming."

"So Willie's coming," he said. "Never in my life I have lawyers who have no [illegible] on account of ability. But I am able to confer with them. I have never had a lawyer except [illegible], and maybe a couple of [illegible] who were worth over $5 a day.

"A [illegible] of Sherbrooke [illegible] have always [illegible], and they [illegible] backed me up [illegible], but their influence is waning. Public opinion in New York and elsewhere is [illegible] growing more favorable to [illegible]. Canadians are learning that New York is trying to treat Canada as a little principality. But, after all, I think I was wiser to have come to Canada instead of entering Pennsylvania.

"Well, I hope Jerome had a good time here. I have a lot of things on Jerome. I was going to spring them at White Plains in 1908, but decided not to. I'll spring them sometime, though."

As he rambled on, Thaw had a stenographer taking down what he said. He declined to say a word about Evelyn Thaw or her child.

Forces Marking Time.

Jerome is to the New York state forces what O'Mara, in a sense, is to the defense. Without O'Mara, Thaw's lawyers are sparring for time. With the arrival of Jerome, those here from Dutchess county and Albany will drop into the background. Franklin Kennedy, a deputy attorney general from Albany, has had charge of the case so far. Assisting him are Fred Hornbeck, Dutchess county sheriff, E. A. Conger, district attorney of Dutchess county, and Samuel Jacobs, a Montral lawyer retained to represent them in court. Kennedy and Jacobs went to Montreal on a secret mission this afternoon, returning tonight.

Sheriff Hornbeck spends his time in a hotel chair, jingling handcuffs and leg irons he brought with him, wondering what will happen.

Mr. Conger said tonight that, of course, he and Kennedy would be superseded when Jerome comes.

"I don't believe all this talk about the agreement to deport Thaw to Newport, Vt.," said Conger. "While I understand the immigration agents here have been instructed to use their discretion in the matter, they are in my opinion nothing more than policemen, and I think the decision is up to the minister of the interior. We are waiting till Thaw's lawyers come into court. We'll get him sure. Whether they will deport him to Vermont, I can't say. We haven't succeeded, however, in getting even a tentative promise to shoot him across the New York state line."

Promised $10,000 Fee?

The inside story of how Thaw's Canadian lawyers were retained has cropped out in Sherbrooke. When Thaw's arrest was first flashed to New York city, a New York theatrical man, who had [illegible] Margaret Thaw Carnegie [illegible], called up the Carnegie [illegible] Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, [illegible] in New York, and told them Thaw's [illegible]. The advice [illegible] that his [illegible] that he [illegible] but Thaw's [illegible]. It [illegible] on his visit, it is said, that those held on the Thaw payroll were retained by telegraph and telephone. He [illegible] till the Canadian [illegible] to have promised [illegible] five of them [illegible] retain. But he had nothing in writing to confirm this, [illegible] tonight had no assurance [illegible] the family of what they were to receive. They were clinging to the case as being admittedly the most famous the Dominion has ever had.

Chief of those lawyers is J. N. Greenshields, K. C., of Montreal. A reputed millionaire, it was said that not until this instance has he handled a criminal case in years. Assisting him were W. K. McKeown, K. C., of Montreal, officially designated as "family counsel;" Charles D. White, K. C., and H. R. Fraser of Sherbrooke; W. L. Shurtleff of Coaticook, whom Thaw retained before his family was aware of his arrest; Louis St. Laurent, of Montreal, acting in a supplementary way as counsel for "Gentleman Roger" Thompson, the chauffeur, who drove Thaw from Matteawan, and, finally, Henry Hirschberg, a lawyer of Newburgh, N. Y., whom Thaw engaged by telegraph.

Shurtleff, Political Whip.

Shurtleff is described by the townspeople as the "political whip of 10 counties;" and it was he who went to Ottawa in Thaw's behalf. Ex-Governor Stone of Pennsylvania, who interested himself in Thaw's behalf at the habeas corpus proceedings in New York, arrived tonight.

Thaw spent the day arguing with his patient lawyers, pacing his cell, eating candy and reading up fine points relative to international law and insanity, subjects which have become very dear to him.

Throughout the day he has refused to discuss any legal aspects of his case, but issued a series of statements concerning his plans for distributing throughout the world something he intends to issue later. He described this as "very important."

Thaw tried to explain tonight some of the recent history of Matteawan. Dr. Kieb would not be the superintendent now, he said, if it had not been for the Thaw family.

"If it hadn't been for me," he said, "Kieb wouldn't be in charge. We got Baker out, you know. Baker was queer."

Thaw said he hadn't heard anything about the suggestion of the New York state authorities easing up on "Gentleman Roger" provided he gave up the details of Thaw's delivery and the inception of the plot. "He's a British subject," said Thaw, repeating what he had said earlier in the day. Thompson [illegible] he thought he had better keep still.

Thompson's Autobiography.

"I'll give you the history of my life, thus far," he added. He laboriously [illegible] out a statement. This is just what he wrote:

"[illegible] Thompson was born at [illegible], about 35 years ago, of [illegible] parents. At the time of my birth my father was a Toronto [illegible]. My father [illegible] old. Shortly [illegible] I was brought to New York city by my widowed mother, and have lived in New York, and my mother left Canada with my brother and sister and [illegible] to live with them in New York city.

"My brother and I are both married. I am [illegible] and live with my mother, who [illegible] a widow. I have never been accused or indicted in any court or country for any crime other than violating the auto speed law, and have not [illegible] one year's work since I left school, about 20 years ago. Roger Thompson (the Roger I assumed) is no more than a nickname that was given me by my chums. This can be confirmed by inquiry among them. The people here have been very kind to me, and have shown me every consideration possible, and I am sure, when the facts of my life are verified, they will not, on my first visit to the land of my birth, try to persecute me."

Thompson Keeps Mouth Shut.

After his [illegible] of last night that he was the chauffeur that drove Thaw from Matteawan, "Gentleman Roger" Thompson kept his mouth closed today. Thaw, however, promptly issued a statement that he had retained counsel to defend Thompson and that he regarded the chauffeur as "a British subject," a victim of false arrest. As a matter of fact Thompson is said to be the son of a Toronto policeman. For years, however, he has lived in New York city.

District Attorney Conger of Dutchess county, New York, Deputy Attorney General Franklin Kennedy and others concerned in getting Stanford White's slayer back to Matteawan, are waiting developments, meantime exerting pressure on the Vermont authorities in anticipation of extradition proceedings in that state.

Thaw was very petulant today, particularly so over Roger Thompson's declaration that he had been "framed" into the Mattewan plot. His cell is near Thompson's, but they have not tried to talk to each other.

Thaw is still without personal funds. His credit appears to be pretty good though, for imported cigars, candy, fruits and other luxuries are piled on his cot and table.

Should Thompson decide to "squeal" and give the inside of the Mattewan plot, District Attorney Conger will recommend that immunity from prosecution in New York be granted him. Such a confession would greatly strengthen New York state's case. It might be the basis of proving bribery of Matteawan attendants and on their indictment New York would have an admittedly extraditable offense on which to demand Thaw's release from Vermont.

Attempt at Rescue Feared.

SHERBROOKE, Aug. 23.—[illegible] of a possible attempt to "rescue" Harry Thaw from the prison [illegible] Gouin, premier of the province, telegraphed to [illegible] Aylmer asking that official to give his opinion as to whether the ordinary staff at the prison was protection enough against a [illegible]."

The sheriff telegraphed the premier that he had no fears on this score, although he thought an [illegible] would be useful to [illegible] the prison or to court. The [illegible] that the [illegible] only serve to [illegible] [illegible] that [illegible] were needed at the jail.

[illegible]

Harry K. Thaw's [illegible] lawyers, nearly all of whom were retained by telegraph, found themselves today confronting these questions: First, who was in charge of his case? Second, [illegible] were they to receive their fees? [illegible] with [illegible] in the superior court on Wednesday next in a writ of habeas corpus?

When Mr. and Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie arrived here Wednesday night after Thaw's arrest at Coaticook, as a fugitive from Matteawan, it was understood they would take charge of his case and from them counsel would receive instructions as to the desires of the Thaw family.

Thaw at that time had been warned by relatives in lengthy messages not to insist on personal instructions to counsel and it was understood that his lawyers were to ignore him in their efforts to thwart his deportation into the state of New York. But when Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie left Sherbrooke Thaw [illegible] his old tactics and his eight lawyers were in a quandary today as to who was chief counsel. Outwardly J. N. Greenshields of Montreal had precedence among the group of those fighting in Thaw's behalf, but he had nothing in writing to indicate this and with Thaw's growing tendency to take matters in his own hands, the lawyers were puzzled as to the outcome.

No Money in Sight.

Thaw money, reported to be surging toward Sherbrooke, had not arrived today and the Thaw lawyers were endeavoring to obtain a statement from some one identified with the Thaw interests as to just who was responsible for any expenses incurred.

"We are falling over ourselves," said one of the lawyers.

"Eight men cannot handle one man's case without a definite agreement as to who is the boss. Thaw would like to conduct matters himself but because of telegrams from his relatives we do not feel justified in acceding to his demands. On the other hand there is no representative of the family here on whom we can rely. So far as we know Thaw will be released on the present commitment when arraigned next Wednesday and then turned over to the immigration authorities. They will deport him to Vermont, we have been led to believe, or New Hampshire. While we understand that the New York state officials here have tried 'to grease the ways of extradition' in both of these states, we are willing to put up a fight and trust to fair play."

Thaw, when asked this morning if his counsel did not know "who was who" among them, grinned and replied:

"I understand we have hired the best in the Dominion. It's up to them."

Jerome Off for Canada.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 23.—William Travers Jerome, appointed a special deputy attorney general to look after the Thaw extradition case, has been instructed to proceed at once to Canada in this connection. He will reach Sherbrooke tomorrow. This announcement came this morning from the office of the attorney general.

It caused considerable comment for the reason that when the announcement was made yesterday of Mr. Jerome's appointment as deputy, it was indicated specifically that his particular duties would be in the line of inducing which Thaw might be deported to turn him over to the New York authorities. At that time the attorney general seemed to be sure that Thaw would be returned to Vermont immediately after the disposal of the habeas corpus proceedings set for next Wednesday.

John Mack, who has been at Sherbrooke for the state authorities, came back to Albany this morning and had a long interview with the attorney general. The announcement that Mr. Jerome would go to Canada followed.

The state authorities now admit that a long delay may ensue before they can secure Thaw's return to this country.

Proposed Changes.

That there be established one central reserve bank under the new currency and banking plan [illegible] of 12, and if this is found inexpedient, then the number should not exceed five with as many branches as may be required in all parts of the country.

That membership in the federal reserve banks be made voluntary, instead of compulsory on the part of national banks, the same as provided in the case of state banks.

That the amount of the subscription to the capital stock of the federal reserve banks be reduced from 20 to 10 per cent of the capitalization of the bank applying for membership.

That in order to remove the control of the federal reserve banks from political influence, direction of the institution be invested in a board of seven members composed of the secretary of the treasury, as an ex-officio member, three members to be appointed by the president of the United States who shall give due regard to geographical territory of the country, and three members to be selected by the member banks. The terms of office are fixed at three, six and nine years at the beginning, and nine years for all members after the first term. The salary is fixed at $10,000 a year with an allowance for necessary traveling expenses.

That three of the directors of regional banks shall be experienced in banking and live in the district.

Elect Own Officers.

That the directors of the regional banks be authorized to elect their own officers who with the federal agent designated by the federal reserve board, shall manage the institution.

That the appointee of the federal reserve board shall not act as chairman of the board of directors of regional banks, but shall transact the duties of a government representative.

That the advisory board of the federal reserve bank be abolished, as under the plan proposed the bank members would have representation on the regular board of reserve banks.

That the authority of the federal reserve board to compel one member bank to rediscount paper of another member bank be made optional instead of mandatory.

That the cumulative dividends allowed member banks out of the earnings on their shares in the federal reserve bank be increased from 5 to 6 per cent.

That state banks accepting membership in federal reserve banks be required to adopt the word "national" in their corporate names.

That all government moneys be deposited in federal reserve banks except the 5 per cent redemption fund of outstanding national bank notes.

Reserve Reduction.

That federal reserve banks be prohibited from rediscounting paper drawn for carrying of securities other than stocks and bonds.

That the country banks required reserve be reduced from 15 to 12 per cent and that not less than 4 per cent be kept in the bank vault, not less than 4 per cent deposited with the federal reserve bank, and the remainder with the correspondent.

That the reserve city banks required reserve be fixed at 15 per cent instead of 20 and 25 per cent as by the former variable scale. Of this, 6 per cent is to remain in the vault, 6 per cent in a federal reserve bank, and 3 per cent with the correspondent in a central reserve bank.

That the central reserve city banks' reserve, which varied from 20 to 25 per cent, be fixed at 20 per cent, 10 per cent in the vault and 10 per cent in the federal reserve bank.

That the time limit on farm loans be extended from nine to 12 months.

That the entire section of the bill relating to savings banks be stricken out.

That the federal reserve banks issue the necessary currency bank notes under the control of the comptroller of the currency instead of having treasury notes issued by the government [illegible] protection of the government's [illegible] in time of war or other emergency.

DR. HYDE MUST STAND TRIAL FOR FOURTH TIME

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 23.—Dr. B. Clark Hyde must face a jury for the fourth time on the charge of murdering Colonel Thomas H. Swope, millionaire philanthropist of this city. This was decided today, when the county court notified Floyd E. Jacobs, prosecuting attorney, that the county would supply the money necessary to pay the expenses of the prosecution. Prosecutor Jacobs recently notified the court that unless the county furnished the necessary funds the state would have to abandon the case against the physician.

The next trial is set for September 8, but postponement will be asked to the winter term of court.

MERGER OF COMMERCIAL ORGANIZATIONS WOULD BENEFIT COLORADO, SAYS FLEMING

Westerners Should Combine Forces for Own Protection and Development of Country

"The business interests of Colorado should take the lead in effecting a merger of the various western commercial organizations, including the National Irrigation congress, the Trans-Mississippi Commercial congress, and other bodies of business men representing the mining, livestock, and farming industries," declared Col. Fred W. Fleming of Kansas City, at the Antlers hotel yesterday.

Col. Fleming has been prominently identified with the irrigation movement from its beginning, and for several years was vice president of the National Irrigation congress. He succeeded the late Thomas F. Walsh of Colorado, as president of the Trans-Mississippi Commercial congress, and presided at the memorable Kansas City session of the congress in 1906, at which some of the foremost men in the business life of America were present and delivered addresses. The list included Secretary of State Elihu Root, E. H. Harriman, Secretary of the Treasury Leslie M. Shaw, Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island, W. J. Bryan, George M. Reynolds of Chicago, Darwin P. Kingsley of New York, and a score of senators and representatives in congress. Col. Fleming is vice president of the Kansas City Life Insurance company, and in looking after his company's investments in the west has become familiar with local conditions in every section of the western country.

Would Unite Western Forces.

"The suggestion that better results can be obtained by a union of western forces must not be understood as disparaging the highly useful work of the Irrigation and Trans-Mississippi congresses during the last 20 years," said Col. Fleming. "Both organizations have contributed largely to the general progress and development of the states lying west of the Mississippi river. The reclamation act, creating the department of commerce and labor, the National Bankruptcy law, the federal regulation of railways, improvement of [illegible] harbor, successful expositions at Omaha, St. Louis, Portland, [illegible] appropriations for the improvement of navigable [illegible] in the [illegible] Mississippi states—all projects of national importance, were first advocated by these two western organizations.

"But in unity there is strength, and this truism applies with peculiar force to western affairs, because of the relatively small representation of this section in the federal congress. If there was a strong and representative organization of the commercial interests of the states, cities and towns between the great river and the Pacific ocean, it could exercise a potential influence in protecting western interests and fostering western development. Separate congresses representing single industries are, for obvious reasons, somewhat handicapped in their efforts, but if all these western organizations were united in one harmonious body representing the crystallized sentiment of the west, this section, through its efforts, would receive more just consideration when tariff schedules were being framed at Washington, and also in securing appropriations of money from the federal treasury. The appeal of the live stock men for fair treatment when the Payne-Aldrich bill was passed fell on deaf ears, and the beet sugar industry is receiving about the same lack of consideration at the present time.

Needs Wisdom of Westerners.

"The problem of conserving our natural resources needs the practical wisdom of western men for its proper solution. The completion of the Isthmian canal renders the improvement of harbors on the Pacific and Gulf coast, and the development of the navigable waterways of the west, questions of primary importance. The great value of irrigation for farming purposes in the [illegible] states has been fully demonstrated, and the approved irrigation projects by government engineers should be completed at the earliest practicable date. If necessary, the reclamation fund should be supplemented by a loan of government credit in order that the [illegible] may be placed upon the [illegible]."

The trans-Mississippi region of country, including nearly two-thirds of the national area, [illegible] but two representatives in the cabinet, and during [illegible] has been [illegible] by the [illegible] ber. [illegible]

The business men of Colorado have [illegible] with all of [illegible] for [illegible] and the state should take the lead in [illegible] all the western [illegible] into one compact and representative organization. Every business interest in the west would be promoted and [illegible] by this plan. There is no necessity for maintaining several western congresses, when the worthy objects each are striving to attain can be more readily accomplished by a union of forces."

STOMACH SUFFERERS

Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy Is Recommended and Praised by Thousands Who Have Been Restored

"I was a sick man for about three months caused from Gall Stones of the Liver and was told by three of our most prominent physicians—that I would have to submit to an operation to get relief, but heard of your Wonderful Stomach Remedy and secured a full treatment and took it according to directions and passed hundreds of Gall Stones. Since taking your medicine I work regularly and don't feel any ill effects. I am praising your Remedy to all my friends. I think it's worthy of the highest praise. B. T. DOOLEY, Roanoke, Va."

Sufferers of Stomach, Liver and Intestinal Ailments are not asked to take Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy for weeks and months before they feel benefited. Just try one dose, which should make you feel better in health, convince you that you will soon be well and strong, free you from pain and suffering and give you a sound and healthy Stomach, as it has done in thousands of other cases. Wherever it is taken you will hear nothing but the highest praise. Go to your druggist—ask him about the great results it has been accomplishing in cases of people he knows or send to Geo. H. Mayr, Mfg. Chemist, 154-156 Whiting St., Chicago, Ill., for a free book on Stomach Ailments and many grateful letters from people who have been restored.

FANCY AND FACT

From the Christian Science Sentinel.

Almost immediately after news came of the recent floods in Ohio and Indiana, and of the needs of those who were plunged thus into the depths of wreck and ruin, there appeared in many newspapers throughout the country editorials, which were based upon prepared editorials sent out in bulletin form from the headquarters of the American Medical association, as a part of the campaign of that organization to secure the establishment of a federal department of health with a representative of the American Medical association as a member of the president's cabinet. One of these editorials was as follows:

"In the piping times of peace a large number of the public turn from the educated physician to the faith curers, faith healers, and kindred charlatans. The latter are [illegible] over the land, when accidents, floods, earthquakes and like catastrophes demand urgent, scientific, skillful action. We are reminded of this singular but obvious fact by a recent able editorial of the Journal of the American Medical Association. When the call goes forth for medical service to minister to the sick, the wounded and the dying, the plodding doctor leaves his own work and rushes into the fray. He toils day and night without receiving or expecting compensation, in behalf of suffering humanity. Has there ever occurred a calamity in which this fact has not been demonstrated?"

At such times, says the Journal, what becomes of the cults that are constantly trying to usurp the place of the scientific medical men and undermine the confidence of the public? They sink into obscurity. When the emergency arises, what have they to offer? There has appeared no dispatch announcing that "a special train containing a hundred osteopaths is on the way to Dayton. All the sufferers will receive spinal adjustments." Nor did any announcement appear, after the western cyclone that "Senator Works has arranged for a special train containing a hundred Christian Science healers to be sent to Omaha, where all persons injured in the cyclone and blizzard will receive mental treatment." Such items would be greeted with laughter. When lives are in danger, when death rides in the wind and on the waters, the people want the men of scientific training and experience, cool judgment and steady nerves, who can carry to them all the aid that the human intellect in the centuries of struggle has discovered. The faddists are like the "summer soldier and sunshine patriot" of Thomas Paine. Their conquests are wrought in gorgeous office or marble temple over maladies that spring from peace and plenty; "nervous prosperity" is the prolific source of their emoluments. The gentle ministers to the mind diseased have their proper place in the scheme of life; they [illegible] in the days of danger and disaster, in fire, flood or battle, [illegible]

[illegible] what are the facts? [illegible] of the papers in which they appeared [illegible] showing that Christian Scientists, through their [illegible] given [illegible] of money to the funds of the Red Cross society for the relief of the stricken people. An inspection of the published lists of contributors to these funds will show that the amounts thus given by Christian Scientists were [illegible] and must have reached in the aggregate [illegible]. Such prompt and generous action on the part of the Christian Science churches should be sufficient proof that they are not in the "summer soldier and sunshine patriot" class, and the following correspondence will show that not even this was the extent of their benefactions, for in addition to contributing, as above stated, to the Red Cross fund for the benefit of all who were in need, the Christian Scientists rendered further assistance to this fund by taking care of their own people.

Christian Science Flood Relief Committee, 310 Hayden Building.
Columbus, O., May 7, 1913.
To His Excellency Hon. James M. Cox,
Governor of Ohio:

Sir: Assuming you would welcome information pertaining thereto, the Christian Science flood relief committee wishes to report briefly its activities in collecting and distributing funds for relief in Ohio and Indiana.

This committee was organized April 7 and a letter sent to every Christian Science church in the United States. Response was prompt and generous. During the month over $50,000 has been received. Conditions in many places have been personally investigated by the committee, and funds are being distributed through local representatives to whom the following amounts have been sent thus far: Dayton, O., $10,000; Indiana points, $7,500; Hamilton, O., $5,500; Columbus, O., $4,000; Marietta, O., $1,600; other points, $1,700; a total of $30,300. The rest of the funds will be distributed shortly. The cost of administering this fund is less than one half of one per cent, and is placing those assisted in a position to reestablish themselves without further aid from other relief organizations.

Many of our churches had sent large contributions through other channels before this committee was organized, hence such letters as the accompanying copy, which is typical of many received.

Assuring you of our best wishes, we are,
Yours respectfully,
THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE FLOOD RELIEF COMMITTEE.
By W. H. Howard, Sec.

State of Ohio, Executive Department,
Columbus, May 8, 1913.

My Dear Mr. Howard:—I have your communication of May 7, relative to the Christian Science relief fund which your committee has raised and disbursed. This work upon the part of your committee, and the fund received by it, should be a source of pride to Christian Scientists everywhere.

Permit me, in the name of the people of the state, to extend to you, and through you to the Christian Scientists, the sincerest thanks for this generous aid in the time of distress.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) JAMES M. COX.

Mr. W. H. Howard, secretary Christian Science Flood Relief committee, 310 Hayden Bldg., Columbus, O.

It is not the custom of Christian Scientists to parade their benefactions, and nothing would have been said in this instance had it not been necessary to state the facts in order to correct whatever misapprehension may have arisen from the [illegible] editorial's [illegible] as to their attitude in [illegible] than "the piping times of peace," though it would seem that previous [illegible] for help [illegible] would have removed any doubt on this point once and for all.

The rolling stock of the Italian state railways at the close of the fiscal year 1912 included [illegible] steam locomotives, 56 electric locomotives, 10,027 passenger cars, [illegible] cars, 3,471 baggage and [illegible] cars and 2,386 work and repair cars.

Wilbur's

Display Week Fall 1913

August 25-30, Inclusive

Colorado Springs women, justly credited with being (as a class) better dressed than the women of almost any other section of the country, are always anxious to know "what Wilbur's are showing," and this event offers the best opportunity. The things this season are by far the handsomest shown in years, the models being decidedly becoming to 99 out of 100 women, and the color schemes harmonious and highly artistic. Our collection of high art gowns, costumes, wraps, suits, waists and millinery this season embraces models and copies of models from the greatest designers in the world, including Cheriut, Doucet, Liette, Drecoll, Towlimon, Callot, Premet, Rondeau, Arnold and others of equal renown, and embraces a variety and assortment seldom found in cities of 10 times the size of Colorado Springs. Our showing of popular-priced wearing apparel includes the best things produced by New York specialists in this class of garments, and our immense purchases command the lowest wholesale prices and consequently the best values to our patrons.

Advance Showing and Sale of Furs takes place this week, during which time patrons may select from $20,000.00 worth of strictly reliable fur garments, and pieces, with a straight reduction of 10 per cent from regular prices. Early contracts on our part enable us to offer our patrons the advantage of this discount.

Wilbur Millinery with the exception of the space occupied by our popular sanitary beauty parlors, our entire second floor is devoted to the showing of this great stock of hats. The display for fall is fully up to the standard maintained in other branches of our business. Hundreds of exclusive models from famous designers in London, Paris, Vienna and New York are included in this showing, so that wearers of Wilbur hats are assured of the cream of the hat markets of the world.

A leisurely inspection of the various stocks is cordially requested, with the assurance that those who come are under no obligation to purchase.

Tuesday Evening Miss Gessing and Miss Sutherland of Denver will give a living model demonstration in our show windows. The program for this event will be announced in the daily papers of a later date.

ANTS THAT BAKE BISCUITS

From the New York Independent

The extraordinary habits of the harvester ant have long been known to naturalists. Certain species not only harvest and store in granaries the seeds upon which they feed, but actually plant and cultivate an annual crop of their food seeds.

Still more remarkable stories are told of an ant that is common in Dalmatia, the Messor barbarus. According to Dr. Neger of the Dresden Forestry school, this ant not only cuts leaves and gathers seeds, but actually makes bread or biscuit! The seeds are first sprouted, then carried into the sun and dried, then taken back to the underground chambers, where they are chewed into a dough. The dough is then finally made into tiny cakes, which are baked in the sun, then carefully stored for future use.

From these observations it would appear that the art of cookery is not confined to the human race. All cooking is done by the sun, whether in the ripening of fruit or in the baking of bread in a stove. The heat obtained from fuel is simply stored up sunlight set free.

The Arab and the native Mexican speak of ripe fruit as fruit which has been cooked in the sun. The ant has somehow learned the art of sun cookery, the saliva with which it moistens the grain probably taking the place of yeast and sweetening through changes set up by its influence upon starch.

There were 30,089 applications for patents in the United Kingdom last year, as compared with 29,353 the previous year.

PIRATES HIT HARD; BEAT PHILS TWICE

Dooin Uses Four Twirlers Each Game; Pittsburg Pitchers Knocked Out of Box

Giants Trim Cubs; Superbas Roll Tinkers and Cards Lose to Braves

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—Pittsburg's hard-hitting caused two defeats for Philadelphia here today by 10 to 6 and 13 to 8. In each game the home team knocked the opposing pitchers off the rubber in an early inning, but the visitors quickly rallied at the bat and caused Manager Dooin to use four twirlers in each contest.

In the first game, Alexander's right hand was hurt by a drive off Gibson's bat in the second inning. McQuillan was knocked out of the box in the third inning and his successor, Hendrix, did excellent work. Seaton and Marshall were retired in the fifth inning, when Pittsburg won the game by piling up nine runs on nine hits and a sacrifice fly. Cooper lasted only one inning in the second game, during which Philadephia piled up four runs on three singles, two doubles and two [illegible].

Luhrsen, formerly of Albany, Ga., held Philadelphia down, while Pittsburg amassed several hits and runs at the expense of Brennan, Seaton and Imlay, Rixey finally checking them.

Gibson was hurt on the [illegible] by a pitched ball in the opening engagement. Byrne, who figured in the trade in which Camnitz comes to Philadelphia for Dolan and a sum of money, did excellent work at bat. BAUMGARDNER BLOWS UP; WASHINGTON WINS

After Eight Hard-Fought Innings Browns' Twirler Drops Contest

Tigers and Yanks Break Even; Athletics Lose to Sox; Champs Trim Naps

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 23.—For eight innings Baumgardner and Engel engaged in a pretty pitching duel, but in the ninth the former blew up and his support cracked, Washington scoring three runs, winning its final game of the season on the local grounds, 4 to 2. Hughes took Engel's place in the ninth and held St. Louis safe.

In the final round, Gandil, Morgan and Schaefer singled in succession, filling the bases. McBride forced Gandil at the plate, but when Agnew's throw hit McBride, Morgan scored. A. Williams batted for Engel and singled, scoring Schaefer. Pratt then fumbled Moeller's roller and McBride crossed the plate.

Moeller's homerun drive into the right field seats in the first inning started the scoring. St. Louis evened it up in its half when Shotton and Austin singled and the former scored on Pratt's hit into a double play. In their half of the eighth inning the locals tallied a run on a pass, a sacrifice and Shotton's one-base drive to center.

Moeller and Shotton featured with the bat, and the latter fielded in sensational fashion, a couple of his catches cutting off extra base hits.

BOSTON, 4; CLEVELAND, 3.

CLEVELAND, Aug. Aug. 23.—Boston made it three straight from Cleveland today, winning by a score of 4 to 3. A lead established in the first inning through consecutive hitting off Blanding, and the latter's poor support, was never overcome by Cleveland; Cullop relieved Blanding in the second inning and pitched fine ball.

Hooper, Engle, Speaker, Lewis and Gardner, the first five Boston players to face Blanding in the first inning, singled in order. Hooper, Engle and Speaker scored.

Boston's final run came in the fifth inning. Lewis singled, Gardner sacrificed. Yerkes scored Lewis with a double.

RIBBONS FOR LANGUGE

In Budapest you see walking about the city, waiting at the railway stations and driving in carriages, many Hungarian women wearing ribbons of various colors. Some have two or three ribbons, others have four, five or six. One woman had nine ribbons. That meant that she spoke or at least understood nine languages, each color representing one language.

Bright red represents English, a heliotrope or lavender is German, a brilliant yellow means French, a pale blue is Italian, a brown means Danish, Dutch is a nile green, and so on throughout all the colors and most nations of the earth. The great majority of the women who act as guides and interpreters wear at least three colors.

PORTER CHARLTON, AS HE BOARDED THE LINER FOR ITALY

KITCHENS IN OLDEN TIMES

From Harper's Weekly.

The kitchens of olden times seem to have been of extraordinary size, judging from the investigations recently made by an English historical society. At Hurstmonceux, for example, there was a kitchen 28 feet high, with two huge fireplaces, and a bakehouse with an oven 14 feet in diameter.

There is an old Welsh kitchen near Llangollen, dating from the Fifteenth century, which has many primitive culinary contrivances, now obsolete or superseded by modern devices. Among these curious old devices may be mentioned a meatjack with a fly wheel, a steel toasting stand, and a fan bellows.

At Battle Abbey there is a curious old kitchen containing much of interest to the antiquary, and a kitchen at St. Mary's hall, Coventry, is remarkable for the famous "knaves' post," to which, it appears, refractory scullions were temporarily attached by way of punishment.

There is a medieval kitchen at Westminster Abbey, although little remains by which to identify it aside from the cobble flooring, the buttery hatch, and an adjoining cellar. Hampton Court palace shows its "great kitchen," with vaulted roof and sets of antlers on its walls.

Englishmen of other days fully recognized the advantages of a large kitchen. There is extant an order dated [illegible] wherein Hugh de Nevill is commanded to have the king's kitchens at Clarendon roofed with shingles, and to cause two new kitchens to be erected, one at Marlborough and the other at [illegible], in which [illegible] It is stated that [illegible] large [illegible] two or three oxen.

The SALE AT The

WHITAKER-KESTER SHOE CO.

10 NORTH TEJON SREET

Thousands of dollars worth of new Footwear that we couldn't countermand Fall styles received since the sale began, must be disposed of if the business is to be liquidated.

And so checking up these new goods—and finding place for them in stock—has kept us busy until midnight—because waiting upon trade was all we could possibly do during business hours.

High Shoes chiefly, these new arrivals—and they will be sold at 10% off, 15% off, 20% off, 25% off—and goodness knows that's bad enough.

But the Low Shoes are what we would like to sell—now—before the Summer Season ends—the High Shoes will go a little later on and go quickly, too, at the reductions which mean a saving of from 50c to $1.00 a pair.

Fresh Price Cutting On LOW SHOES

Our First Semi-Annual Price Carnival

Will Open Tomorrow Morning for a Continuous Performance for 11 Business Days.

In inaugurating this, our first semi-annual bargain event, we have selected a time when we can abuse the special price privilege most disgracefully, at a time when the occasion for giving it is a dire necessity. We shall call it, and properly so, and we are determined to make it true to name. It will be a festival of bargains, a riotous revelry in price cutting such as must outdo any other sale we expect to stage between time. In plain English: It's going to be a crackerjack.

OUR PRICE CARNIVAL

The Reason for This Sale

When giving a sale there must always be a reason, and the same reason must be properly explained. Those with a little ingenuity have no serious difficulty in framing up something that will pass muster and which sounds good and sufficient for the "evil thereof," yet far from being the real reason. Still, what's the odds you don't care as long as the reason given "justifies the deed."

Our reason for giving this sale, of course, Is the Real Thing, at least we shall endeavor to make you believe it is; anyway, you will when you see our disfigured prices. AUGUST AND FEBRUARY is when we shall pull off these price cutting stunts, and we leave it to you whether or not those months are not most applicable for this purpose.

It's at this time of the year, usually, when the elements indicate a change soon to be expected. At this time there are always more or less goods on hand that are not improved by carrying over—just the kind for your present needs, maybe, and our willingness to sacrifice on them makes them no less valuable to you. You may say, and say truly, that any old store makes price concessions. We are not an old store, to begin with, and there is just as great a difference in a clearance sale as there is in ordinary selling, yes more. It takes Nerve to make prices, especially when it's necessary to—adjust, and that is the real reason why so much old goods are carried over. We lack [illegible] to make prices low enough.

OUR CIRCULAR

We have prepared a double page circular which has been distributed among you, which gives you a more exhaustive [illegible] regarding our sale and which we hope you received. If by an oversight of the distributor he failed to serve you with one, we would suggest an excellent substitute—your attending our sale.

Wash Suits and Dresses Purchased for the Sale Especially 125 splendid Wash Dresses and Palm Beach Suits. Material pure linen, pique and other popular fabrics offered us at a very low price, of course. We were short—telegraph and express brought them here. They are new, fresh and very attractive—just what you want to wear for at least two months longer.

Price is the cardinal feature—we offer choice of most at $2.98.

VALUABLE COUPON

During our Semi-Annual Bargain Event, "OUR PRICE CARNIVAL."

There will be the greatest confusion of extraordinary bargains on all Summer Goods rarely ever offered the shoppers of Colorado Springs.

We are extremely anxious to make it of real benefit to you. Some of you may not want to purchase more summer goods, however alluring in price. Therefore, the coupon found below when brought to our store will enable you to buy all goods not "relatives of the summer tribes," such goods not having the brand of sacrifice—at 80c on the dollar—including all fall goods already installed, certain staples and notions and any other kind of goods, excluded from carnage.

COUPON

THIS COUPON, when brought to our store, will entitle holder to a special discount on all goods sold at regular prices of

purchased during our Price Carnival ending on SATURDAY, SEPT. 6th, 1913.

The P. L. Thorsen Stores Company
111 SOUTH TEJON STREET

This Price Carnival

Is not just absolutely created for the sole purpose of clearing up Summer goods.

While that may be the primary motive, we are not going to exclude anything of the staple order nor goods already installed for Fall selling. Not so. We want to stimulate the advance selling of Fall Goods and you are particularly invited to take advantage of our special offer found elsewhere in this circular.

Our Secondary Motive

for wishing to give this Semi Annual Sale and making it so unusually attractive, is: FIRSTLY, as a reward and appreciation to the customers already enrolled under our banner; SECONDLY, as an allurement to new blood, new shoppers, new customers—a deliberate snare to "Lead you into temptation," as it were—trying to make you stray from the straight and narrow path—a path leading to your own old store only—want you—to branch out a little and see what pleasure in shopping is in store for you here.

What do you say? We sure will be laying for you later if we do not succeed in getting you this time.

Monument Marking Place of Massacre to Be Placed Sept. 3

September 3, 1868, a band of Arapahoe Indians descended upon Colorado Springs, killed and scalped three boys, sons of pioneer settlers in the Pikes Peak region, and returned to their home in the mountains, never to return again.

September 3, 1913—exactly 45 years later a monument commemorating this, the last Indian massacre in the Pikes Peak region, will be unveiled by Edgar Howbert for the El Paso County Pioneer association.

The placing of the monument, an immense boulder brought down from the mountains and bearing a copper tablet setting forth the purpose of the marker, is a part of the work which the Pioneer association has undertaken to do—that is, to mark all points of historic interest; the unveiling of the stone will be the Pioneer association's contribution to the success of the Shan Kive.

On that eventful day in the fall of 1868, Charles Everhart, a boy of 17, was riding across the prairie where Colorado Springs now stands. Suddenly a band of Indians swooped down upon him and, before he could so much as start to flee, he was shot from his horse. So far as can be determined, he fell on a spot now occupied by the small triangular park between Cascade and Platte Avenues and Boulder crescent.

After scalping Everhart, the Indians started south, and, near Mt. Washington, just south of Colorado Springs, found and killed George and Franklin Robbins, aged 11 and 8, respectively, and cousins of the late B. G. Robbins. The massacre was seen by Edgar Howbert, then a small boy, from his father's ranch, near the Portland mill.

The monument marking the massacre has been erected in the small city park on North Cascade avenue, and will be unveiled at 2:30 o'clock on the afternoon of September 3. The [illegible] exercises will be in charge of the El Paso County [illegible]. Mrs. [illegible] Wells Price, president of the [illegible], will preside and introduce the speakers. David [illegible], the bailiff who carried the bodies of the boys into the settlement, will make the principal address, and William [illegible], the first white child born in [illegible], Colo., will [illegible] [illegible] a daughter of [illegible] Frank [illegible], the only [illegible] who [illegible] [illegible] for [illegible] the United States govern[illegible] [illegible] will tell how [illegible]

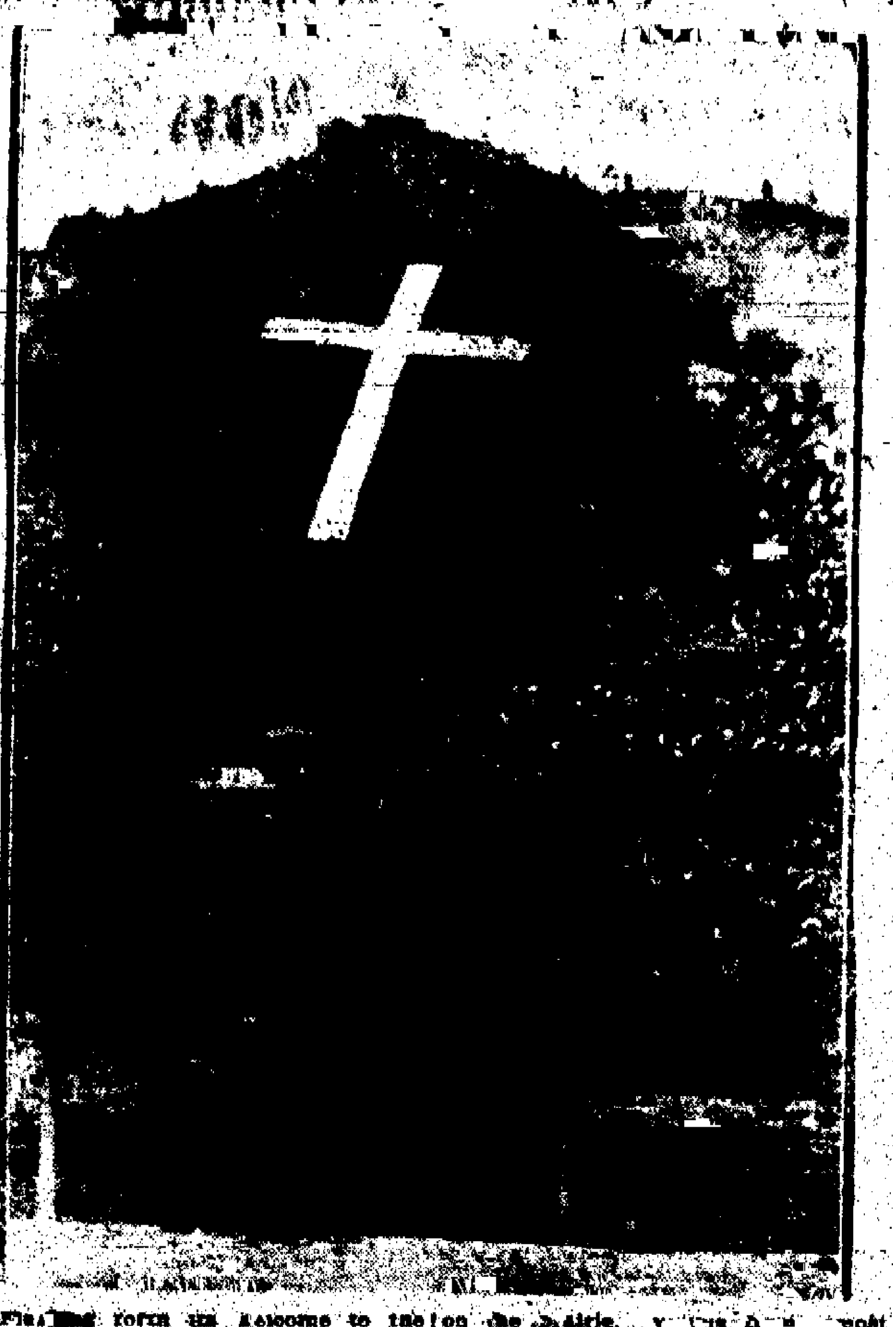
CROSS ON MOUNT GUIDED TEMPLARS



Flashing forth its welcome to the hundreds of Knights Templar who visited the [illegible] region after the recent Denver conclave was an immense white cross, 450 feet long and 300 feet broad, erected high on the side of Red mountain, [illegible] Manitou.

The cross, which was constructed and placed on the mountain by the citizens of Manitou, was plainly visible to the [illegible] Colorado Springs while [illegible] out on the prairie. [illegible] part of the Pikes Peak region, the big white cross attracted perhaps more attention than any other decorative scheme ever tried here.

Hundreds of yards of material were used in the construction of the cross and it required several weeks to erect the [illegible] decoration on the side of the mountain. In addition to the cross, the citizens of Manitou decorated the town in the [illegible] colors.

STAGE IS SET FOR GREAT SHAN KIVE; ACTORS AWAIT THE CARNIVAL'S CALL

Preliminary Plans Have Been Completed and Committees Announce Program

[illegible] Shan Kive [illegible]. All day yesterday, [illegible] by the [illegible], were at [illegible] preparing the track and grounds west of Adams Crossing. Monday morning workmen employed by the Master Plumbers association of the city will begin the work of laying 1,000 feet of pipe that will be necessary to supply water to the circus, the Indian and cowboy camps.

Manager Dostal has a force of men at work stringing the grounds with wire. It is expected to try out the lights next Saturday evening. The Electric company has not only made a handsome subscription to the Shan Kive, but is doing a great deal of work to boost it.

The Out West Tent & Awning company has made a handsome donation to the carnival in the way of decoration of the [illegible] entrance, which will be erected at the grounds. The company also has provided numerous tents that will be used in housing the cowboys and others.

Nickerson and Bristow, architects, have laid out the Shan Kive grounds in an artistic manner, so arranged that there will be ample opportunity for placing all the shows, parking automobiles, and yet leave a highway clear through the Garden of the Gods.

Buffalo Bill May Attend.

Colonel William F. Cody, the famous Buffalo Bill, has wired the committee that he may not be able to attend as he has an engagement in the east next week, but it is possible that the plans may be changed, and if so, he will come to the gathering of cowboys, Indians and pioneers, as he is probably the most celebrated pioneer of the west living.

The work of organizing the great parades during Shan Kive week is going on very successfully. Charles B. Ferrin, manager of the Out West Printing company, has consented to take charge of the Shan Kive parade Tuesday morning, September 2. Mr. Ferrin was a former chief of the volunteer fire department and is experienced in handling organizations of men. He is now working on some novel features for the parade. He has asked Dr. Paul Dennex, a member of a pioneer family, to take charge of the pioneer division of the parade.

Tod Powell, who will be in charge of the Indians during their visit, will marshal the Indian division, and Chief Burno, head of the cowboy committee, will handle that division. The Roman circus people will handle their own division. Andy Adams, famous cowboy author, is to be the marshal of the day and ride at the head of the parade. The various officials of the parade will announce their aides some time during the week, and Mr. Ferrin hopes to have it organized so thoroughly that he will be able to organize the line of march and all details by the end of the week.

Carl Blackman, in charge of the night automobile parade, Wednesday, also is working out the details. Police Commissioner Johnson and Chief McCurtin of the fire department have given their consent to the fire department participating in this parade. All of the apparatus will be brilliantly illuminated with electric lights and red fire. The Indians will be placed on floats, as will the various bands, to participate in this parade.

Many Visitors Expected.

It is hoped that a large delegation from Pueblo will come that day in au[illegible] and [illegible] the Colorado Springs [illegible] as they [illegible] by the grandstand. It is not the intention to decorate the autos chiefly with flowers at the [illegible] but that they shall merely be driven along in the parade and past the grandstand. The occupants may carry sparklers or red fire or anything of that kind to attract the attention of their friends along the route.

Director Joseph [illegible] of the Y. M. C. A. athletic department has agreed to stage a performance before the grandstand on Kiowa street Wednesday night immediately following the parade. He has a company of Zouaves hard at work and hopes to break the world's record for scaling an 12-foot wall, which they now hold. He has some husky new young fellows in training. The Y. M. C. A. performance will last about 40 minutes and will be followed by the cowboy quadrille on horseback on Nevada avenue. Following this will come the cowboy dance in the Temple theater.

The committee has sold the confetti, popcorn and various other privileges at the Shan Kive grounds. It is still looking for bids for various privileges, such as refreshment booth, soft drinks, etc. These will be sold combined or separately according to the best offers. As the committee expects to have from 5,000 to 15,000 people a day on the grounds for at least three days, the sale of ice cream cones, frankfurters and such things should be large. It is a proposition for some competent catering company to figure on.

Altogether the arrangements for the Shan Kive seem to be in excellent shape, and the complete program for the celebration was announced yesterday as follows:

Monday, September 1.

Morning—Labor day parade, headed by Midland band.

3:00 p. m.—Denver News Marathon, starting at Shan Kive grounds, Adams crossing, Garden of the Gods, Colorado City and Colorado Springs, across through the Mesa and through the Gateway to the place of beginning. Opening of the Roman circus.

7:30 p. m.—Grand illumination Shan Kive grounds; Indian dances on platform at Indian village; Roman circus performance and opening of the Trail.

Tuesday, September 2.

10:30 a. m.—Annual Shan Kive parade of pioneers, Indians cowboys, Roman circus and spectacular features, led by Midland and Post Boys bands.

1:30 p. m.—Frontier sports at Shan Kive arena in the Garden of the Gods, including bucking broncho contest for $350 saddle.

7:30 p. m.—Second grand illumination at Shan Kive park; Indian dances, Roman circus performance; music by three bands.

Wednesday, September 3.

1:30 p. m.—Shan Kive attractions at park.

3:00 p. m.—Dedication of monument on Cascade avenue to memory of white people killed in massacre by Arapahoe Indians on that spot, September 3, 1868. Addresses by pioneers.

4:00 p. m.—Reception by El Paso County Pioneers association at county court house; music by Post Boys band.

7:30 p. m.—Illuminated parade of fire department and private automobiles through the streets of the city, passing in review before the grandstand on Kiowa street, automobiles and parade at Shan Kive grounds.

8:30 p. m.—Athletic performance by gymnasts of the Y. M. C. A. in arena on Kiowa street.

9:15 p. m.—Cowboy quadrille on horseback on Nevada avenue; cowboy dance at Temple theater. Music by Denver Post Boys band and Thursday, September 4.

Midland band.

1:30 p. m.—Final cowboy sports in the Garden of the Gods arena, riding off all contests; Indian dances. Music by three bands.

7:00 p. m.—Masquerade carnival in the streets of Colorado Springs; all masks off at 8:45.

INDIANA INTERURBAN TRAINMEN ON STRIKE

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 23.—A strike of interurban trainmen on the four systems entering Indianapolis, apparently not well organized, went into effect this morning on the refusal of the interurban companies to reply to the request of the new union's grievance committee for arbitration of the men's demands for a nine-hour day and higher wages. Police guarded every interurban car [illegible] sent out of the city. There was no indication, however, of any trouble.

BETTER THAN SPANKING

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W, South Bend, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her today if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night. Adv.

CENTENARY OF FAMOUS BATTLE IS OBSERVED

BERLIN, Aug. 23. Grossbeeren, a little village 12 miles south of Berlin, today celebrated the centenary of the battle of Grossberen which saved Berlin from French occupation and resulted in Napoleon's first defeat of the campaign which ended in the battle of the nations at Leipsic.

MISSIONARIES DENY BULGARIAN ATROCITIES

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The Rev. Lyle D. Woodruff, a missionary at the Philippopolis station of the American board of commissioners for foreign missions, arrived in London today with two English colleagues for the purpose of denying allegations that the Bulgarian troops had committed atrocities at Adrianople. The three missionaries were engaged in hospital work in Adrianople. They presented a statement of their experiences to the British foreign office today. The Rev. Mr. Woodruff is a native of Ohio.

To Stop Scaling of Psoriasis

This Troublesome Skin Disease Promptly Checked by a very Simple Attention.

A lady in Lexington, Ky., says that before she began using S. S. S. psoriasis broke out at frequent intervals where she thought it cured. But by getting her blood under control by the influence of S. S. S., the disease entirely disappeared and there was never again the slightest sign of it.

There is one ingredient in S. S. S. which peculiarly stimulates cellular or glandular activity to select from the blood or from the fine network of blood vessels in the skin, those elements which it requires for regeneration.

Thus pimples, acne, eczema, lupus, or any other blood condition that attacks the skin or seeks an outlet through the skin, is met with the antidotal effect of S. S. S.

This is why skin troubles vanish so readily and why they do not return.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. The great Swift Laboratory in Atlanta, Ga., prepares this famous blood purifier, and you should take no chance by permitting anyone to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address the Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Company, 182 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Diarrhoea Quickly Cured.

"I was taken with diarrhoea and Mr. Yorks, the merchant here, persuaded me to try a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. After taking one dose of it I was cured. It also cured others that I gave it to," writes M. E. Gebhart, Oriole, Pa. That is not at all unusual. An ordinary attack of diarrhoea can almost invariably be cured by one or two doses of this remedy. For sale by all dealers. Adv.

EAT A LOT? MAYBE YOU'RE A GENIUS

From the Chicago Tribune.

Men of genius are almost uniformly [illegible] eaters, says Dr. [illegible]. They require [illegible] good, wholesome food, for [illegible] and exhaustive intellectual work demands full nutrition to [illegible] the waste brain tissue.

Scott is said to have attributed his tremendous capacity to his power of digestion and the good wholesome restraints of appetite in his youth.

Most of the French leaders in war, politics and literature were men whose digestions were powerful and appetites enormous. Napoleon's capacity to eat was one [illegible] and Mirabeau's. German statesmen and poets seem to have had the same reputation, for Bismarck and Goethe were both of them noted for their insatiable desires for food.

ALASKA'S FLOATING COURT

From the New Orleans Picayune.

Not many people are aware that the United States has a floating court, which is used in Alaska, and which dispenses justice there. Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo has issued instructions to the commander of the revenue cutter Thetis to be prepared to report at Valdez July 12, to take aboard Judge Overfield of the federal district of Alaska, together with his court officials. The Thetis will touch at many ports, in which the court will hear and adjudicate both civil and criminal cases. Since the floating court was introduced statistics show that crime in the far northern possessions of the United States has materially decreased.

JAP-A-LAC FOR FLOORS, FURNITURE AND [illegible] WOODWORK

The Emporium

Our First Semi-Annual Price Carnival

Will Open Tomorrow Morning for a Continuous Performance for 11 Business Days.

In inaugurating this, our first semi-annual bargain event, we have selected a time when we can abuse the special price privilege most disgracefully, at a time when the occasion for giving it is a dire necessity We shall call it, and properly so,

OUR PRICE CARNIVAL

and we are determined to make it true to name. It will be a festival of bargains a riotous revelry in price cutting such as must outdo any other sale we expect to stage between time. In plain English: It's going to be a crackerjack.

The Reason for This Sale

When giving a sale there must always be a reason, and the same reason must be properly explained. Those with a little ingenuity have no serious difficulty in framing up something that will pass muster and which sounds good and sufficient for the "evil thereof," yet far from being the real reason. Still, what's the odds—you don't care as long as the reason given "justifies the deed."

Our reason for giving this sale, of course, Is the Real Thing, at least we shall endeavor to make you believe it is; anyway, you will when you see our disfigured prices. AUGUST AND FEBRUARY is when we shall pull off these price cutting stunts, and we leave it to you whether or not those months are not most applicable for this purpose.

It's at this time of the year, usually, when the elements indicate a change soon to be expected. At this time there are always more or less goods on hand that are not improved by carrying over—just the kind for your present needs, maybe and our wishing to sacrifice on them makes them no less valuable to you. You may say, and say truly, that any old store makes price concessions. We are not an old store, to begin with, and there is just as great a difference in a clearance sale as there is in ordinary selling, yes more. It takes Nerve to make prices, especially when it's necessary to cut cost, and that is the real reason why so much old goods are carried over. It's lack of nerve to make prices low enough.

OUR CIRCULAR

We have [illegible] a double-page circular which has been distributed among you, which gives you a more exhaustive idea regarding our sale and which we hope you received. If by an oversight of the distributor he failed to serve you with one, we would suggest an excellent substitute your attending our sale.

Wash Suits and Dresses
Purchased for the Sale Especially

125 splendid Wash Dresses and Balkan Suits. Material pure linen, pique and other popular fabrics offered us at a very low price, of course. We were short—telegraph and express brought them here. They are new, fresh and very attractive just what you want to wear for at least two months longer.

Price is the cardinal feature we offer choice of most at $2.93.

VALUABLE COUPON

During our Semi-Annual Bargain Event, "OUR PRICE CARNIVAL."

There will be the greatest confusion of extraordinary bargains on all Summer Goods rarely ever offered the shoppers of Colorado Springs.

We are extremely anxious to make it of real benefit to you. Some of you may not want to purchase more summer goods, however alluring in price. Therefore, the coupon found below when brought to our store will enable you to buy all goods not "relatives of the summer tribes," such goods not having the brand of sacrifice at 80c on the dollar including all fall goods already installed, certain staples and notions and any other kind of goods, excluded from carnage.

COUPON

THIS COUPON, when brought to our store, will entitle holder to a special discount on all goods sold at regular prices of

purchased during our Price Carnival ending on SATURDAY, SEPT. 6th, 1913.

The P. L. Thorsen Stores Company
111 SOUTH TEJON STREET

This Price Carnival

Is not just absolutely created for the sole purpose of clearing up Summer goods.

While that may be the primary motive, we are not going to exclude anything of the staple order nor goods already installed for Fall selling. Not so. We want to stimulate the advance selling of Fall Goods and you are particularly invited to take advantage of our special offer found elsewhere in this circular.

Our Secondary Motive

for wishing to give this Semi Annual Sale and making it so unusually attractive, is: FIRSTLY, as a reward and appreciation to the customers already enrolled under our banner; SECONDLY, as an allurement to new blood, new shoppers, new customers a deliberate snare to "Lead you into temptation," as it were trying to make you stray from the straight and narrow path, a path leading to your own old store only want you to branch out a little and see what pleasure in shopping is in store for you here.

What do you say? We sure will be laying for you later if we do not succeed in getting you this time.

Monument Marking Place of Massacre to Be Placed Sept. 3

September 3, 1868, a band of Arapahoe Indians descended upon Colorado Springs, killed and scalped three boys, sons of pioneer settlers in the Pikes Peak region, and returned to their home in the mountains, never to return again.

September 3, 1913—exactly 45 years later—a monument commemorating this, the last Indian massacre in the Pikes Peak region, will be unveiled by Edgar Howbert for the El Paso County Pioneer association.

The placing of the monument, an immense boulder brought down from the mountains and bearing a copper tablet setting forth the purpose of the marker, is a part of the work which the Pioneer association has undertaken to do—that is, to mark all points of historic interest; the unveiling of the stone will be the Pioneer association's contribution to the success of the Shan Kive.

On that eventful day in the fall of 1868, Charles Everhart, a boy of 17, was riding across the prairie where Colorado Springs now stands. Suddenly a band of Indians swooped down upon him and, before he could so much as start to flee, he was shot from his horse. So far as can be determined, he fell on a spot now occupied by the small triangular park between Cascade and Platte Avenues and Boulder crescent.

After scalping Everhart, the Indians started south, and, near Mt. Washington, just south of Colorado Springs, found and killed George and Franklin Robbins, aged 11 and 8, respectively, and cousins of the late B. G. Robbins. The massacre was seen by Edgar Howbert, then a small boy, from his father's ranch, near the Portland mill.

The monument marking the massacre has been erected in the small city park on North Cascade avenue, and will be unveiled at 2:30 o'clock on the afternoon of September 3. The entire exercises will be in charge of the El Paso County Pioneer association.

Mrs. William Wells Price, president of the association, will preside and introduce the speakers. David Spielman, the sheriff who carried the bodies of the boys into the settlement, will make the principal address, and Mrs. William Foote, the first white child born in Trinidad, Colo., will also talk. Mrs. Foote is a daughter of Capt. Frank Baldwin, the only man who received two medals for bravery from the United States government. Mrs. Foote will tell how her father won the [illegible]

Preliminary contests will be held in every state capital. Nominations in the state contests are now being made, photographs being the basis of selection. Contestants will range from three to ten years of age.

BOY KILLS HUGE BEAR IN GUNNISON COUNTRY

GUNNISON, Aug. 23.—Willie Wallace, 15, living 20 miles north of this place, today killed a huge black bear weighing 380 pounds and measuring six feet and two inches from tip to tip.

The bear had been seen in the hills near Castleton for several weeks, but hunters were unable to even get within shooting distance. This morning young Wallace took his 25-35 rifle and went out for the big brute. In three hours he returned wild with joy for he had killed the biggest bear of the season.

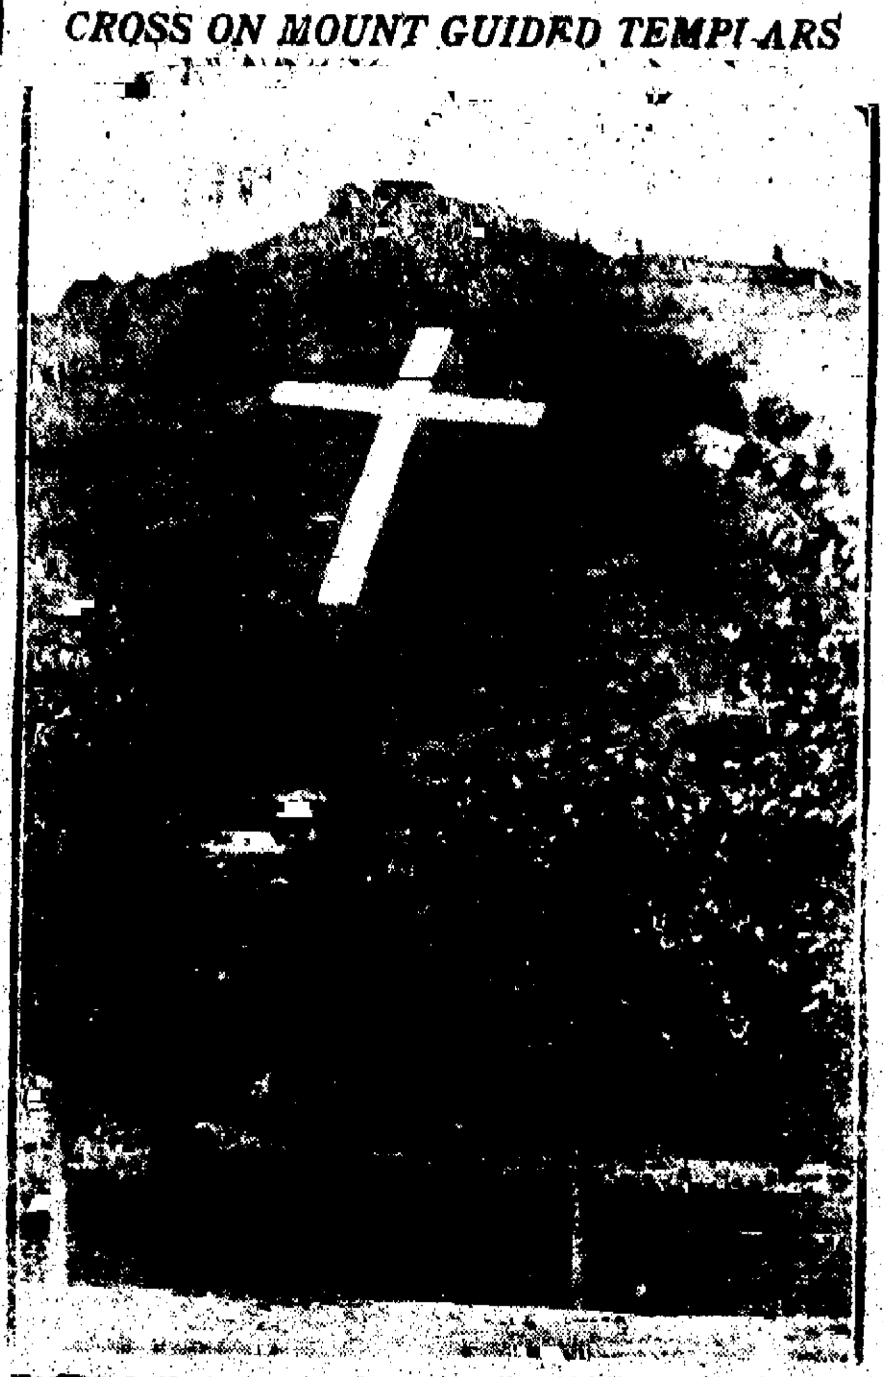
CROSS ON MOUNT GUIDED TEMPLARS



Flashing forth its welcome to the hundreds of Knights Templar who visited the Pikes Peak region after the recent Denver conclave was an immense white cross, 450 feet long and 300 feet broad, erected high on the side of Red mountain, near Manitou.

The cross, which was constructed and placed on the mountain by the citizens of Manitou, was plainly visible to the Sir Knights [illegible] to Colorado Springs while their trains were far out on the prairie. Visible from almost every part of the Pikes Peak region, the big white cross attracted perhaps more attention than any other decorative scheme ever tried here.

Hundreds of yards of material were used in the construction of the cross and it required several weeks to erect the gigantic decoration on the side of Red mountain. In addition to the cross, the citizens of Manitou decorated the town in the Templar colors.

STAGE IS SET FOR GREAT SHAN KIVE; ACTORS AWAIT KING CARNIVAL'S CALL

Preliminary Plans Have Been Completed and Committees Announce Program

[illegible] are now [illegible] nicely [illegible] which opens [illegible] Monday. All day yesterday workmen, contributed by the county and city [illegible], were at [illegible] preparing the track and grounds [illegible] of Adams Crossing. Monday morning workmen, employed by the Master Plumbers association of the city, will begin the work of laying 3,000 feet of pipe that will be necessary to supply water to the circus, the Indian and cowboy camps.

Manager Dostal has a force of men at work stringing the grounds with wire. It is expected to try out the lights next Saturday evening. The Electric company has not only made a handsome subscription to the Shan Kive, but is doing a great deal of work to boost it.

The Out West Tent & Awning company has made a handsome donation to the carnival in the way of decoration of the fine entrance, which will be erected at the grounds. The company also has provided numerous tents that will be used in housing the cowboys and others.

Nickerson and Bristow, architects, have laid out the Shan Kive grounds in an artistic manner, so arranged that there will be ample opportunity for placing all the shows, parking automobiles, and yet leave a highway clear through the Garden of the Gods.

Buffalo Bill May Attend.

Colonel William F. Cody, the famous Buffalo Bill, has wired the committee that he may not be able to attend as he has an engagement in the east next week, but it is possible that the plans may be changed, and if so, he will come to the gathering of cowboys, Indians and pioneers, as he is probably the most celebrated pioneer of the west living.

The work of organizing the great parades during Shan Kive week is going on very successfully. Charles B. Ferrin, manager of the Out West Printing company, has consented to take charge of the Shan Kive parade Tuesday morning, September 2. Mr. Ferrin was a former chief of the volunteer fire department and is experienced in handling organizations of men. He is now working on some novel features for the parade. He has asked Dr. Paul [illegible], a member of a pioneer family, to take charge of the pioneer division of the parade.

[illegible] Rowell, who will be in charge of the Indians during their visit, will marshal the Indian division, and Chief [illegible], head of the cowboy committee, will handle that division. The Roman circus people will handle their own division. Andy Adams, famous cowboy author, is to be the marshal of the day and ride at the head of the parade. The various officials of the parade will announce their aides some time during the week, and Mr. Ferrin hopes to have it organized so thoroughly that he will be able to announce the line of march and all details by the end of the week.

Carl Blackman, in charge of the night automobile parade Wednesday, also is working out the details. Police Commissioner Johnson and Chief Mc[illegible] of the fire department have given their consent to the fire department participating in this parade. All of the apparatus will be brilliantly illuminated with electric bulbs and red fire. The Indians will be placed on cars, as will the various bands, to participate in this parade.

Many Visitors Expected.

It is hoped that a large delegation from Pueblo will come that day in automobiles and join the Colorado Springs people that night as they ride by the grandstand. It is not the intention to decorate the automobiles with flowers at that time, but that they shall merely be driven along in the parade and past the grandstand. The occupants may carry sparkers or red fire or anything of that kind to attract the attention of their friends along the route.

Director Joseph [illegible] of the Y. M. C. A. athletic department has agreed to stage a performance before the grandstand on Kiowa street Wednesday night immediately following the parade. He has a company of Zouaves hard at work and hopes to break the world's record for scaling an 18-foot wall, which they now hold. He has some husky new young fellows in training. The Y. M. C. A. performance will last about 40 minutes and will be followed by the cowboy quadrille on horseback on Nevada avenue. Following this will come the cowboy dance in the Temple theater.

The committee has sold the confetti, popcorn and various other privileges at the Shan Kive grounds. It is still looking for bids for various privileges, such as refreshment booth, soft drinks, etc. These will be sold combined or separately according to the best offers. As the committee expects to have from 5,000 to 15,000 people a day on the grounds for at least three days, the sale of ice cream cones, frankfurters and such things should be large. It is a proposition for some competent catering company to figure on.

Altogether the arrangements for the Shan Kive seem to be in excellent shape, and the complete program for the celebration was announced yesterday as follows:

Monday, September 1.

Morning—Labor day parade, headed by Midland band.

3:00 p. m.—Denver News Marathon, starting at Shan Kive grounds, Adams crossing, Garden of the Gods, Colorado City and Colorado Springs, across through the Mesa and through the Gateway to the place of beginning. Opening of the Roman circus.

7:30 p. m.—Grand illumination Shan Kive grounds; Indian dances on platform at Indian village; Roman circus performance and opening of the Trail.

Tuesday, September 2.

INDIANA INTERURBAN TRAINMEN ON STRIKE

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 23.—A strike of interurban trainmen on the four systems entering Indianapolis, apparently not well organized, went into effect this morning on the refusal of the interurban companies to reply to the request of the new union's grievance committee for arbitration of the men's demands for a nine hour day and higher wages. Police guarded every interurban car that went out of the city. There was no indication, however, of any trouble.

CENTENARY OF FAMOUS BATTLE IS OBSERVED

Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night. Adv

To Stop Scaling of Psoriasis

This Troublesome Skin Disease Promptly Checked by a very Simple Attention

A lady in Lexington, Ky., says that before she began using S. S. S. psoriasis broke out at frequent intervals where she thought it cured. But by getting her blood under control by the influence of S. S. S. the disease entirely disappeared and there was never again the slightest sign of it.

There is one ingredient in S. S. S. which peculiarly stimulates cellular or glandular activity to select from the blood or from the fine network of blood vessels in the skin, those elements which it requires for regeneration.

Thus pimples, acne, eczema, lupus, or any other blood condition that attacks the skin or seeks an outlet through the skin, is met with the antidotal effect of S. S. S.

This is why skin troubles vanish so readily and why they do not return.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. The great Swift Laboratory in Atlanta, Ga., prepares this famous blood purifier, and you should take no chance by permitting anyone to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address the Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Company, 182 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

GARRISON AT FRONTIER DAY CELEBRATION

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Aug. 23.—Secretary of War Garrison and his party at 8 o'clock this morning left for Fort D. A. Russell, where they passed the night, for the Pole mountain maneuver reserve, 30 miles northwest of Cheyenne. They will return to Cheyenne at 2:30 and attend the Frontier day celebration, witnessing contests to establish world's championship broncho busters and steer ropers.

Diarrhoea Quickly Cured.

"I was taken with diarrhoea and Mr. Vorks, the merchant here, persuaded me to try a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. After taking one dose of it I was cured. It also cured others that I gave it to," writes M. E. Gebhart, Oriole, Pa. That is not at all unusual. An ordinary attack of diarrhoea can almost invariably be cured by one or two doses of this remedy. For sale by all dealers. Adv

Deaths and Funerals

ALLEN C. COBB DIES

In the death of Allen C. Cobb, which occurred yesterday morning at his residence, 1924 North Tejon street, Colorado Springs has lost one of its most kindly, worthy and estimable characters. Of later years, because of his physical infirmities, Mr. Cobb's circle of acquaintances has been limited, but in that circle he was esteemed with a depth of regard which it is the privilege of few to enjoy. His quiet and unaffected benevolence, his ready helpfulness and consideration and thoughtfulness for others have brought comfort and relief to a large number of people. So modest and unassuming was he and so well did he observe the scriptural injunction of not letting his right hand know what his left hand did, that not a few of the recipients of his gifts were themselves in ignorance of the source of the favor and the extent to which they were indebted. In this hour not only those who were the beneficiaries of his kindness, but all who met him in any capacity, sincerely mourn his loss.

Mr. Cobb came of a well-known family of excellent standing in eastern Massachusetts. He was born January 19, 1849. Prior to his coming to Colorado Springs, for reasons of health, nearly 30 years ago, he had been actively and very successfully engaged in the manufacturing business in Lynn, Mass. and, after partially recovering his health, his keen business sense and careful and systematic methods enabled him to do and accomplish an unusual amount of work for one circumstanced as he was. Had he been physically able it is quite certain that he would have played a very important part in the business life of this community. Always a constant sufferer, he bore his ills and misfortunes with a cheerful resignation and hopefulness which was the admiration of those who knew him best. He leaves an only son, Henry Woodbury Cobb, a prominent educator in Rockport, Me.

The funeral services which will be conducted by Rev. W. W. Ranney will take place at his residence at 2:30 p. m. In accordance with the wishes of the deceased friends are requested not to send flowers. A. R.

Dr. C. N. Aylesworth, 70 years old, of Des Moines, Ia., who was taken sick July 16 while in Colorado Springs on a pleasure trip, died at 5:30 o'clock Thursday evening at a local hospital. The body is being taken to Des Moines for burial. Dr. Aylesworth was born in Oswego county, New York, in June 1843 and moved to Des Moines in 1853. He was a justice of the peace in that city. He left Des Moines July 9 with Mrs. Aylesworth on a pleasure trip to Oregon, but was taken ill July 16, the day he reached Colorado Springs. He is survived by Mrs. Aylesworth, who is accompanying the body to Des Moines, and by a son, S. R. Aylesworth, of the firm of Aylesworth & Bredimun of Des Moines. Dr. Aylesworth was a member of the Masons and of the A. O. U. W.

Francis J. Clifford, 33 years old, died at a local hospital yesterday morning. No arrangements have been made for the funeral pending word from relatives in Chicago. Clifford was a brother of Michael J. Clifford of [illegible] City, was born in Ireland. He came to Colorado three years ago. For a short time he was employed as telegrapher by the Rock Island railroad. He had lived in Colorado Springs for about a year. The Knights of Columbus, of which Clifford was a member, probably will have charge of the funeral.

[illegible] M[illegible] colored, died yesterday [illegible] Mar[illegible]. No arrangements have been made for the funeral pending the arrival of a brother from Trin[illegible] [illegible] morning. M[illegible] was about [illegible]

SLIT SKIRTS AID HOSIERY MAKERS

From the New York Evening Sun.

As [illegible] ill wind that blows no body good, the National Association of Hosiery and Underwear Manufacturers among other things discussed the new slit skirts. The manufacturers expect a great boom in the demand for fancy hosiery as a result of the new styles in women's dress and consequently the attitude of the association toward women's skirts was discussed as well as the effect of the new tariff schedule on the textile industries.

World Circle Peak

Determined to circle Pikes Peak in an aeroplane, W. E. Bowersox, 1717 North Wahsatch avenue, who recently was granted a pilot's license by the Wright School of Aviation at Dayton, O., is now negotiating for a biplane with which he expects to accomplish a feat which baffled Parmalee and Turpin, Wright aviators, who made several flights around Colorado Springs during the Shan Kive in 1911.

As soon as he had completed the course in the Wright school, Bowersox expressed a desire to fly around Pikes Peak, where air currents far from the ordinary are to be experienced, and where it requires more than a general knowledge of flying to remain afloat. The local aviator talked over his plans with Orville Wright, who stated he believed it could be done, but who also advised Bowersox to be careful and make use of the experiences of Parmalee and Turpin.

Bowersox expects to have a biplane in Colorado Springs within a few weeks, when he will commence making flights. The first trials will be on the prairie east of Colorado Springs, and later, when the aviator learns more of the air currents in the mountains, he will attempt mountain flights.

CHICAGO'S POLICEWOMEN: LADY OFFICER WHO MADE FIRST ARREST

Here is a picture showing how the first squad of policewomen ever organized as a part of an American city's force of guardians of the peace appear when they are ready to go out and patrol their beats. From left to right, the only cops, who are attached to the Chicago department, are: Mrs. Anna Loucks, Miss Clara Olsen, Miss Fannie Willsey, Mrs. Margaret Wilson, Miss Elsie Parks, Mrs. Margaret Butler, Mrs. Alice Clements, Mrs. Emma Newcomb, Mrs. T. D. Meeder and Mrs. Gertrude Howe Britton. The honor of making the first arrest since the squad was organized fell to Mrs. Butler (pictured below) and Mrs. Wilson.

LETTER OF SIR VESEY STRONG

Under date of the e[illegible] Sir Vesey Strong, who [illegible] ago was lord mayor of L[illegible] a remarkable and, in [illegible] tial station, an [illegible] the editor of the P[illegible] Warsaw. The lev[illegible] contains [illegible] which conv[illegible] the [illegible] its direct [illegible] di[illegible] ders [illegible] me of the [illegible] with suitably [illegible] letter's actual [illegible] of [illegible] improper to [illegible] character by [illegible] actually [illegible] though too long [illegible] of this column.

Highly Esteemed Fellow [illegible]:

"As I desire to call the [illegible] of the Esperantist body [illegible] the whole world to a ve[illegible] [illegible] to the [illegible] and [illegible] city dear to ev[illegible] and to the hands of the [illegible] ment.

"That city and that [illegible] are the city and the fatherland of Zamenhof, whom I, as alderman of London, [illegible] the place of the then mayor [illegible] to receive in the ancient Guild hall of London, on the occasion of the Cambridge congress, in 1907.

"Later, in the memorable [illegible] (1911) of the coronation of the king and queen of Great Britain, I myself was mayor of London.

"It was my privilege, in that capacity, to preside at the Guild hall over the historic convention for peace and arbitration between Britain and America. It was a convention completely unique, not only in the history of London, but, I believe, in the history of the world thus far.

"His royal majesty, George V, expressed to me his royal gratification at the receipt of the report of opinions unanimously expressed for a question so broadly and immeasurably important, from such a convention, which represented all departments of thought in our religious, political and social life.

"I had a copy of the full report of this convention, containing the speeches, [illegible] to the mayor of every city in Great Britain and its colonies through the whole British empire.

"Furthermore, it was translated into Esperanto, and in this manner spread through the [illegible] world. The Esperantists in their turn read it in their circles, translated it into their national languages, and circulated it as widely as possible. It is now my privilege to communicate to the Esperantist body the following important facts, and I urgently request and advise that they give these facts the widest possible publicity, not only in Esperanto, but also by means of the various national languages.

"In the current number of the Fortnightly Review there has appeared an article composed by Sir Max Waechter, an article composed after much consultation with kings and statesmen, in which the author presents to the world a plan for the federation of Europe, thus making of the great powers a friendly circle.

"Sir Max Waechter says:

"There are six great principal states in Europe. They consist of two groups, The Triple Alliance, Germany, Austria-Hungary and Italy, and The Triple Entente, France, Russia and Great Britain. It is our duty to make quite clear the fact, as our British ministers not long since declared, that there exists no legal alliance between Britain and France, but yet there happily exists a very friendly sentiment and understanding, which is much better, more free from danger, more lasting, than any treaty or parchment, whether for offense or defense. This friendly sentiment is known under the name of l'Entente Cordiale."

(At this point we interrupt Sir Vezey Strong's letter, to be resumed another week.)

The extracts from the gospel which have been given in this column on recent Sundays illustrate the prevailing simple style of that portion of the New Testament. The exposition of the epistles of St. Paul is usually more complex, and this week's selection is the epistle for the thirteenth Sunday after Trinity, Galatians 3:16-22.

16. Al Abraham kaj lia semo la promesoj estis parolitaj. Li ne diras: Kaj al semoj, kvazau pri multaj, sed kvazau unu: Kaj al via semo, kiu estas Kristo.

17. Sed chi tion mi diras: Interligon, antaue konfirmitan de Dio, la legho, kiu venis kvarcent tridek jarojn pli poste, ne nuligas, por ke ghi malefektivigu la promeson.

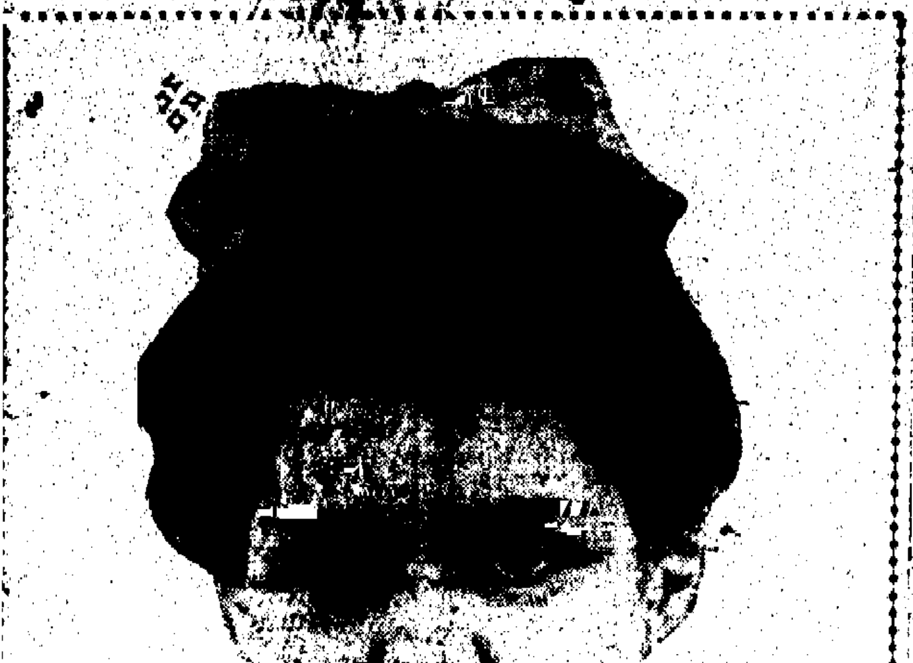
18. Char, se la heredajho estas de la legho, ghi jam ne estas de promeso; sed Dio donis ghin al Abraham per promeso.

19. Kio do estas la legho? Ghi estis aldonita kauze de eraroj, estas donita; ordigite per anghelo, en la mano de interulo.

20. Nu, interulo ne estas de unu, sed Dio estas unu.

21. Chu do la legho kontrauestas al la promesoj de Dio? Ne estu! Char, se legho estus donita, kiu povus vivigi, efektive justeco estus per la legho.

22. Tamen la skribo kunu enfermis chion sub peko, por ke la promeso per fido al Kristo Jesuo estu donata al chiuj, kiuj fidas.



GIRL MYSTERIOUSLY DISAPPEARS WHILE ON A VISIT TO NEW YORK

Miss Belle Colville

The relatives of Miss Belle Colville, the daughter of wealthy parents living in Scranton, Pa., are now in New York searching for the girl who has not been heard of since April 15, when she came to visit an aunt in this city. Leaving her home in Scranton, she visited friends in Jersey City and then was seen by friends in New York. They lent her carfare to ride to her aunt's residence and all trace has since been lost of the girl.

LONDON STREET TRAFFIC

From the London Advertiser.

The most frequented street in London would appear to be Piccadilly, where 31,355 vehicles pass the Ritz hotel in 12 hours. The equivalent traffic volume is 78.1. Other high figures are 75.8 units in Kensington Park road and 72.1 in Commercial road, E. The bridge taking the heaviest traffic is London bridge, over which 17,227 vehicles pass in the 12 hours. This is followed closely by Westminster bridge, with 17,204, Blackfriars, with 16,507, and the Tower bridge, with 13,019. Reducing these figures to units of congestion, Blackfriars bridge, says Engineering, is the most crowded, its traffic volume being 102.8. The Tower bridge comes next, with [illegible] units, the corresponding figure for London bridge being 85.6 and for Westminster [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of traffic volume by the width of [illegible] [illegible] relative traffic density [illegible]. The highest figure noted is [illegible] the Tower bridge [illegible] [illegible] and high street [illegible] [illegible] Canning Town bridge [illegible]

THE MEXICAN SITUATION

HUERTA'S rejection of the American proposal of mediation has been followed by two developments which greatly strengthen the position of the Administration at Washington. One of these is the evident determination of Congress to stand together in support of the President's policy. The other is the attitude of some of the European governments in exerting their influence to persuade Huerta to yield to the demands of the United States. This is all the more significant since some of them have already recognized the Huerta government.

The Mexican situation is clearly approaching a crisis and it is becoming more and more evident that it must end either in Huerta's complete acceptance of the American proposals or in intervention. President Wilson has taken a position so advanced that he cannot back down without discredit. If he attempted to do so his action probably would take the form of a complete withdrawal of all American representatives in Mexico and the removal of American citizens from the country at the expense of the government.

But this would not solve the problem of the protection of American property interests there. Approximately one billion dollars of American money is invested in Mexico and its abandonment would of course be followed to some extent, at least by confiscation. Such a course, therefore, is not to be considered for an instant, despite the sentimental arguments of Congressman Kent of California to the effect that the life of even one American soldier should not be jeopardized to protect the property interests of those who have taken a chance by investing their money in a country torn with revolution.

Neither is intervention a thing to be contemplated without grave concern. True, Mexico is a third-rate nation with a very ineffective military force and no navy at all. Its credit is utterly exhausted, which, in fact, is the very reason for its present anxiety to be recognized by the United States, for until such recognition is gained it cannot borrow money abroad. Nevertheless, the conquest of Mexico would, in the opinion of all military experts, be a colossal task, requiring an army of not less than 100,000 men for from three to five years at a cost which might run toward the billion mark. Guerrilla warfare such as would necessarily be conducted there, is a tedious and costly business, as Americans have already learned in the Philippines, and it would be no small task to restore peace in Mexico by this means.

The governments of Great Britain, Germany and other European nations whose subjects have large investments in Mexico, have no desire to risk the certain destruction of their property in such a war, so it is not surprising that they are now supporting the American policy. Without doubt their influence will prove a valuable aid. Huerta's dream of a Japanese alliance vanished when Diaz was notified that he would be received in Tokio only as a private citizen, and the latest move of the European governments deprives the Mexican dictator of any hope of aid in that direction. It is not surprising that his attitude is steadily, though slowly, becoming more conciliatory.

OUT OF THE MUD

GOVERNOR MAJOR of Missouri appears to be a very live and up-to-date executive. He organized a good roads movement which has thoroughly aroused the enthusiasm of the entire state, and whoever has traveled over Missouri roads needs no additional reminder that such enthusiasm is needed there as much as in any state in the Union.

But there is no doubt that Missouri has at last awakened to the importance of the good roads question, for last week 350,000 men responded to the Governor's call and put in two days of work on the highways. Of course it was haphazard work, for everything was done in a hurry and the real object was more to arouse interest which would result in the enactment of better laws and the appropriation of more money than to accomplish substantial improvement of the highways in so short a time. Nevertheless, it is said that the work done in those two days has added $4,000,000 in betterment to the public highways of the state.

The American people have reason to be thankful for the invention of the automobile if for no other reason than the amazing improvement which it is bringing in public roads everywhere. Years ago when nobody used the roads except the farmers they were habitually neglected and nobody cared, not even the farmers because they were accustomed to bad roads. But now every town and village has its share of automobile owners, people who have invested $1,000 or more in a touring car and are therefore anxious to use it as much as possible. With this condition existing the demand for better roads was inevitable and the awakened sentiment in Missouri is typical of conditions everywhere.

Nothing more surely marks the difference between a progressive, up-to-date community and one still dominated by mossbackism than the condition of the public roads. Bad roads are the heaviest tax which the farmer has to bear for during a large part of the year they are almost impassable and thus add considerably to the cost of everything he hauls to market. In the long run it would be much cheaper to build and maintain modern highways, and it is a realization of this truth that is responsible for the nation-wide enthusiasm for good roads.

AFTER THAW'S MONEY

THE only good thing to be said of Harry Thaw is that his activities put money into circulation. Somebody representing him has hired eight Canadian lawyers to prevent his extradition, but since even the lawyers do not seem to know who hired them, and since there is no money in sight at present, they are merely marking time. The spirit that animates them is pretty clearly shown by a statement made by one of their number yesterday. "We are falling over ourselves," he said, "but eight men cannot handle one man's case without a definite agreement as to who is the boss." As for the object of all this concern, he appears to be quite contented now that he is again back in his old place on the first page.

If it were not for the possibility that this addle-pated young man may run amuck again and kill somebody else it would be an utter waste of time and money to attempt to put him back in captivity. From first to last he has cost the state of New York several hundred thousand dollars, and it is not improbable that his lawyers will be able to make the state spend a great deal more before the present proceedings are ended.

Of course, he should have been hanged years ago, but that is out of the question now, nor is it even possible to send him to the penitentiary. The most that could be done under any circumstances is to put him back in the asylum, and it is doubtful whether even that is worth while. If New York drops the case, Canada will either deport Thaw or try him for insanity, and if he is convicted it will then be up to Canada to take care of him. In either event New York would be well rid of a nuisance.

ALSO ROBBERY.

To the Editor of The Gazette:

In this morning's Gazette, under the editorial heading "Judicial Robbery," you make serious objection to $21.25 costs imposed with a $5 fine on a man who failed to comply with the state automobile law, saying in part: "This is nothing less than plain highway robbery, committed under the guise of law."

I agree with you that the costs appear out of all proportion to the fine, but what surprises many people in Colorado City is that you are so severe on the justice court, but offered no criticism whatever when recently in the district court two Colorado Springs lawyers were permitted to take $300 from a pair of ignorant gypsies for a divorce, when they had never been married. The lawyers asked for the modest sum of $500, and Judge Little allowed them $300, the customary fee being $25 on each side. After the gypsies had gone about the court house a week or so, charging they had been robbed of $300 and threatening to place the matter before their foreign [illegible] back to them.

If taxing $21.25 costs against a well-to-do man with an automobile is "judicial robbery," what do you term taking $300 from a couple of ignorant gypsies for a customary $50 [illegible]. By your silence you have placed your O. K. on the gypsy affair, but the public has not.

NAVAL BASES AND FOREIGN POWERS.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Much perturbation is said to have been caused in official circles at Washington by the report that Great Britain is intending to establish a great naval station at Bermuda with the purpose of maintaining a powerful squadron there. If only Great Britain were concerned it would not so much matter, for the possibility of an interruption in the friendly relations which have existed for more than a hundred years between that country and the United States is almost inconceivable, but the argument is that if Great Britain sets this example other nations may feel called upon to follow it, with the result that the waters on the road to the Panama canal will eventually be flanked and dominated by foreign forces.

Perhaps it is not worth while doing much worrying over this contingency. The British have an unquestioned and unquestionable right to establish a naval station at Bermuda if they see fit. As a matter of fact, they have one there already and have had for many years although since the abandonment of their naval base at Halifax some 10 years ago less importance has been attached to it and less use has been made of it than formerly. But the Bermudas are just as much a possession of Great Britain as ever, and that country is entitled to work them for all they are worth.

A POET'S EDITORIAL.

From Collier's.

A newspaper classic that promises never to lose its timeliness is "Cui Culpa?" by Franklin P. Adams. Though the satire was first printed more than two years ago, it sounds as if it might have been inspired by the recent verdict upon the Stamford, Conn., wreck or fashioned still more recently as a prod to the investigators of the slaughter at Binghamton's factory fire:

A train collision killed a few; "investigation" came;
The "probe" was sharp, the "probe" was deep, but "no one" was to blame.
The overworked dispatcher, true, had fallen fast asleep,
But that was not the railroad's fault—and the "probe" was sharp and deep.

A hundred souls, a thousand souls were sacrificed to flame;
The "probe" was long, the "probe" was deep, but where to "fix the blame"?
"'Twas panic killed the audience; the loss of life was due To trepidation of the mob," said Twelve Good Men and True.

Pray God we grow not bitter, but it makes the vision red—
This hellish truth of crushed-out youth, this tale of needless dead!
No single name shall bear the blame, go "probe" ye ne'er so deep,
For the Cost of Living rises high, but the cost of life is cheap.

Greenheart a Remarkable Tree

When the Panama canal is finished all the sills and fenders in the lock gates will be composed of a wood which is more durable than iron or steel when placed in water, is not subject to the ravages of the teredo, the worm that honeycombs ordinary piles, and is exempt from the attack of the tropical white ants—pests that literally eat up and [illegible] hard wood almost before it has a chance to season.

Greenheart is the name of this remarkable wood, and it has been known to stand under water for over 100 years and remain in a perfectly sound condition. All the gates, piers, and jetties of the Liverpool docks and practically all the lock gates of the Bridgewater canal in England are of greenheart. It furnished the material, also, for the 20 pairs of lock gates in the Manchester ship canal, the largest of these enormous gates containing 265 tons each of green heart. When the greenheart dock gates in the Mersey harbor were removed, in order that the channel might be deepened and widened, the wood originally used in their construction was again employed in building the enlarged gates. Similarly the wood in the gates of the Canada dock, built in 1856, was so perfectly preserved that it was again used in the reconstruction of the dock in 1894.

Nansen's ship, The Fram, and the Antarctic ship, Discovery, were constructed of greenheart. The wood is also exceedingly tough and strong, with a crushing strength of 12,000 pounds to the square inch, and is used generally in ship and dock building, especially for keelsons, beams, engine bearers, and for all purposes involving great wear and tear. It likewise has a handsome grain and is highly esteemed as a furniture wood. The butts removed in the woods to facilitate snaking out the logs are used for such articles as automobile spokes, belaying pins and tobacco pegs, and for all kinds of turnery.

The truly remarkable lasting qualities of mature greenheart wood have given the tree a worldwide reputation. Authentic records show that the best grades surpass iron and steel in durability when placed in water or in contact with the soil.

Greenheart is a large and handsome tree, ranging from 60 to 100 feet in height, and grows 4 feet or more in diameter. It grows in the dense tropical jungles of northern South America, the wild interior of British Guiana still containing large supplies. Like mahogany, rosewood and many other tropical trees, greenheart grows in relatively small groups and great labor is required to cut trails or jungle roads from the trees to streams down which the logs may be floated. The logs are snaked along these trails by oxen and sweating natives to the river banks after which they must be rafted down stream by binding them to logs of lighter wood, since the greenheart logs are so heavy that alone they will sink immediately. Since each log may be worth from $100 to $300, the foreman of the embarcadero who allows any of his logs to get away is not to be envied.

The greenheart trees generally have clean, symmetrical boles for the first 50 or 60 feet, and logs or timbers from 15 to 20 inches square can often be obtained. The tree is an evergreen and, strange to say, is botanically a close relative of the soft-grained sassafras. Owing to the absence of distinct rings of annual growth, the age at which greenheart reaches maturity is not accurately known. The tree, however, grows very slowly. Specimens known to be 70 years old have reached a diameter of scarcely 8 inches. It is probable, therefore, that trees of merchantable size, say 20 inches in diameter, are about 250 years old, while others of still larger proportions are relatively older, very large trees possibly being nearly 1,000 years old.

Talks on Thrift

NO. 31. SAVINGS CLUBS

"The best way to accumulate money is to resolutely save and bank a fixed portion of your income, no matter how small the amount."—Andrew Carnegie.

Man is a gregarious animal, and he is prone to follow a leader—do what others do. This is the fundamental principle underlying the Christmas and vacation savings clubs and other similar schemes to stimulate a community of interest in the systematic building up of a surplus. The idea of co-operation enters into this plan, and a friendly competition in saving takes the place of a foolish vying with one another in the race of extravagance.

Many persons are so constituted that they need to put themselves into the machinery of some such scheme as this which will force them to save automatically, as it were.

Perhaps the best known of these methods is the Christmas Savings club, which aims to make people begin early in the year to save money, ostensibly for Christmas presents, but really for any purpose desired.

There are several classes in the "Christmas Savings club." If you join "Class 5" you pay 5 cents the first week, 10 cents the second week, 15 cents the third week, 20 cents the fourth, and so on for 50 weeks. Then, two weeks before Christmas, the Santa Claus bank of your choice mails you a check for $63.75, usually with interest. Or, if you still are fairly opulent after Christmas, you may start in this class by paying $2.50 the first week, and reducing the payments 5 cents a week. Then there are 2-cent and one-cent classes, which return $25.50 and $12.75, respectively, to the member just before Christmas.

Over [illegible] banks conducted Christmas Savings clubs in 1912, and the clubs were scattered through many states. The Union [illegible] of [illegible], Pa., [illegible] to club [illegible] at Christmas [illegible] to pay out $[illegible] to [illegible]

Working girls in this country have [illegible] savings [illegible] helpful. Miss Anne Morgan, daughter of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, is at the head of the [illegible] of this [illegible] the idea of [illegible] [illegible] The [illegible] was to [illegible] of the [illegible] of the girls throughout the year, so that [illegible] could be had without [illegible] between the pay envelope and the two week's needed vacation. The [illegible] has expanded so that it now touches the girls thrift in other directions.

Similar co-operative effort is manifested by members of the Society for the Prevention of Useless Giving, the "Spugs," as they are popularly called. The idea back of this organization is that there is too much [illegible] giving [illegible] at the [illegible] time, especially by those who can least afford it, and that this [illegible] be prevented if a united stand is made against the [illegible] of Christmas giving.

But, if you are not so situated that you can join a savings club of any kind, do not give up the idea of saving. Do it on your own account. Thrift is really a simple thing, but it means a great deal. Just stop wasting, stop indulging in things you cannot afford, have an object for which to work, save some of your daily earnings in the savings bank, until, accumulating, little by little, you have enough to invest, then consult some good banker, or other business man, and put it into real estate, bonds, or some other safe security, so that by-and-by an income for old age may be assured you, and dread of want, in case of sickness or accident, be banished from your mind forever.

WOOLENS AND WORSTEDS

From "Schedule K" by N. I. Stone, formerly chief statistician of the tariff board, in the Century.

Any one who has traveled abroad or had occasion to compare foreign prices of cloths and dress goods with those prevailing in this country knows that on the average they can be bought in Europe, particularly in free-trade England, at about half the price usually asked for similar goods at home. As the investigation of the tariff board has shown, there are many cloths on which the difference in price is not so great, particularly on the finer grades, while, on the other hand, the American price is more than double the English on some of the medium and cheap grades of cloth.

But, on the whole, it is safe to state that our prices on woolen and worsted cloths are about double those in England. The difference in price represents largely the toll paid by ninety-odd million Americans for the support of the half-century-old infant worsted and the century-old woolen industry. We have all been vaguely aware of that fact, and yet have submitted to it for the ultimate good of creating a raw-wool supply and a fine woolen and worsted industry that would make us independent of the rest of the world and give employment to American labor at American wages.

Not until the two wings of the industry, the woolen and the worsted, fell out among themselves, and the carded-wool manufacturers showed to an astonished public that the tariff, as it stood, throttled an important branch of the industry, instead of building it up, was the layman given an opportunity of getting a deeper insight into the workings of Schedule K.

The value of farm animals in this country last year was $5,[illegible].

IN THE EARLY DAYS

THIRTY YEARS AGO TODAY

August 24, 1883.

News was received of the death in West Newton, Mass., the preceding day of Hanson A. Risley, for several years [illegible] of the Gazette Printing company and for many years a prominent citizen of Colorado Springs.

Mr. F. A. Sperry was visiting friends in the city.

Dr. W. A. Campbell and his family [illegible] to the fair at Chicago.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

August 24, 1893.

Miss Lutie St. John, daughter of ex-Governor St. John of Kansas, was visiting Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Everleth.

A [illegible] leading from Cascade avenue [illegible] to the depot at the north side of the Antlers grounds was being surveyed and graded.

A barbed wire fence was placed around the grounds of the Antlers and the city park to keep stock off the lawn.

The Protest Against Modern Fashions

[illegible]

"Five years ago women still wore stays and bodices which covered them, stockings thick enough not to show the colour of their skin, and sufficient [illegible] to conceal the details of the persons.

"Now it is said [illegible] that women wear almost nothing under their gowns, even in the daytime. Petticoats went some time back and were replaced by tights or not replaced at all. The stockings are of such diaphanous silk as to embarrass the beholder who sees, even in the street, so much of them, and they are not covered by any but court shoes.

Orgy of Undressing.

"So much for the foundation. Over this is worn a filmy sheath of half-transparent material, cut almost as low by day as by night, and with such slashings and liftings in the skirt as may fully display the leg halfway to the knee, and which show every movement of the limbs [illegible] of the [illegible]

"The writer could not, when she was at a great French dressmakers' this spring, discover the difference between afternoon and evening gowns—so much have the former approximated to the latter. In both the deliberate aim of the designer seems to have been undress."

To the Rescue.

The Times correspondent, says a woman contributor in the London Daily Mail, whose criticism of the disappearing clothes fashion has raised so much discussion, is not aware that advanced dressmakers are trying to rescue their clients from this vogue for thin apparel. But as yet they are making very little headway.

Though the "nice" Englishwoman will have absolutely nothing to do with the immodestly filmy frock, the exaggerated low-cut corsage worn in the daytime, or the skirt slit to the knee, she has nothing but appreciation for the principle of the fashions of today.

Never again, surely, will woman consent to drag along the weighty petticoats and frocks that impeded the progress and wearied the limbs of the mid-Victorian and which induced her to lead a sedentary life and encouraged ailments born of inertia and laziness.

Nor will woman abandon the low-neck corsage so long as it is becoming. It not only feels free, but it beautifies the contour of the neck, prevents headaches that come from compression, and wards off a tendency to sore throat and colds by a gradual process of hardening.

Nor will woman go back to the bondage of the long dust and germ gathering frock for walking.

In this connection a poem appeared in the current issue of the Civilian, the organ of the Canadian civil service. The editor has headed the poem "Risque Garb and Risque Rhyme." It follows:

Little girl, you look so small—
Don't you wear no clothes at all?
Don't you wear no shimmy shirt,
Don't you wear no petty skirt,
Just your corsets and your hose—
Are those all your underclothes?

Little girl, you look so slight
When I see you in the light,
With your skirts cut rather high,
Won't you catch a cold and die?
Ain't you 'fraid to show your calf?
It must make some fellers laugh.

Little girl, what is the cause
Why your clothes is made of gauze?
Don't you wear no undervest
When you go out fully dressed?
[illegible]
[illegible]

[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
Not to [illegible]

Little girl, your socks has slots
Of them tiny little holes.
Why you went to [illegible] your limbs
I don't know, is it a whim?
Do you want to catch the eye
Of [illegible] by?

Little girl, I see your chin,
'Cause you go around half dressed in
Yes, I see way past your throat
To a region most remote;
'Tain't my fault now, don't suppose!
Why not wear some underclothes?

Little girl, where is the charm
In your long uncovered arm,
In the V behind your neck,
Is it there for birds to peck?
Little girl, I tell you those
Ain't so nice as underclothes.

Little girl, now listen here,
You would be just twice as dear
If you'd cover up your charms,
Neck, back, leg and both your arms;
I would take you to the shows
If you'd wear some underclothes.

Little girl, your mystery,
Luring charm and modesty,
Is what drives us fellows keen
To possess a little Queen;
But no lover—goodness knows—
Wants a girl sans underclothes.

S'pose I wandered down the street
With a loin-cloth 'round my feet;
S'pose I wore some harem pants
Or no shirt, like all my Aunts,
Or a ringlet through my nose,
They'd arrest me, don't you s'pose?

I must wear a coat of mail,
Clothe from head to big toe-nail,
I must cover up my form
Even when the weather's warm;
Can't enjoy the swimmer's throes
Less I garb in underclothes.

Little girl, take my advice
And you'll look just twice as nice;
Wear a shimmy—petty-coat,
Closed-work socks—et aussi culotte
Those unspeakables you see
There's a charm in lingerie.

C. A. HIBBARD & COMPANY, 17 AND 19 SOUTH TEJON STREET

Castro, "Man of Mystery," Again Is Causing Much Trouble in Venezuela

Don Cipriano Castro, dictator-out-of-a-job, reincarnation of Napoleon (according to Cipriano), Venezuela's "Man of Mystery," has broken out again and is trying to embarrass two governments, namely, the United States and the administration of President Gomez of the Central American country, which Castro once honored by deigning to accept the presidency of the same. If Castro's latest plan works out, not only the United States and Venezuela will be embarrassed, but the nations of Europe will doubtless find in him a continuous source of embarrassment. Castro's favorite indoor and outdoor sport is insulting the powers. The bigger and huskier and more powerful the power is the greater the ex-dictator likes to insult it and its citizens or subjects.

Cipriano, sometimes facetiously referred to as "Slipperiano," because of his skill at extricating himself from difficult situations, apparently breaks out every so often. In Washington and other capitals, Castro is regarded as a sort of disease that becomes prevalent every certain number of years. The only trouble with Castro is that he becomes epidemic at irregular intervals and there is no opportunity to prepare for his sudden appearance on the stage of nations. He comes bounding on with a loud fan-fare of trumpets and immediately busies himself in an effort to start something. And his efforts along this line are usually successful.

Is Man of Mystery.

"Don Cipriano," or President Castro, as he soon hopes to be, is indeed a "Man of Mystery." Very little is known about his early life except that he was born somewhere in the Andes mountains of a negro mother and a half breed Indian father. The first Venezuela knew of him was when he presented himself at the gates of Caracas with an army which he had raised by some mysterious means known only to himself, and announced that he proposed to free his beloved countrymen from the brutal tyrant who had been persecuting them.

Venezuela took Don Cipriano at his word. Later Venezuela came to know him better.

It was in 1899 that Castro entered Caracas. The nucleus of his army had been [illegible] in the Andes. Where he got the rest of his army no one knows. He always was something of a spellbinder and probably he talked the countryside into following him. When the diminutive revolutionist led his troops to Venezuela's capital he was on horseback, but lashed tightly to his animal, for he had both legs broken and had suffered many other injuries in the battles that preceded his entry.

Castro remained president of Venezuela for seven years. During that time he proved himself a worse tyrant than the Turk, more tyrannical than a monarch of the dark ages and gifted with more cunning than a Sioux Indian. He was hated by the wealthy and hated by the poor. Even his own official family and personal friends hated and feared him.

Insulted World Powers.

There was not a moment of his reign, for that was what his administration amounted to, when he was not threatened by the United States. He insulted every European nation, laughed at their threats and sneered at [illegible]. France or Germany sent him a threatening note he replied in kind. He threatened them as much as they threatened him. For seven years Castro imprisoned right and left and robbed left and right. Then came the end. Castro went out and was succeeded by Gomez and Venezuela enjoyed a period of rest while Don Cipriano became an exile. Between denying to the newspapers that he proposed leading a revolution and dodging agents of his own country, whom Castro believed had designs upon his life, the ex-dictator busied himself preparing to recapture the dictatorship of Venezuela.

There is no doubt that Castro's visit to the United States, when he was imprisoned on Ellis island as an undesirable, and later released by the courts, was for the purpose of consulting his revolutionary junta.

Many interesting stories are told of Castro's career. It was his rule to always do everything by "due process of law." If anyone thinks that the Mexicans patented the barbarous "fugitive law," whereby a prisoner may be shot down and killed while "trying to escape" they are very much mistaken. General Castro used it several years ago. It was part of his "due process of law."

Made Own Laws.

In the United States it is unconstitutional to take any one's property away from him without due process of law. Venezuela had the same provision, but President Castro saw to it that his legislators made laws that would allow him to do as he pleased. Then how could anyone say that his property had been taken from him without "due process of law" when the law allowed the president to take it on practically any pretext?

President Castro fell in need of some small change one day. He notified the Bank of Venezuela that he would appreciate a loan. The directors of the bank hurriedly called a conference, and knowing Castro's poor memory with regard to financial obligations, concluded to try to plead poverty. Accordingly the president was informed that the bank was out of funds. The president only smiled.

That night all of the directors of the banking institution were suddenly seized by government agents and locked up charged with aiding revolutionaries. In a note the directors informed Castro that the bank would be delighted to extend credit to the distinguished president. Castro accepted the kind offer of the directors and after he had obtained the money saw to it that the directors were released. By means similar to this Castro managed to accumulate a fortune estimated at $5,000,000.

From Americans Castro [illegible] the Bermudez [illegible] properly [illegible] steamship front. From the French he took cable concessions and from the Germans he took railways.

Nations Dumfounded

Never had Europe met such astounding audacity. The great nations were dumfounded. Then the storm broke and threatening notes galore were dispatched to Castro, who deigned to answer some of them, always in a very insulting vein, and some he didn't even bother to answer at all. The arrival of a foreign warship didn't disturb him any more than had the diplomatic notes. So impudent was he that he bewildered the powers. He beat them time and again in diplomacy. It was his game to play the United States against Europe. He knew that the Americans would not allow European intervention in Venezuela.

M. Tainy, the French charge d'affaires, dined on board the French liner Martinique in Caracas one day, as was his custom. Castro had been seeking some means to rid himself of M. Tainy for some time. The French diplomat had been more worry to Castro than all the other diplomatic representatives put together. When word was brought to Castro that the charge d'affaires was dining aboard the Martinique, he had his soldiers quietly unloose the moorings of the steamer, and as it drifted away from the dock, had it announced that M. Tainy had left Venezuela, and that consequently if he wished to return as a representative of the French government, he would have to be accredited all over again by France. In this way he insured the absence of M. Tainy for several months at least.

France was furious. She threatened Castro and even sent a warship into Venezuelan waters, but never did anything. Castro merely laughed. France would probably have made things hot for him, had not the little Venezuelan selected the very psychological moment in which to insult the great republic. For France at that time was deeply concerned in the European controversy over Morocco. Somehow Castro always managed to select psychological moments to break out. His present breaking out is a "psychological moment." Castro must have thought the time ripe for his revolution when the United States had just got over a diplomatic clash with Japan and was all mixed up in the Mexican situation.

How Castro Worked.

Gustavo Sanabria, a young man of a prominent Venezuelan family, while standing before a Caracas hotel with some friends was summoned to appear at the palace before Castro.

"Here," said Sanabria, to a friend, "Take my watch and jewelry. And come inside a moment while I write a note to my wife. I may not see her again. The president has just summoned me. Farewell, my good friends."

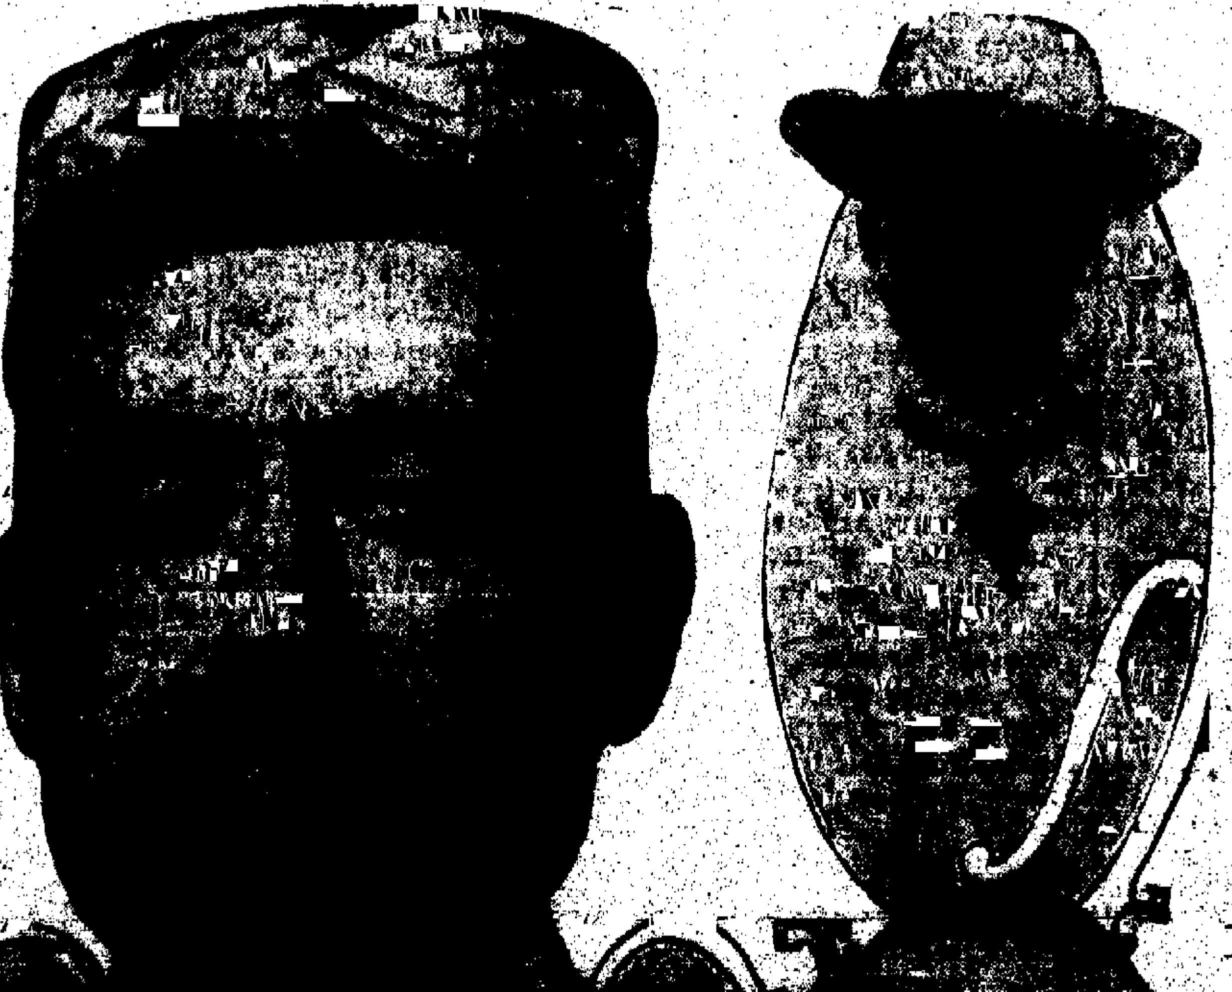
A few hours later the young man returned to his friends and greeted them with shouts and laughter. They were very much astonished to see him.

"Come, have a drink," he cried. "I have just been made the new minister for foreign affairs."

That was the way Castro worked.

Gen. Antonio Paredes led an insurrection against Castro. The insurrection was put down without much trouble, and Paredes and his associates were made prisoners. Shortly thereafter their bodies were found floating in the Orinoco. They had been "shot while trying to escape." The fugitive law (ley fuga) had been invoked. Many prominent Venezuelans did not hesitate to say that Paredes had been murdered. The law in Venezuela forbids capital punishment.

The United States made the murder of Paredes one of the grounds upon which admission to the country was forbidden Castro on his visit here. A brother of Paredes living in Berlin charged Castro with murder while the latter was still president, and forwarded the papers to Venezuela. But as Castro controlled the government completely, they were pigeonholed. In 1909, however, after Castro had been succeeded by Juan Vicente Gomez, who is now president, the ex-dictator was indicted, tried and convicted of the murder of Paredes. His exile abroad did not interfere with the trial.



On the left is shown Gen. Cipriano Castro, the little dictator-out-of-a-job, who, in an effort to once more make himself the tyrant of Venezuela, is leading a revolutionary a[illegible]rrying into that Central American republic to overthrow President Juan Vicente Gomez. At the top to the right is a photograph of President Gomez, against whom Castro's present efforts are directed, and who succeeded Castro when the latter dictator was forced to depart from his native land. Gen. Jose M. Hernandez, known as "El Mocho," shown at the bottom to the right, once a Castro lieutenant, is the man who hopes to [illegible] into the presidency of Venezuela when the smoke of battle between Gomez and Castro rises. Hernandez is at present in New York, out of consideration for his personal safety. He is the leader of the Venezuelan Nationalist party which says that he believes Gomez will put down the Castro revolution, after which he believes the people will overthrow Gomez, and, perhaps, place "El Mocho" in the seat of po[illegible] in the little republic.

THE RACE TO DEATH

From Scribner's Magazine.

In 1901 England had 302,000 tons of warships in the Mediterranean and none in the North sea.

In 1907 England had 135,000 tons of warships in the Mediterranean and 160,000 tons in the North sea.

In 1909 England had [illegible] tons of warships in the Mediterranean and 427,000 tons in the North sea.

In 1912 England had 126,481 tons of warships in the Mediterranean and 481,000 tons in the North sea.

At last accounts England had 66,000 and 500,000 tons in the North [illegible] of warships in the Mediterranean.

There has been a steady increase of the navy in Germany. In 1900 the tonnage of warships and large [illegible] over 3,800 tons was 192,81[illegible]; in 1912 it was 828,000. The number of heavy guns in 1900 was 52; in 1911 it was 236. The horsepower of engines in 1900 was 190,000; in 1911 it was 1,061,000.

The naval crews in 1900 numbered 24,326; in 1911, 57,762; and in 1913 the German naval personnel will consist of [illegible] 1900 and 1911 the tonnage of the British fleet increased from 215,000 to 1,716,000; of the German fleet from 132,000 to 829,000.

In 10 years British naval expenditure has increased from $172,500,000 to $222,500,000; in Germany the expenditure has jumped from $47,431,000 to $110,621,89[illegible]; in America the increase is from $81,000,000 to $193,314,34[illegible]. Out of the total sums Great Britain spends one-third, America one-fifth, and Germany one-half, on new construction.

WOMAN CABBY COMPETES WITH MEN FOR FARES

Mrs. L. J. Moses of New York

New Yorkers and even those who live in the suburbs of the metropolis are used to sensations, but when Mrs. L. J. Moses, holder of hack drivers license 62 drove up to the Mt. Vernon railroad station in a hack and began to solicit fares there were many citizens who gasped in astonishment. It remained for the other cabbies, though, to really create a scene. They protest that Mrs. Moses is "taking the bread out of their mouths" but Mrs. Moses declares she will continue her novel calling. Mrs. Moses said she was not a suffragette but that she believed a woman had a right to engage in any work for which she is fitted and as she was ordered by her physician to remain in the open air as much as possible, she decided that being a cabby would serve as an occupation. On the first day she used her license she did a rushing business.

WORLD FLEETS MAY PASS THROUGH CANAL

U. S. Will Invite Navies of the World to Assemble for Peace Lovefeast

By SIDNEY ESPEY.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—In addition to marking the formal opening of the Panama canal by the celebration of the Panama-Pacific exposition in San Francisco in 1915, Secretary of the Navy Daniels now is at work on a plan further to perpetuate the memory of that year by holding a naval pageant, the like of which has never been seen in the history of the world.

The secretary of the navy is preparing to issue formal invitations to all the nations of the world to send the greater part of their fleets to Hampton Roads, Va., in February or March, 1915, and to steam through the Panama canal and up to the Pacific coast to San Francisco, remaining in the harbor of the Golden Gate for a month before returning home.

The full immensity of this scheme does not appear at first glance, but consider the sight afforded by all the fleets of the world at anchor off the Virginia capes, their sleek sides glistening with white "peace paint," their banners unfurled, their guns cased in the varicolored tarpaulins affected by the various nations, the smoke from their funnels curling lazily upward as their sailors call from deck to deck. It will be a spectacle such as the world has never seen, and such as may not be witnessed again. The invincible Spanish Armada would be as a collection of fishing boats to this great world fleet. The most formidable navy of any single nation would be powerless against the attack of one-fifth of this vast gathering. The combined broadsides of this fleet could lay in crumbling ashes the entire city of New York, the while the fleet lay off shore out of reach of the shore batteries.

Will Be Great Spectacle.

And then consider what a sight the ships will make! The onlooker will be able to see, for the first time in the history of modern warfare, the flower of the combined fleets of England, Germany, Japan, France and the United States—the "big five" in matters pertaining to naval affairs. In addition, [illegible] the Oregon [illegible] it having been conclusively proven that one modern dreadnought of the type of the new New York would be more than a match for 300 ships of the type of the old Oregon, for the single giant battleship could lie out of range of the shorter distanced guns of the Oregon and batter away at the approaching fleet, sinking every one of the 300 vessels before the latter got within range.

Other Glory for Oregon.

[illegible] destined to [illegible] giant. The battleship, once the pride of the American navy, and the ship which won undying fame for her part in the Spanish-American war, and the trip the fleet [illegible] around the world, will have at least two more moments of glory before she is relegated to the naval junk heap. Her first proud moment of her old age will come when, with colors flying and guns barking defiance to the newer and younger ships of the world, she leads the American fleet through the Panama canal next spring as the first celebration of the opening of the passageway between the two oceans.

Her second moment of triumph will come when, old and decrepit, compared to the strong and virile fighting ships of the world, she leads her younger opponents once more through the canal, this time with guns covered and the bunting of peace floating from every masthead. For the second trip of the American fleet, and the first of the world fleet, through the canal is to be a signalization of peace, not war, a celebration of the great brotherhood of nations, a recognition of the fact that it has been a century since English-speaking nations battled with one another, and more than a decade and a half since two world powers tore at each other's throats.

There have been rumors of forthcoming wars for some time past. England and Germany are watching each other like the proverbial cat and mouse, while France stands by with an eye on each of her hereditary enemies. The United States and Japan are not on any too friendly terms, and Austria is straining her relations with Italy. But it is not believed that any of the war clouds will break before the opening of the canal, in 1915, and it is hoped in Washington that the year which celebrates the formal opening of the Panama canal will also see world peace—at least enough peace and prosperity to permit of the visits of all the fleets of the world through the canal, a pageant purposed by the secretary of the navy to be the greatest and most striking in the history of the world, a fitting celebration of the completion of the most stupendous engineering feat ever undertaken.

How Manufacturing Cooperation Benefits the Public

HERE is an interesting example of how honest, intelligent co-operation benefits the buying public. Here is a company whose methods and success are a valuable lesson to the business men of the world—showing them how a large number of retail merchants in a particular class by joining forces, have secured advantages for themselves and their customers impossible to get in any other way.

Eleven years ago forty retail druggists organized what is today known as The United Drug Company. It now comprises more than 7,000 leading retail druggists in each important city and town in the United States, Canada and Great Britain, each a part owner of this great enterprise.

Our big laboratories in Boston and Toronto, where Rexall Toilet Articles are made; our immense candy factories in Boston and Baltimore; our perfume manufacturing plant in Boston, by many said to be the finest in the world; our fruit juice and fountain supply factory in Boston; our soap factory in Paris, France; and our various other manufacturing and distributing plants in Boston, Chicago, St. Louis, Liverpool, Eng., and other cities, occupy a total of more than a million square feet, or 23 acres of floor space. In addition to the above, we control the entire output of great stationery mills and brush and rubber goods factories.

More than four fifths of the output of The United Drug Company is of such lines of merchandise—toilet goods, candy, stationery, brushes, rubber goods, etc.—as formerly were carried, if at all, by druggists only as "side lines."

Thus, through co-operation in manufacturing and distribution, The Rexall Stores are now able to specialize in other merchandise than drugs and medicines. They have become department stores, in which all departments have equal advantages in variety, high quality and low prices.

Because they are both manufacturers and retailers, The Rexall Stores occupy a most favorable position, for they can, and do, sell all these big lines at lowest prices consistent with high quality, and in every instance with a personal guarantee of satisfaction or money back.

The above facts should convince you of the advantages of trading at The Rexall Stores. Some of these advantages have to do with the following lines of merchandise, all of which you can get only at The Rexall Store in your town:

Rexall Toilet Goods. Including shaving requisites, tooth preparations, toilet creams, soaps and many other toilet necessities, each fresh, pure and beneficial.

Violet Dulce Perfumes and Toilet Preparations. An exquisitely scented, beautifully-packaged line, comprising extract, toilet water, talcum, complexion powders, complexion creams and other dainty toilet accessories.

Maximum Rubber Goods. "Maximum" in the sense of Maximum quality, Maximum durability, Maximum good looks, with "Maximum two-year guarantee."

Symphony Lawn and Illuminated Crest Stationery. Two fashionable lines that in every way indicate the good taste of the user.

Bouquet Jeanice Perfumes and Toilet Articles. For those who desire one individual and aristocratic fragrance in all their toilet articles.

Liggett's Chocolates. Pure, fresh and wholesome. The triumph of the confectioners' highest art.

"White Cross," Klenzo and Marguerite Tooth Brushes. Especially imported goods that outwear many other kinds that cost more.

ALWAYS THE BEST AND LATEST AT THE PRINCESS

IS OURS AN INSANE NATION?

From the New York Independent.

Would anyone take serious exception to the following as a truthful list of the great "interests" which make up our American life?

1. The ticker. 2. Woman's apparel. 3. Baseball bulletin. 4. The "movies." 5. Bridge whist. 6. Turkey trotting. 7. Yellow journal headlines and "funny" pages. 8. The prize fight.

How many people after due reflection would dispute the proposition that one hundred thousand Americans are genuinely interested in the foregoing matters and day by day excited over them, to every ten thousand that are interested in religion beyond a perfunctory church attendance, to every five thousand that are interested in politics beyond a little partisan campaign excitement, to every one thousand that are interested in schools and education, to every one hundred that are interested in reasonably good music or good opera, to every solitary individual who is interested in literature or science?

Half or more of these great "interests" have basis in the legitimate satisfaction of normal human wants. But every one of them can become an obsession.

Men and women and children, too, in multitudes, in droves, are "gone" on them, and this slang word, so accurately descriptive, is the multitude's own indictment of itself. Culture and beauty are scored, knowledge is sniffed at, obligation is forgotten, work is neglected in the feverish following of the "quotation" or the "score" in the senseless slavery to "mode," in the surrender to sensual pleasure.

And why? Is this wretched folly and madness the best exhibition we can make of ourselves? Is the American mind inherently inane, or hopelessly inadequate? Is it by heredity given over to drivel? We are not ready to think so. Rather, we believe, the American is suggestible, easily excited and credulous. He is not feebleminded. On the contrary, he is perilously near insanity, as his shocking history of lawless emotionalism, freak religion-making, lynching and homicidal habit too well proves. And upon this suggestibility and gullibility well organized, wholly cold blooded and unscrupulous enterprise plays—for profit!

AN OLD MAN IN GREELEY, COLO., WHO IS FAMOUS AS A VIOLIN MAKER

From the American Magazine.

Many master musicians have pronounced George W. Fisk of Greeley, Colo, the greatest violin maker in the world "The American Stradivarius" He combs the world for the rare bits of wood which are necessary for the perfect violin and yet he finishes less than eight instruments a year. Following is an extract from an article on this interesting man

"Every day he works in his little shop, which has served his purpose for 36 years. He has now nearly completed his one hundred and fifty first violin. He tries to make them all alike, and during the last 20 years he has not had to put one on the shelf or take one apart for changes after it had once been put together. He is now in his seventy-fifth year having been born in Bennington Vt in 1838. Later he moved to Hoosick Falls, where he became an expert pattern-maker

"Mr. Fisk came from New York to Colorado in 1870 with the Union colonists, headed by Horace Greeley and N C Meeker. He settled in Greeley where he has lived almost continuously since that time, and where for [illegible] years he [illegible] a theater [illegible] at [illegible] day [illegible] evening for his own amusement meanwhile amusing also his neighbors and passersby, who are charmed by the sweetness and soulfulness of his music, which ranges from grand opera selections to simple, beautiful melodies He says that he cannot play as he used to, that his right arm, once injured, does not carry as steady a down-bow as it once did

But he can still coax tones of rare sweetness out of the violins of his own make, into which he works kindred qualities of his own radiant soul which respond to his loving touch with sweet alacrity when he plays

Mr Fisk has made as high as eight violins in one year but does not usually turn out so many, for he takes great care in the manufacture of each of them graduating them with wonderful precision where the variation of a one thousandth of an inch might mean the utter unbalance of tone, and might render the work of foregone weeks unfruitful by bringing about the ruination of the instrument. He has no trouble in disposing of his violins having but two or three on hand at this time. At one time in recent years he was nearly two years behind in his orders and experienced great difficulty in catching up. [illegible] of violin wood, he has [illegible] material of rare quality [illegible] there on rafters, [illegible] his little shop. He [illegible] in various places [illegible] well adapted to the making of high-grade violins Some of these pieces have been seasoned for many years."

A KINGDOM IS FOR SALE

From the Wide World Magazine

Scattered around the shores of the United Kingdom are a number of islands, large and small, whose proprietors, while owning allegiance to King George, are, nevertheless, monarchs of all they survey, with greater power over the comfort and wellbeing of their "subjects" than his majesty enjoys. Indeed, in some instances the British parliament has no power to tax these island estates without the consent of their owners, nor can anyone land or reside upon them without the permission of their rulers Some of them are but a few acres in extent, while other run into many square miles of territory, boasting of a lordly castle and quite a large population.

Perhaps the principal island property in the United Kingdom is Lewis, in the Outer Hebrides, whose present ruler is Major Matheson Lewis is certainly no mean kingdom, seeing that it boasts of an area of 437,224 acres and a population of nearly 30,000 souls Indeed, it is the largest island in the United Kingdom next to Ireland For the man desirous of setting up in a moderate sort of way as a monarch here is an admirable chance for Major Matheson is anxious to dispose of his kingdom

The little kingdom boasts of extensive lochs where magnificent fishing is to be had, while in some parts it is very mountainous Mealasbhal and Ben More, the two highest peaks, towering 1,800 odd feet above sea level Over its extensive moors and forest land the red deer still roam. Everywhere there are numerous antiquities and Druidical remains The owner's residence is a magnificent old castle close Stornoway the principal town. Many members of the royal family have stayed here, including the late King Edward The principal industry is fishing, and in the season the girls of Stornoway go all over Scotland packing herrings Next to fishing cloth weaving engages the attention of the islanders, who are a hardy and thrifty set of people the majority of whom know no other tongue but Gaelic Major Matheson is asking $1,500,000 for this island kingdom

CONGRESSMEN TIRED; WANT TO GO HOME

"Nothing Doing," Says Pres. Wilson, Until Tariff Bill Is Passed

By JONATHAN WINFIELD.

WASHINGTON Aug 23 With summer on the wane tired members of congress have at last become reconciled to the fact that both the tariff and currency questions must be disposed of before adjournment and have settled back to await the arrival of fall

It's pretty tough on the statesmen who had figured on adjournment about July 1 or August 1. Earlier in the year the average member thought he would get away to the seashore or mountains about this time, and the president's insistence upon carrying out certain plans made at the White house and not on Capitol hill came as a severe shock

"Gee we might as well stay on here now and carry the thing through to the regular session in December" complained one perspiring member of the house who had just sent his wife to the country with little hope of following her soon He added

Almost Continuous Session.

"It seems to me that congress has been in almost continuous session for the past five years It's either a long regular session or an extra session following the short ones I've practically given up all ties back home have surrendered my law practice and might as well register as an all-year-round citizen of Washington as far as business is concerned

The truth is the continuous performance in congress is costing the members as well as the country a lot of money The majority of the national legislators are lawyers, men who have built up pretty good practices back home Otherwise they might not be here In the old days—and not so very long ago at that there was less for congress to do somehow There wasn't a half dozen investigating committees grinding away, the tariff question was comparatively quiet, international muddles were few and far between and the country struggled along some way with its old fashioned currency system

Sixteen years of Republican rule rather got everybody in the habit of taking things easy and not hunting for trouble, and there didn't seem half so much for congress to do, In those days a member of congress could count upon spending at least four to six months of the year at home and frequently he could put in eight to nine months on his private affairs. It made a difference financially, and otherwise.

Measures Delayed.

Since early in the Taft administration, however, congress has been grinding away, getting a good start with the Payne bill, which passed on August 5, 1909 When President Wilson called the current extra session last April it was hoped to get the Underwood bill through by August 1, 1913, or not later than August 15, but such hopes vanished when the senate finance committee and the senate caucus held up the measure almost two months after it passed the house, delaying its presentation to the senate proper

Then the president came along with the currency message and the anxious-to-get-home fellows just groaned At first there were hopes of calling off the president, and hints were thrown out that currency might go over until the regular session The president's message was plain enough but he supplemented it with certain observations made when inquiring statesmen dropped in at the White house to ascertain if he was really in earnest about this all-summer business In the language of the street, the president said "nothing doing on the adjournment talk, and here the legislators are

The grumbling increased as the weather got hotter and one day a few senators were seen with their heads close together in the senate chamber The Republicans were feeling out the Democrats on a proposition something like this Republicans' Proposition.

"Now you Democrats want to get the tariff bill through Well the Republicans will agree not to make long speeches against the bill in other words we'll let you go ahead and rush your blamed tariff bill through if you'll agree to adjourn right away and come back here along in November and take up currency If you don't agree we'll take our own time and talk tariff as long as we feel like it

The proposed truce listened good to a number of the Democrats but within a day or so the leaders of the party returned from the White house and said that President Wilson was determined to keep congress here until it passed both tariff and currency bills That seemed to end the negotiations and the Republicans went ahead talking tariff

The physical inconvenience of [illegible] all summer [illegible] in Washington [illegible] is but one of the causes behind the complaints of overworked statesmen. The [illegible] matter of finance is [illegible] Things have actually [illegible] congress men [illegible] their entire time to the government's business and [illegible] the sidelines. The [illegible] lecturers in the senate and house are compelled to [illegible] the midsummer engagements the lawyer members are forced to turn their law [illegible] and the farmer statesmen have [illegible] [illegible] lawyers [illegible] extra [illegible] here [illegible] Washington. [illegible] congress [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] taken [illegible] [illegible] them

Heat Is Quick to Affect the Bowels

Well Known Fact That Extreme Heat Conduces to Chronic Constipation.

So many people are in the habit of eating cold food in hot weather that constipation is very common during summer. It is best to vary the food and have some hot things as for example soups and hot fish and meats, if that is to be the diet Iced water should be drunk sparingly

In spite of all care people will become constipated and if you find yourself in that condition you can get immediate relief by the use of Dr Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin There is no time of the year when you should be more careful of constipation than in the summer for many of the serious illnesses as well as the fatalities result from a clogging up of the bowels You also need general good health to withstand the heat and hence Syrup Pepsin is best to take because it contains tonic ingredients that help to build up the entire system

Numerous users throughout the land will verify these facts among them Mr George C Allen 405 N. Main St, Reading Mass, who recovered his health completely after using only two bottles and Miss Anna Schoff 249 S Washington St Baltimore Md who uses it for constipation and now has her mother and friends also using it. They now avoid drastic remedies like cathartics tablets purgatives salt waters, pills and such things Dr Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is mild and pleasant, and children like it You can obtain it of any druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a large bottle. Each bottle must do what is claimed or your money will be refunded

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it, postpaid, by addressing Dr W B Caldwell, 4?? Washington St, Monticello, Ill.

SAFETY IN CITY STREETS

From Leslie's

A pamphlet issued by the American Museum of Safety, New York of which Dr William H Tolman is the director, impresses on girls and boys the dangers of city streets and gives the following useful rules, which every city child should heed

Never jump on or off a moving car

Never stand or sit on the car step, nor put your head or hands out of the car window

THE DAY'S NEWS IN SPORT CIRCLES

A Hero One Day and a Mutt Next That's It

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug 2[illegible] A hero one day and a mutt the next. It is that way with the pitcher and the hitter and the manager. And you can carry it on to the ball club as a whole if you wish.

The pitcher holds the league leaders to few hits and a low score. He sees his name in the head lines the next morning and hears his praise sung on all sides. He likes it.

The next time out this same pitcher is lambasted all over the lot by the league trailers. Next day the papers pan him more or less and he hears that he didn't have a thing but a glove and possibly a faint smile. He doesn't like it.

The hitter goes to bat with runners on second and third, the tying and the winning run if you please. He biffs the hit that wins the game. He's a sterling swatsmith. The sport writers search their powerful vocabularies for fine sounding words. He reads in the papers that he's about the niftiest little pinch walloper in the league. It sounds good to him.

The next day perhaps this same sterling biffer twice comes to bat with a runner on third. He isn't able to get the ball out of the infield. And even a long fly would have scored the run that would have tied. And another fly would have won. The stories play his failure strong. It doesn't appeal to him.

When the Switch Worked Well.

And the manager. Well, the boss shows remarkable judgment when he pulls Lefty Hincher and sends in Careless Woody, a right-handed batter. For didn't Woody swat the blow that won the game? The manager was on the job with the [illegible] at the right time. Papers accord him full credit for the strategic move. He is pitted.

Yet the next day the man[illegible] jerks the pitcher who has walked three men and the rescue [illegible] is binged for a couple of hits [illegible] gone. Next [illegible] that it was [illegible] to take Hinby [illegible] out of [illegible] had filled [illegible] ability to [illegible] the next three men. Naturally, the manager doesn't [illegible] on that [illegible] of dope. And so it is all through the game [illegible] today [illegible]

Robert [illegible] and William Burgess Powell two of [illegible] on whom fortune [illegible] kindly this season [illegible] from the Minneapolis [illegible] after William Burgess had suffered [illegible] 22 hits af[illegible] fall.

Oh, Yes, Last Year'

"Well Bi[illegible]" said Dust, in a careless sort of way, probably thinking of that game his mates had tossed away in Milwaukee last Monday, "we held them up in the race last year but we're a fine pair of bums this season."

It was a remark that carried sympathy with it and Big Bill smiled. They were heroes last year; they're mutts this season. It's the way of the game. And it's only human nature that the ball player in his mutt days harks back to the time of his hero hours and curses because the fans forget.

Send Coaches to Colleges, Is Harvard Edict

BIG DEMAND FOR GOOD MEN AS TRAINERS

Men Who Teach Nation's Youth Should Be Especially Fitted for Position

CAMBRIDGE, Mass, Aug 2[illegible] In discussing the freshman athletic problem at Harvard, William F. Garcelon, former graduate athletic treasurer, makes another plea for an athletic coaching course for those students who are preparing for a career as [illegible] in schools and colleges. Mr. Garcelon states:

"It has been urged for the past five years that some action be taken on this matter, but Harvard has stood still while nearly every small college in the country has moved ahead. The winning of games and bringing home of championships to the university give us much joy. Athletics organization and efficiency are worth while and should not be and have not been neglected, but the boys who do not know the joy of running, of leaping, or being physically active on the green grass under the blue sky, should be given a chance to learn what all that means. Those who are studying to be educators should be given this help in order that they may get the most out of and put the most into their work.

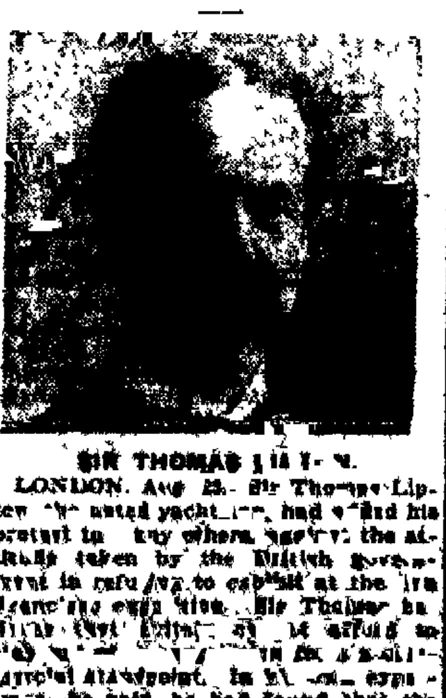
"During the last 15 years there has come a demand from public and private schools for trained teachers who could also take general charge of athletics.

"Failing to find men who understand the athletic problems from a broad study of them, they have generally accepted men who have been skillful football or baseball players or track athletes.

"The appointments office at Harvard is [illegible] receiving [illegible] men who [illegible] with [illegible] knowledge of athletics and physical education. The added duties in athletics command from $[illegible] to $[illegible] additional salary.

"Harvard today does not qualify men to fill such places except through study in the summer school of physical education. What is needed is a course of lectures and instruction which would give teachers practice in the fundamentals of football, baseball and all other sports and teach them the relative value of all sports for growing boys. Instruction should also be given in training methods in diet and in general athletic organization and administration."

LIPTON BELIEVES BRITAIN SHOULD EXHIBIT AT SAN FRANCISCO



SIR THOMAS LIPTON.

LONDON, Aug 23.—Sir Thomas Lipton, the noted yachtsman, had [illegible] his protest [illegible] the attitude taken by the British government in refusing to exhibit at the [illegible] [illegible] Sir Thomas [illegible] [illegible] commercial standpoint. In [illegible] he said he had found that the results he gained from exhibiting at [illegible] and St. Louis fairs were very satisfying.

[illegible]

NEW YORK, August 2[illegible]—That baseball magnates have about as much sentiment as a Mexican revolutionist was again demonstrated in the summary [illegible] of Jake Stahl as manager of the Boston American team. Here was a veteran who had put in several years of hard work building up a championship organization, which he finally achieved last year. Then, of course, everything was lovely for Mr. Stahl. He could go right up to any of the magnates on the American league side, and call them by their first names. But, at the opening of the present season, someone threw a monkey wrench into the works and the old machine buckled up. In other words, the members of the team allowed spite and jealousies to creep in, and the smooth running harmony essential to a pennant race was gone. Manager Stahl tried everything in his power to restore harmony and efficiency. He threatened, fought, pleaded and cajoled, but when a team gets so far on the road of mutual spite it is beyond the help of diplomacy. James McAleer, owner of the Red Sox, expected Stahl to shoot the team along this season as he did last. The thing was impossible. He didn't make good, so he had to go.

Much sympathy is felt for Stahl, especially by the fans who still retain a little sentiment about baseball. But the magnates themselves, of course, say nothing, recognizing that baseball is a grim business. If Murphy could tie the can to Frank Chance after the latter had won four league championships for him and two world's series, and get away with it, it is not surprising that McAleer escapes with very little panning for "letting out" a man who permitted a world's champion team to go to decay in the first year succeeding the winning of the title.

"The law in baseball as in everything else is: Make good or get out."

Motorcycle and automobile owners in Grady county, Oklahoma, are planning a joint organization, its purpose being protection against unjust legislation, aiding in the enforcing of laws for public safety, repression of excessive speeding, and the furtherance of the good roads movement.

GERMANY HAS TWO STARS OF RING IN PAPKE AND WOLGAST

Teutons Pride Selves on Producing Clean Cut Prizefighters; Champs in Making

By RAY C. PEARSON

[illegible] two fighters [illegible] the fact that they [illegible] German [illegible] but their parents [illegible] they are German Americans.

[illegible] two fighting men who represent two different classes [illegible] the German in the fighting game would not have amounted to much. The dope shows that up to the time they appeared on the scene there were few who ever had much of a splurge in the boxing sea, and this despite the fact that they were not lacking in numbers.

Billy Papke, the Spring Valley, Ill., middleweight, was the first to start something for the Germans, and his success left no doubt in the minds of those who follow the sport closely as to whether the boys of his race are made of the stuff of which great fighters are constituted. Papke proceeded to settle the argument once and for all, by achieving the greatest honor that any fighter may gain—the world's championship in his class.

Wolgast Pride of Germans.

Closely on the heels of Papke came another German who didn't stop until he had had the honor of occupying the place of world's lightweight champion. His name was Wolgast and he hailed from Cadillac, Mich., where early in his pugilistic career he was honored with the title of "Michigan Bearcat" and "Cadillac Dutchman." It really isn't necessary to say a great deal about Wolgast, for everyone who knows anything about boxing knows that he [illegible] one of the greatest lightweights that ever [illegible] the ropes to do battle.

Papke and Wolgast were the two boys that carried their race to the front, for it is hard to find any other German who ever achieved anything resembling prominence. A few years ago Milwaukee boasted a German named Charlie Neary, who "threatened" to do things. But Neary merely threatened, for when it came to the real test he was not "there" by a long way. The Brewery city fighter made several good fights, according to the "dope," every one of which took place in Milwaukee. It soon became noised around that the home folks were playing the "favorite son" stuff to the limit, which, it was claimed, accounted for Neary's success.

"Fighting Harp" Surprises Neary.

Something was "framed" for the Milwaukee Dutchman. A Chicago promoter, after much persuasion, managed to sign Neary for a bout in the Chicago suburb of Blue Island. The promoter already had signed the other fight, who happened to be Willie Fitzgerald, known as the "Fighting Harp." Fitz was some good scrapper when in his prime and was pretty fair at the time the match was made.

Neary and his manager took the bait nicely and journeyed down to Chicago to meet the "has-been." What happened to Neary was assault, battery and everything closely allied. For the full 10 rounds Fitzgerald knocked Neary to the canvas just as often as the latter could get up. There were so many knockdowns that everybody at the ringside lost count. [illegible] Neary [illegible] the gaff. The Dutchman [illegible] a clean blow on Fitz [illegible] with a pair of hands [illegible] from punching his [illegible] covered with Neary's gore and it was the [illegible] beating that any fighter ever received.

[illegible] finished the Brewery [illegible] fighter and even in Milwaukee after that he accomplished nothing worth talking about.

Several Other Fair Boxers.

There are a few German-Americans performing at the present time who possess fair class, but seem to be lacking in the stuff of which the champions are made. "Knockout" Brown of New York is one of them, while another is Pal Brown, a western, hailing from Hibbing, Minn. Both are lightweights. Leo Houck, the Lancaster (Pa.) middleweight, gave great promise a couple of years ago, but he has not achieved any great success with the padded mitts since then. Al Kaufmann of California is another German-American of the past, but Al met his Waterloo at the hands of [illegible] who under no circumstances could be rated as topnotchers in the heavyweight division.

But going back to Papke and Wolgast shows most conclusively that the German must be [illegible] with in the boxing game. The man from whom Papke won the title was credited with being the greatest fighter of [illegible] pugilism, and, though Billy did not long hold his laurels, the credit for that victory cannot be taken away from him. Incidentally it [illegible] of note that the Illinois [illegible] knocked out his man, who [illegible] be Stanley Ketchel, now [illegible] among those who have [illegible]

Papke had beaten everybody [illegible] he met until he bumped up against Ketchel, and in their first battle, a [illegible] round affair, [illegible] was given [illegible] Papke forces. Then a return [illegible] was arranged, and it was in [illegible] and mill that Papke won the title [illegible] by a knockout in the 12th round.

Verdict Awarded by Ketchel.

It remained for the next fight of the pair to bring out something unusual in the game. Ketchel turned right about and knocked out Papke in 11 rounds, regaining his crown. The "Thunderbolt" had held the title for less than three months. Papke is still a member of the fighting fraternity, but he is near the end of his fighting string, as his recent bouts show.

Wolgast also is about through with the game, for he announced not long ago that he would not fight again. In winning the lightweight title the Michigan "Bearcat" turned a trick that no other fighter had been able to turn, and that was to give that famous Dane, Bat Nelson, a licking. It took Wolgast 40 rounds to do it, but he certainly did a business like job. Nelson never was the same fighter after that beating.

Slips After Losing Title.

The Michigan German held the crown for less than two years and finally lost it through the medium of a foul, the boy gaining the title being Willie Ritchie of San Francisco. That bout ended in the sixteenth round, and from Ritchie's performance since it is evident that Wolgast was up against the real thing. After losing to Ritchie, Wolgast found the toboggan waiting for him and he has been sliding pugilistically ever since. "Harlem Tommy" Murphy beat him in 20 rounds and the [illegible] ever was conceded a chance to be champion.

[illegible] has come to the best of [illegible] Wolgast's defeat came just as had that of Nelson and the famous negro Gans. Before [illegible] looking over those who have [illegible] champions of his class one is forced to concede that the Michigan "Bearcat" was one of the best and toughest pieces of fighting machinery that ever swung a glove.

Tire Prices Down

How We Did It Without Skimping On the Costliest Tire That's Built

Here are a few [illegible]

Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires used to cost one-fifth more than other standard tires. And yet they gained the topmost place in Tiredom.

[illegible] this extra price.

In the base of each tire we vulcanize six flat bands of 126 braided wires. It is thus that we make a hookless tire—a tire that can't be rim-cut.

Then every No-Rim-Cut gets the "On-Air Cure." It is final-vulcanized on air bags. This is done to save blow-outs. It adds to our tire cost $1,500 per day.

Then we use in each tread base a patent "rivet" fabric. We paid $50,000 for this feature to prevent tread separation.

Not one of these costly features are used in any other make of tires.

Now No Extra Price

Now these same tires, with all of these features, cost you no extra price. Not a standard tire of any type costs you any less.

And these are the reasons:

Our overhead cost, in days of small output, ran as high as thirty per cent.

It is now less than six per cent. Our multiplied output in this one way has cut our tire cost twenty-four per cent.

We have built new factories with modern equipment, with every new invention in labor saving machinery.

We have clung to small capitalization. On this account we can and do keep our profits under 8½ per cent.

All these savings, as fast as we make them, [illegible] to users of [illegible]

Note What Our Price Includes

Rival makers must in some way meet the Goodyear price. But please consider what our price includes.

A tire that never rim-cuts.

A tire built to save blow-outs, in a way so costly that no one else employs it.

A tire built in our patent way to prevent tread separation. And built in every other way for longest mileage, regardless of the cost.

That's Why They Outsell

Hundreds of thousands now use these tires. They far outsell any other. Yet the demand from users is now growing faster than ever before in our history.

That's for the reasons told you.

Rim-Cutting alone, with old type tires, ruins 31.8 per cent—almost one tire in three. Blow-outs and loose treads, which our methods combat, are immensely costly items.

You should get these savings, get them all when you pay the Goodyear price.

Our dealers are everywhere.

POLO TEAMS SHOW CLASS IN FIRST GAMES; LOCALS HAVE A CHANCE AT ONE OF THE CUPS

was fast enough for the first game. Flanked on the south by a hundred automobiles—limousines, touring cars and all the gasoline family—$500,000 worth of machinery at least; on the north by a grandstand filled with society people from Colorado Springs, Denver, Wyoming, Chicago and many other cities, the field had the appearance of one of the great polo courses of the country where national championships are decided.

The first game did not begin until [illegible] o'clock, the [illegible] awaiting the arrival of Foxhall Keene. Lieutenant Scott, [illegible] of the Twelfth cavalry, [illegible] yesterday's game, and the [illegible] brought out [illegible] as fast as the [illegible], for he has to be on the [illegible] of every play.

[illegible]

of ponies did not delay the game, and whenever a man lost part of his accouterments he chased back to his lackeys for them.

Denver Team Ties Score.

Denver tied up the score at the opening of the second period and two minutes later Foxhall Keene, astride his fastest pony and having become accustomed to field and players, made an excellent drive and put the brown in the lead.

The second period opened with the score 4 to 4, and with fresh mounts and rested and refreshed, the teams came back to win or ride their ponies' heads off. Webb and Keene both scored goals in this period, the shot of Keene's made at the east goal, being at a most difficult angle. The ball sailed between the bars 10 feet from the ground. Lafayette Hughes was the star offensive player of the Denver club at this point of the game and, aided by clever defensive work on the part of Bull, was able to take the ball the entire length of the field to a goal on two occasions.

The sixth period, unproductive of scores, was the fiercest of the day. It was in this period that the backs were called on to work and they did. Bull for Denver and Hobbs for the locals blocked ponies, men and balls and only those at the goals knew how near both teams came to scoring.

Bull Causes Finally.

In one of these plays Bull sent the ball [illegible] the goal he was [illegible] deducting [illegible] of a point [illegible].

[illegible] Bull [illegible]. With but a point [illegible] to fight [illegible] in the [illegible] of the last [illegible].

Cheyenne's [illegible] from the first [illegible]. The Springs team has the fastest ponies, the fastest of all four squads playing yesterday. Reaching their stride, the players should this week display better team work and have a good chance to win some of the trophies offered. Bolstered by a dozen of [illegible] Keene's [illegible], the local stables will be well able to withstand the strain of other games. Yesterday's matches were unmarred by any accidents in spite of the soft field and "feeling out" tactics of riders.

With the crowds eager for more polo, the Sheridan Polo Ranch club four, headed by Malcolm Moncrief, an experienced English poloist, and the Denver Prairie Dogs, headed by D. Bryant Turner, trotted out on the field.

From the first it was evident that it would be a stern battle. The combination work of the Prairie Dogs was superb. Apparently stunned by the fierceness of the attack of the Denver team the Englishmen from Sheridan could not use their defensive tactics and successive goals by D. Bryant Turner, J. Foster Symes and Barrie Huston in the first period seemed to put the Wyoming men "up in the air." Symes made a beautiful lofting hit in the second period and shot the score up to 4 to 0. The Sheridan four came back in the fourth and McCoy and Moncrief both shot goals, but not until after some daredevil riding and slashing.

Symes Puts Up Great Game.

Features of this game were the riding of Symes, who seemed to cover his mount from neck to tail. Bullinger's defensive play for the Wyoming team prevented numerous scores that Turner's and Huston's riding and driving had nearly completed. The fourth and fifth periods were unproductive of scoring, but the team play began to make itself evident and crisscrossed puts and drives were blocked time and again. These tactics brought the willow to both ends of the field many times necessitating races up and down the green. Bullinger scored one in the sixth period that seemed to roll just outside the posts, but the referee believed it a goal.

Both teams desperate to win, the last two periods were thrillers. [illegible] had settled over the field, but the spectators remained. The Sheridan team was at its best and the two quartets seemed to be evenly matched in all departments of the game. But no scoring resulted.

With possibilities of overlapping late Labor Day, Chairman Ashton [illegible] of the tournament committee, is thinking of staging a morning game some day this week.

More Matches Tomorrow.

Tomorrow the Twelfth United States cavalry team will play the Cheyenne Mountain Country club and the Polo ranch team will again [illegible] the Denver [illegible]. [illegible] will [illegible] Cups [illegible] be the [illegible] for the [illegible]. The cavalry officers, all [illegible] and polo [illegible] of the [illegible] stable. 'Bull' Young Dies From Willard's Knockout

Kansas Cowpuncher and Others Connected With Mill Charged With Manslaughter

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—John W. ("Bull") Young, a cowboy heavyweight pugilist, died in a hospital here today of injuries suffered at Vernon arena last night when he was knocked out by Jess Willard. Immediately after his death, warrants charging manslaughter were issued against Willard and 11 others connected with the fight, while legislators, clergymen and club women revived the demand for an antiprizefight bill in California.

The operation upon Young's skull to relieve the cerebral hemorrhage, which followed the knockout in the eleventh round of his scheduled 20-round fight with Willard, was at first pronounced a success, but was rapidly proved otherwise. The pugilist remained in a state of coma from the time he received Willard's right uppercut to the jaw until his death at 9:30 o'clock this morning, when surgeons who operated upon him stated that death was due to concussion of the brain.

When Young's death was made known to Sheriff W. A. Hammel, who had placed the principal persons concerned in the fight under technical arrest last night, warrants for 12 were issued by Deputy District Attorney Arthur L. Veitch. The warrants charged the following with manslaughter:

Jess Willard, Young's opponent; Thomas J. McCarey and Al Greenewald, promoters of the fight; Harry Gilmore, Jr., manager of Young; Tom Jones, manager of Willard; Charles F. Eyton, referee; Albert G. Ha[illegible]der, timekeeper, and Jesse Cameron, Eddie Webster, Charles A[illegible], John [illegible] and Harry [illegible], seconds.

Through [illegible] the attorney for the [illegible] Athletic club, under [illegible] auspices the fight was staged, nine of the accused [illegible] surrendered [illegible] to [illegible] at 10 o'clock. The three [illegible]

The nine also [illegible] before Justice of the [illegible] examination and fixed Willard's bond at $5,000 and those of the [illegible] at $1,000 each. The bonds were provided by James J. Jeffries, former heavyweight champion of the world, and John Brink, a cabaret proprietor, and the accused were given their liberty at 1 o'clock.

It was said the outcome of the [illegible] would be based on a ruling of Judge Frank R. Willis of the criminal department of the superior court, that contests licensed by municipalities were legal. His decision was rendered two or three years ago in the cases of George Memsic and Ad Wolgast, who were arrested for prize fighting.

Willard expressed great sorrow at Young's death and the other men taken into custody spoke similarly. Referee Eyton declared the only "hard blow struck in the fight was the knockout punch" and that "until the finish no damage was done." He said there had been "no occasion for stopping the fight."

Arthur Pelkey, opponent of Luther McCarty when the latter was killed several months ago at Calgary, Alberta, Canada, was so affected by the death of Young, who was his friend, that he called off his fight with Charley Miller, scheduled for the Vernon arena September 23.

Noah Young, a brother of the dead pugilist, will take the body back for burial at his father's ranch at Glen Rock, Wyo., where the fighter had promised his father to seek retirement if Willard defeated him.

Dr. A. F. [illegible], autopsy surgeon, conducted a [illegible] examination of the [illegible] late today and found that the death was produced by [illegible]. [illegible] of the [illegible] contributed to Young's demise. There were no evidences of spinal trouble.

COLORADO REVOLVER TEAM BREAKS CAMP PERRY MARK

Captain W. H. Clapton Wins Presidents' Cup and Title Champion Individual Military Rifleman of U. S.

CAMP PERRY, O., Aug. 23.—By winning the president's match today, Captain W. H. Clopton of the Thirteenth United States cavalry is the champion individual military rifleman of the United States. In this match he has a score of 266.

Second place was taken by Corporal C. E. Long of Massachusetts, with a score of 260 points, and third by George W. Chesley of Connecticut, who scored 259. Last year's record of 235 was beaten 31 points.

The Herrick cup match, which opened Friday morning on the 800 and 900-yard ranges, was concluded today on the 1,000-yard range, resulting in a victory for the Iowa state team which scored 1527 points. The Massachusetts team was second with a score of 1,720, and the United States cavalry team third with 1,651. The Iowa score beats the Palma score of last year, which was 1,720.

Shooting in the championship revolver match opened with three teams lined up and the final scores resulted in a victory for Colorado, with a score of 1,007, a world's record for this match. New York was second with a total of 916 and the Illinois team third with 865. The winning and record making team was made up of the following shooters:

Captain A. H. Hardy, Arthur Smith, A. M. Poindexter, D. C. Coffin and C. M. McCutcheon.

RAY CAMPBELL WILL FACE RITCHIE IN BOUT LABOR DAY

VANCOUVER, B. C., Aug. 23.—The elimination contest at Brighouse arena today to decide whether Eddie Moy of Allentown, Pa., or Ray Campbell of Seattle, should be the opponent of Willie Ritchie here on Labor day, was won by the Seattle lad after a very lively fight of 10 rounds. Neither fighter showed much class. Campbell inflicted all the punishment and had Moy hanging on in the last round.

While the promoters of the Welsh-Ritchie match scheduled for September 20 declare everything is settled and that the match will surely take place, Welsh's sprained ankle is still giving him trouble and his manager is in no hurry to post forfeit money.

One of the most remarkable discoveries of modern times is a fighter whom Johnny Kilbane can knock out.

Chance Predicts Great World's Championship Series; Says 15 Games

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Basing his predictions on the assumption that the Giants and Athletics will be the contenders Frank Chance forecasts a remarkable struggle for world's championship honors this autumn.

"The leaders of the two leagues appear to be very evenly matched," said Chance, in discussing the teams, "and I look for a very close, exciting series. In my opinion, the winning club will be the one that gets the early 'breaks' in the play. You can't eliminate the 'breaks' in baseball, and in a series as important and as short as the world's championship it has always proved a very prominent factor. In all the series in which I have taken part it [illegible] the 'breaks' came our [illegible] again it helped the other fellows, [illegible] play a leading part.

[illegible] to fields [illegible] was the better club. Unfortunately, however, such a long drawn-out series would fail to hold interest. Coming at the end of a seven months' season, 90 per cent of the fans of the two cities would lose interest in the play before the completion of the play. It has been suggested that playing several of the games in cities other than those directly interested might solve this problem. I have no doubt that Pittsburg, Chicago and Washington would turn out big crowds for one game each, even though the Athletics and Giants were the contending teams. It's a difficult problem to please both player and spectator, but I believe that eventually a more satisfactory method will be evolved for deciding the world's championship."

Rubber Series.

Should the New York and Philadelphia clubs win their respective league pennants the world's series of 1913 will be in the nature of a "rubber." At present each has a world's championship title won at the expense of the other. The Giants quickly nipped the championship aspirations of the Athletics in their initial meeting of 1905. Under the direction of McGraw, the New York team won four of the five games played, all of which were shutouts. Six years later Connie Mack secured his revenge, for the Athletics won four out of six games from the Giants.

Of the players who engaged in the series of 1905, Bender, Plank, Davis and Murphy are still enrolled with the Athletics, although the latter two are seldom in the regular lineup. Mathewson and Wiltse are the only Giants of those days who still wear the New York uniform. It is a singular feature of the game that Bender and Mathewson, the respective club heroes of the 1905 series, are still past masters of the art of pitching, eight years after their initial clash and may face each other during the play next October, unless an eleventh hour rush by one of the other league clubs upsets the predictions of the baseball prophets. To date the world's series has been an excellent financial proposition for the New York and Philadelphia clubs and players. The two series netted the club owners $214,387.47 and the players $155,804.81.

Bat Nelson demands vindication in spite of the fact that Theodore Roosevelt and Barratt O'Hara beat him to it.

MERKLE REVIVES FROM HIS BATTING SLUMP

FRED MERKLE

After a protracted slump in the batting line, Fred Merkle, the first baseman of John McGraw's New York Giants, has again returned to his old-time form with the ash stick and is now hitting the swift ones quite regularly. In Thursday's game Merkle and Larry Doyle lead the slugging assault.

HALL, C. C. 2-MILER ENTERS MARATHON

Winner of Denver Memorial Day Distance Race Also Will Participate

The latest entry in the Labor day Marathon race which opens the Shan Kive September 1, is Frank Hall, the star two miler from Colorado college. Hall is in good condition and should put up a stiff race for first place.

William Scott, "the man in overalls," who took fourth in the Memorial day race at Denver this spring, also will run in the Shan Kive Marathon, according to word received yesterday.

The three bicycles to be given as prizes to the winners of the race are now on exhibition in the windows of the Colorado Springs Light, Heat and Power company's store at Tejon and Kiowa streets. In addition medals will be given to all contestants finishing within one hour and 30 minutes.

Wednesday is the last day for entries in the race, the list closing at 6 p. m. that day. Entry blanks can be secured from the sporting editors of The Gazette, the Evening Telegraph or the Rocky Mountain News of Denver for 25 cents, which admits to membership in the A. A. U. The race will be run under A. A. U. auspices over a course 10.3 miles in length, beginning and ending at the Shan Kive grounds near Adams crossing.

JOHNSON AND WILLIAMS IN SEMIS TENNIS PLAY

Champion Maurice E. McLoughlin Overwhelming Favorite to Win National Title Again

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 23.—Wallace F. Johnson and R. Norris Williams, II, won their way into the semifinal round of the national singles championship today, defeating J. R. Strachan and C. M. Washburn, respectively, in the Saturday's play of the annual tournament of the United States Lawn Tennis association. Johnson defeated Strachan 2-6, 6-2, 6-2, 6-4, and Williams eliminated Washburn 6-1, 7-5, 6-3. Williams will play Nat Niles and Johnson will face Champion Maurice E. McLoughlin on Monday. The winners, in turn, will play for the national singles on Tuesday. As the field stands McLoughlin is opposed by three eastern stars, but after his wonderful demonstration of tennis against Clothier he is an overwhelming favorite to win the championship again.

CHANGE BUYS PITCHER ROSE OF HOUSTON, TEX.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Manager Frank Chance of the New York Americans today purchased Pitcher Rose of the Houston, Tex., club, and he will report here September 10. Rose is a left hander and leads the Texas league pitchers in winning percentage. He has won 25 games and lost seven. His twenty-fifth victory was scored [illegible] day, in which game the first run [illegible] made off him in 54 consecutive innings.

Cadillac
Cadillac leadership in scientific motor car development is once more strikingly demonstrated
A NEW QUALITY OF LUXURY
A NEW ELEMENT OF EFFICIENCY
Each year you have looked to the Cadillac for the real and substantial progress in motor car development.
You have looked to the Cadillac for the great essentials in the practical motor car.
And you have not looked in vain.
Now conceive, if you can, a Cadillac with its essential functions sharpened, accentuated and refined.
Conceive such a process of refinement culminating in an entirely new riding quality of unexampled ease.
This is precisely what has come to pass in this new car.
The principal contributing factor, the two speed direct drive axle, is described in detail elsewhere.
The Cadillac Delco electrical system of automatic cranking, lighting and ignition, the first practical system ever made and first introduced by us, has, after experience with it on 27,300 Cadillacs, been still further developed, improved and simplified and the slight attention required from the user materially reduced.
The carburetor has been improved, its efficiency and its well-known economy increased. It is hot water jacketed and electrically heated to facilitate starting in cold weather.
The rear springs are six inches longer.
The body designs are new and strikingly handsome.
Front seat passengers may enter or leave the car at either side.
These and many other refinements of essential details make for a greater and a better Cadillac and serve to more firmly establish its position as America's leading motor car.
The Cadillac Company has never disappointed you in the smallest particular or in a single promise.
We promise you again, in this new car, a positive revelation in motor car luxury.
Cadillac two-speed direct drive axle
The advantages of this axle do not lie in its being an improvement so far as its functions as an axle are concerned, but rather in the manifold advantages attained in other directions through the medium of the axle.
In place of the single bevel pinion and single driving gear common to ordinary construction, there are two bevel pinions and two bevel driving gears. This affords two different gear ratios, each driving direct from the engine to the axle without intermediate gearing.
The usual single direct drive gear ratios range from about 3.5 to 1 down to 4 to 1, according to the car. Any single gear ratio is necessarily what it is because a single gear ratio must be, or should be, the particular one which is best adapted for all around general use.
No one single gear can possibly be just right for all speeds and for all conditions. But by using two direct gear ratios we have exactly doubled the efficiency as it concerns the relation of power developed by the engine to the economical and efficient application and transmission of that power to the driving of the car.
In the new Cadillac axle we have, as before stated, two direct-drive gear ratios. The low direct drive gear, which is [illegible] to 1, is especially adapted to city driving, where starting, stopping and slowing down are frequent and where cautious operation is necessary.
The high direct drive gear ratio, which is [illegible] to 1, is of special advantage where speeds of about 16 miles or more per hour are permissible and desirable.
The change from one gear ratio to another is made by means of a simple, convenient electric switch.
The advantages of the high direct drive gear ratio lie primarily in the fact that with it any given speed of the engine produces an increase of about 42 per cent in the speed of the car. For example, at an engine speed of 700 revolutions per minute, with the low direct gear engaged, the car will travel approximately 21 miles per hour; while on the high direct gear it will travel approximately 30 miles per hour with no increase in engine speed.
The great increase in car speed in its relation to engine speed accomplishes a number of desirable things.
Among these is a decrease in gasoline consumption for a given mileage. This is due to the fact that with the engine turning over slowly—comparatively speaking—a given quantity of gas is utilized to greater advantage and generates more actual power than with the engine turning over more rapidly. Friction also is materially reduced by reason of the parts operating more slowly and this, too, is a factor in reducing gasoline consumption when driving on the high gear.
Another great advantage is that with this direct drive high gear ratio, there is obtained an extraordinary luxurious smoothness in running, together with a marked quietness and a comparative freedom from the vibration which to a greater or less extent, is ever present when traveling at a high speed with a low gear ratio.
In attaining these much desired qualities, instead of adding complications to the power plant which make for greater fuel consumption and greater upkeep expense, they have been attained by methods which are simplicity itself, viz: by methods which lessen fuel consumption, methods which decrease friction with its resulting wear and methods which make for longer life, together with an appreciable decrease in the cost of operation and maintenance.

They Lace in Front
To Know them is to [illegible] them
The way to know Gossard Corsets best are [illegible]

Special Demonstration of Gossard Corsets

Mrs. [illegible], an expert corsetiere, is with us this week, demonstrating the good qualities of Gossard Corsets. We would be pleased to have you call and learn the many fine points that are to be found in this corset. You will be surprised to know how your figure can be improved and what comfort can be attained by wearing the proper model of Gossard Corset.

GOSSARD CORSETS "lace in front," and represent the most important innovation of history in the art of corsetry. Gossard Corsets are made on scientific lines that give grace, poise and beauty to the figure. They are comfort conferring, and support the figure without the least suspicion of compression.

The wonderful back of a Gossard Corset is a joy to see. The smooth, unbroken line, unmarred by laces, faithfully follows the curve of the spinal arch, which the artist, Hogarth, declares to be the most beautiful line in art. The woman who wears a Gossard Corset knows that her back, as well as her figure, is correctly corseted.

Even the most indifferent figure is quickly changed to comeliness, and develops beautiful lines, by wearing a correctly fitted Gossard Corset. We have models to fit all figures.

Gossard Corsets are economical and durable; they are made from the best materials, and the steels will not rust. Prices range from $3.50 to $12.50.

DEMONSTRATION AND FITTING ABSOLUTELY FREE. YOU ARE INVITED.

A visit to this department will be time well spent. You are invited to come in; we will gladly show you through.

TO MARS IN A SKYROCKET

From the New York Mail.

Probably the wildest idea that ever found its way into a man's brain was a trip to Mars in a skyrocket. Herr Ganswindt, a rich German manufacturer, was in 1900 confident that he could perform the feat, and was so enthusiastic over the scheme that he wrote a book of his plans and dedicated it to Emperor William.

The vessel in which Herr Ganswindt contemplated making the trip was to be in the shape of a cartridge, which was to attain its first momentum by being shot from a huge cannon. This, he figured, would carry it nearly to the outer limits of the earth's atmosphere, and from then on it would be driven forward by a succession of explosions in its rear compartment.

Propelled by Nitroglycerin.

To accomplish these explosions the thick wall of the car was to be bored through from end to end and the spaces filled with nitroglycerin cartridges which could be slipped into place and discharged at the will of the driver. Herr Ganswindt stated that by this means the direction as well as the speed of the projectile could be controlled.

To keep himself from being [illegible] or shaken to pieces by the start and later explosions he designed the shell so that its base would have double partitions.

Between these there was to be water, a known [illegible] breaker, and powerful spiral springs. His compartment was to be heavily padded and hung with straps in such a way that he would be able to suspend himself in its interior.

The head of the car was to be fitted with a powerful telescope and various other scientific instruments carefully stored were to be taken along.

To Get There in 42 Hours

After the atmosphere was once passed the daring explorer believed that he could travel at almost limitless speed and that the 47,000,000 miles could be covered in the course of 42 hours. All the provisions necessary would be a little water and a few packages of compressed food tablets. The required oxygen was to be manufactured when needed by the use of certain chemical powders.

The scheme stirred up a great deal of interest at the time and many scientists expressed their opinion that the idea was perfectly plausible. It was even reported that the emperor himself had taken some stock in the enterprise. Ganswindt was determined to undertake the expedition, and even went so far as to get a contract on the building of the vessel, but at last the entreaties of his wife and children conquered and he reluctantly abandoned his adventurous dream.

REMARKABLE WATERPROOF PAPER RAINCOATS

Many unusual kinds of waterproofs or raincoats are found in use in various parts of the world, some of which shed water to a remarkable degree, according to our own standard that rubber is the only serviceable waterproof. There are grass raincoats and bark raincoats and fiber coats and [illegible] raincoats, such as the impervious Navajo blankets and many other kinds which contain no rubber, but surely a raincoat made of paper may be considered the limit. Yet there is probably no more impervious, serviceable waterproof than the raincoats and cloaks of Mitsuma paper made from the [illegible] of a plant growing wild in the mountains of Japan. Japan is a [illegible] country, the rains which fall in most of the highlands are [illegible], [illegible] these paper waterproofs afford a perfect protection to their wearer against all wet. The Mitsumata paper is capable of unlimited folding and creasing. It is as tough and pliable as well tanned leather, but unlike leather it is not affected by moisture. It may well be believed then that this remarkable paper has a wide range of uses. Besides raincoats and robes it is made into all sorts of articles by the clever Japanese, pocketbooks, cases, satchels, etc.; finally, since it can be bleached into a beautiful white, it makes the finest bond paper and money paper in the world, paper which will withstand the ravages of time for thousands of years. Given an indestructible ink, a will or deed written on this paper in the time of the Pharos would undoubtedly today be in perfect condition. It would outlast parchment as parchment would outlast ordinary newspaper.

The Mitsumata paper is made from the leaves and stems of a small shrub which grows in the mountains of Japan, and until one of the experts of the department of agriculture discovered it a few years ago its existence was unknown to the outside world. Even now but little is known of it except that the plant has thriven in some mountainous portions of the United States, and further that the method of manufacturing the paper is quite crude. An effort is being made by the department of agriculture to introduce the plant into this country. Once established the manufacturing process will be readily worked out. Large quantities of this paper material are imported into the United States.

The Japanese are pastmasters in the art of durable paper making and the use of paper among the people for almost every purpose is surprising. The walls of houses of the Japanese peasantry are wooden framed covered with this transparent paper which keeps out the rain and wind, but lets in the light. These papers are exceedingly durable. As a cover for his load of tea when a rainstorm overtakes him the Japanese farmer spreads over it a tough, pliable paper, as impervious as tarpaulin and as light as gossamer. He has doubtless carried that cover for years neatly packed away in his cart. Every farm house has these tough papers which may be in almost constant use for several years. The process of manufacture includes a sort of "tanning" which takes all the [illegible] out of it and gives it remarkable durability.

WOOD FLOUR IS USED IN NORWAY

From the Chicago Tribune.

A product of Norway is wood flour, which is made from sawdust and comes from clean spruce or pine logs which are first freed from any particles of bark. This Norwegian wood flour is a different article from the wood pulp which is used in the various manufactures of dynamite and linoleum. Most of the flour which is made is exported, and the principal markets are England and Germany, though the United States does take a small amount.

FULLER'S EARTH FOUND AT PANAMA

An extensive deposit of fuller's earth has been discovered on the shore of Gatun lake, near Gatun. Superficial examinations indicate that it is of the best quality and one of the most extensive found anywhere.

It lies so close to the water's edge that the construction of a railway to connect the deposit with a wharf would cost but little, while the wharf itself could be built on the edge of the lake within a few feet of deep water. The deposit is on land owned by the United States government.

Fuller's earth is used in the manufacture of woolen goods and in removing grease from fabrics of wool. The largest deposits are found in England and it is imported into the United States. The peculiar value of the deposit lies in its location on the edge of Gatun lake. It may enter largely into the solution of the problem of "return cargo" for ships that carry coal from Hampton [illegible] to [illegible].

WASHINGTON'S ALLEY SLUMS

EVERY VOTER IN THE COUNTRY IS RESPONSIBLE

By JOHN IHLDER.

Field Secretary, National Housing Association.

(Exclusive Service The Survey Press Bureau.)

What do you, Mr. Man From Home, know about Goat Alley, Washington, D. C.? You have seen the Capitol, the White House and the Washington monument. But your responsibility extends also to Goat Alley and all the other back alleys. Your vote counts in the municipal affairs of the nation's capital. Congress is the city government of Washington—but the people who live there have no vote.

For more years than a few some of the people of Washington have been aware that there is in the city's inhabited alleys a menace to the public health, morals and police records. But the majority of that changing fraction of its people who hold federal office and ex-officio govern the city, have refrained from taking any interest in them.

So during all these years the requests and demands of local social workers and of citizens with a social conscience but without a vote fell on ears that were hard of hearing. Only from President Roosevelt did they get any comfort: from his President's Home Commission, which made a survey of alley dwellings and published a report with recommendations. Its only tangible result to date has been the beginning of the conversion of Willow Tree Alley into an interior park. That is something though many of the workers believe that such an interior park will be almost as great a menace as the inhabited alley, but Washington has some 275 inhabited [illegible]

There has been some legislation that has improved conditions. The board for the Condemnation of Insanitary Buildings has been created. Up to May 1 of this year it had demolished 1,692 of the worst shacks and caused 1,555 to be repaired. There is a law prohibiting the erection of new houses on alleys less than 40 feet wide. But that works two ways. Old houses are kept in commission, the owners' chief fear being that the board for the condemnation will catch them if they don't watch out. There is a law providing for the conversion of alleys into minor streets, but like some other laws which mean well, it doesn't work. So Washington has made very little progress on its alley problem.

The voteless citizens of the capital did more than ask Congress to do something for them. They studied their problem and published books and reports just as citizens with votes in other cities do. They brought in men like Jacob A. Riis to arouse general interest. And to show their earnestness they organized two housing companies on a five per cent and a four per cent basis to provide good housing in competition with bad.

But it was not until last winter that the general public including both the resident and the constitutional term elements began to take interest. Two more pamphlets were issued, one by the Monday Evening club, the other by the Women's Welfare department, the ministers of the National Civic Federation preached about bad alleys, and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson joined the ranks. In May the welfare meeting at which Secretary of Commerce Redfield and the field secretary of the National Housing association, spoke.

Two years later the Committee of Fifty outlined a plan of campaign. It was proposed to ask Congress for an amendment to the law for the conversion of alleys into minor streets designed to meet the court ruling which had put the spoke in the wheel of the present law. It was further proposed that the request to Congress be broadened, that Congress be asked to finance a commission created to study the whole alley question and to make recommendations for converting the alleys into a system of minor streets within a definite number of years. Such a commission would add to the valuable information gathered by organizations like the President's Home Commission definite data on the number, length, width, direction, etc., of the alleys and plan a street system which would make the greatest possible use of these existing passages. This would not only solve the alley problem but would give Washington what it and every other city needs—a system of minor streets affording sites for inexpensive small houses.

The committee adopted this program and at a second meeting the chairman, William H. Baldwin, appointed a committee to take it up with Congress. As a result bills designed to solve the alley problem have been introduced in both houses.

All this is encouraging as showing that the present agitation has stirred Washington's population from top to bottom. But it carries with it the old danger that some among the agitators, wearied by their efforts, may persuade themselves that having started the movement they can now safely leave it to take care of itself, may fail to realize the great opportunity now before them and be satisfied with half-way measures.

Washington has long enjoyed the reputation of being the best planned city in America, the one large city in the world which from the day of its foundation has been built more or less consistently along the lines of a carefully thought out plan. Only recently has it been realized that from the beginning this plan has been incomplete. While it provided for great public buildings and for dwellings of the wealthy and the well-to-do, it not only failed to provide homes for wage-earners but actually offered temptations to house these wage earners in an unwholesome manner. The magnificent, wide avenues designed by Major L'Enfant bordered along a great part of their distance by very deep lots, led inevitably to the construction of winding, branching alleys and the erection of hidden houses which had no place in the original plan.

Modern city planning lays the emphasis less on public buildings and boulevards and more on providing sites for homes. So the original plan of Washington must be supplemented by a modern plan providing a system of minor streets to let the wholesome light of publicity into the hidden slums of Washington and to provide economic use for the backs of the overdeep lots that line the avenues. They will do away with the present temptation to keep the old shacks standing or to build houses fronting on the avenues but extending so far back that their middle rooms are dark and airless. Half-way measures at this time may wipe out the alley slums of the Capital only to give in place of them a far more difficult problem, the deep, unlighted and unventilated multiple-dwelling.

Dirt Colors Commercial Chewing Gum

[illegible] Wings and Other Trash Which Accumulates When the Fresh Chicle Is Gathered.

[illegible] agencies operating under Federal and State Commissions, one article is daily used by an enormous body of consumers appears to have escaped investigation—chewing gum. This product, which is essentially a mixture of gum chicle with sugar and flavoring oils, has no fixed formula. No standards have been set, and each manufacturer is at liberty to make up his gum as experience and expedience may dictate. But, at the same time, manufacturers would naturally be expected to conform to the ordinary rules of cleanliness in their processes and materials. Chewing gum should reach its millions of users in a cleanly condition, and it should not contain substances which indicate gross carelessness in its making. But, according to the Pharmaceutical Era, not only are nearly all brands of gum now on the market unclean, but apparently no general effort is made to turn out a pure, wholesome confection.

The basis of all modern chewing gum is chicle. No other substance has been discovered which answers so well the requirements. The gum must be tasteless, it must have the proper consistency at the temperature of the mouth, it must be insoluble in water, must not change to any appreciable extent with age, and must admit of the incorporation of essential oils. Other materials have been used in the past. The original chewing gum was spruce gum, and this delicacy is still chewed in the rural districts. Later on, paraffin wax was sweetened and flavored, and gave us the "coal oil" gum of 20 or 30 years ago. After the introduction of chicle (said to have been brought into use for chewing by a lucky accident), the survival of the fittest decreed that the chicle should oust its competitors, and it has held the field till the present.

How Chicle Is Gathered.

Gum chicle is the dried or coagulated sap of several species of Sapotaceae, especially Achras Sapota, which thrives in Mexico. The sap is collected in much the same manner as rubber, and is coagulated, according to some accounts, by adding juice from the fruit of the same tree. The methods of tapping are crude. The native gum collector hacks the bark in a number of places with his machete, allowing the sap to run over the outside of the trunk. No efforts are make to avoid contamination. The cleanly "cup and gutter" system, now used in the turpentine orchards of the United States, is unknown in the chicle forests.

The result, inevitable under the existing conditions, is that all loose material, of whatever sort, is gathered up by the sap in its downward flow, and is carried into the collector's receptacle. All the flotsam and jetsam of the tropical forest during the rainy season finds its way into the crude gum. The processes applied at the main gum camp do nothing in the way of purification, beyond the removal of a few of the coarser pieces of wood and bark. The foreign matter in the crude consists of pieces of moss, bark, chips of wood, pebbles, sand, soil, dust, bits of leaves and nut shells, seeds, insects and parts of insects, and their larvae.

Impurities in Chewing Gum.

The first operation in manufacture is to break up the large lumps, and remove as many as possible of the coarse bits of bark, wood, leaves, nut shells and moderate-sized pebbles. The pieces vary from about an eighth of an inch in length to over an inch. The finer refuse matter, which is not amenable to hand-picking, contains soil, [illegible] pebbles, fine particles of bark and wood, bits of leaves, insects, wing-cases, legs, and angular fragments of their bodies. According to the procedure usually followed in modern gum manufacture, this finer material goes into the batches, and is ground up on the rollers. This foreign matter is the pigment to which ordinary chewing gum owes its brown color.

In a piece of crude chicle, as it reaches this country, can be seen the clear areas of the pure sap, interspersed and streaked with the impurities. The color of the light portions is a cream-gray, and the darker areas vary from yellow to black. If a piece of the clean part of this gum is chewed, the resulting mass is of much lighter color than almost any gum on the market. The tannin of the bark gives it a light brown tint, but there is an entire absence of the dark brown to which gum users are accustomed.

When carefully treated to take out all impurities, except the trace of tannin which clings so tenaciously, chicle gum is of a pale cream color, with a slight grayish cast in some lights. It closely resembles, at a distance, pure lime made from marble.

The clear parts of the crude gum approach in shade the tint of the pure gum, and are lighter in color than the usual manufactured gums. If the starch and sugar used in packing the latter are washed off to reveal the true color of the sticks, the contrast between this color and a pale cream-gray is startling.

The Chemistry of Chicle Gum.

This subject is in a very unsatisfactory state. What is known is due in large measure to the researches of Tschirch, of Berne, and Prochazka and Endemann. The former classes chicle under the "lactoresins," that is, resins produced by the coagulation of milky saps. From it he has isolated a number of bodies, among which are chiclafluavil, alpha-, beta-, and gamma-chiclalban, and chiclagutta, the real chicle hydrocarbon. Chiclafluavil is yellow; the other substances are white or nearly so. The gutta is nearly allied to gutta percha and balata. The other substances are oxygenated bodies, and although formulas have been assigned to them, recent work casts some doubt on the fact of their being true chemical individuals. Analyses by the two other investigators showed nine per cent of insoluble lime salts, 10 per cent of arabin, five per cent of sugar, 0.5 per cent of soluble salts, and 75 per cent of resin. Albumen, tannic acid, and other soluble organic matter is removed in the gum camps, where the crude sap is boiled up with water. The point of chief interest is, that none of the constituents of normal chicle is dark colored.

Pure Chicle Gum Not Opaque.

An interesting experiment to show the presence of dirt in ordinary chewing gum is described in the Pharmaceutical Era. Three one-cent tablets of two well known brands of gum were worked up with hot water and a spatula, on a sheet of glass, so as to get rid of sugar and everything soluble. The gum was not touched with the fingers, so that any contamination and darkening of color from that source were precluded. After pressing the water out, the gum was spread on a blank photo plate, and another plate pressed over it. The plates were kept at a fixed distance apart by means of a 10-cent piece at each corner, so that the sheets of gum have the thickness of a dime. Then the whole was placed back of a mask of black paper, with an octagonal hole in it, and photographed with a 16 c. p. lamp behind it. The commercial gums are practically opaque, even in such a thin layer. A few light spots were due to light leaking around the edges of the irregular sheet of gum, or to inequalities in the thickness of the layer. The sheet of purified chicle was almost as translucent as bleached wax. There is no excuse for a chewing gum which contains so much dirt that a naturally translucent material in pieces as thin as a dime should be made opaque.

A Convincing Experiment.

The specks of dirt in ordinary chewing gum are quite plain to the eye, if the sugar and starch coating is washed off in cold water. But in order to bring out the contamination still more strikingly, and to give some idea of its extent, the following tests are conclusive. Two one-cent sticks of three well known brands were worked up with hot water and a spatula, on a sheet of glass, until all soluble matter had been removed. During the kneading the first wash water took on a rich brown color, and was so full of suspended matter that it was almost opaque in a layer half an inch thick. This was doubtless due to the flotation of the finer particles of woody material, reduced to an almost impalpable powder during the grinding of the batch.

The gum was then spread in a thin layer on a plate of glass and allowed to dry as thoroughly as possible in the air. This method of drying will not remove all the water, but the little that remains has practically no influence on the solubility of the gum later. The gum was then dissolved in hot benzine, the solution taking place with some difficulty, and requiring about 15 minutes of heating on a water bath. The bottoms of the tubes, after standing a while, were covered with a dark brown deposit, in which could be distinguished particles of various sizes. The same treatment was given a piece of pure chicle. Solution was complete in about three minutes, and the only insoluble matter was a few flocks of a brownish-yellow color, probably vegetable albumen colored with tannin.

The solution of the purified chicle, in addition, was of a pale brownish-yellow color, and the liquid was practically limpid, as could be seen by a patch of white paper, which was visible through the solution. On the other hand, the solutions of commercial gums are very turbid, and dark brown in color. The turbidity may partly be due to moisture, but the dark color is due to the refuse matter left in the gum during manufacture.

One other point. It is supposed that chewing gum, as usually made, contains only chicle mixed with dirt from the forests, with sugar and flavors added. Why should it go into solution in benzine so slowly? If the dirt particles had any effect, they would probably hasten solution, as they would aid in disintegrating the gum. But the opposite is the case. The solution of ordinary chewing gum is not affected at all in the clean-cut manner in which pure chicle dissolves, but closely resembles that in which some grades of rubber pass into solution.

Moreover, the solution, after dropping the woody particles, should be of the same color as that of the pure chicle, but in fact it is entirely different, both in shade and color. Can this be due to the presence of cheap rubber in the gum? The old bugaboo, used to frighten children, that chewing-gum was made from castoff rubber shoes, may have some foundation in fact. And there are many varieties of cheap rubber to choose from nowadays, [illegible] old rubber boots.

"A Filthy Vegetable or Animal Substance."

In conclusion, chewing gum, as usually made today, is an adulterated substance, coming under Article VI of Section 7 of the Pure Food and Drug Act, which states that a food is adulterated "if it consists in whole or in part [illegible] animal or vegetable substance." It is evident that little effort is made to supply the public with pure chewing gum. It should not be difficult for manufacturers to break away from the old methods of manufacture and put a clean product on the market. The chewing-gum public should not be compelled to swallow [illegible] of dirt, and it is but a matter of time before the consumers will reach the same conclusion and demand cleanliness in chewing gum, just as they demand it in other foodstuffs.

New Plants Discovered in Study of Grazing Lands

In making a study of grazing lands on the national forests 125 entirely new species of plants have been discovered by the government's experts, and will be named and classified by the botanists of the department of agriculture.

Their discovery came about through the collection of some 9,000 different plant specimens, with notes as to their habits of growth and forage value. This work is part of a comprehensive plan to determine the grazing value of every acre of national forest land, in which the capacity of the soil to grow certain forage crops is to be determined, and an effort made to decide for which class of stock—sheep, cattle or goats—the range is best suited.

The men who have made the studies have combined the qualities of practical stockman and trained botanists. They divided the areas into such small subdivisions that maps have been prepared which show exactly the kinds of feed which grow on each acre, and the time of year it is ready for grazing. The maps also show the stock water supply and indicate the kind of stock best suited to the area.

The investigation also showed the [illegible] areas covered with flourishing plants which apparently should furnish excellent grazing, but which were not of a character relished by stock; these areas, therefore, had little or no stock-carrying capacity.

As a result of the study, the forest service announces that it will be in a position to perfect its system of grazing management to bring about still better conditions for both stock and range.

New Goods, New Fashions—The Spirit of Autumn Pervades the Store

The New Fall Suits & Coats

In Assured Styles That May Be Accepted With Confidence

In this wonderful collection of Fall Suits which we are now displaying, the styles are unusually attractive, showing radical changes for this season; smart draped skirts in dozens of different effects. The excellent styled long cutaway coats gives snap to the modes not seen in many past seasons.

The air of distinction that defines this initial showing is the outcome of a studied effort to achieve better results than heretofore and to be well prepared to meet the demands of the women who realize the pleasure of being a little ahead with their fall suit or coat, and the economy of added service they get by purchasing at the very beginning of the season. Suits in stock at present range in price from $18.50 up.

The new coat fashions are also full of surprises. The new lines, the new trimming effects and the new materials make them more attractive and becoming than usual. The lengths of the new coats are 45 and 48 inches. Coats in stock at present range in price from $18.50 up.

Our Famous $5, 7.50 and $10 Hats

An Attractive Feature of the Store

A new shipment of our famous $5.00 Hats just received, making this the largest and most magnificent autumn display of popular price millinery in the history of the store. A display wonderfully complete, filled with the new and the beautiful, and pervaded with the tone and the superior air which have made our inexpensive Hats famous far beyond the limits of this city. Nothing has been spared that would help us to perfect these Hats. No time has been too valuable to spend in gathering ideas in trimming. The newest in colors, the choicest of the popular black and white effects, the very latest note in trimming arrangements. Not a worthy feature missing. Now's the time. Hundreds of new beauties ready to greet you tomorrow, priced at $10.00, $7.50 and $5.00.

We are also showing a large and attractive line of Hats for middle-aged ladies, and they are very reasonably priced, too. Also Misses' Outing Hats in many pleasing styles.

Children's New Fall Hats in a wonderful variety of tasty little styles so becoming to the childish faces.

Season's Choices Wash Fabrics

So fastidious have our representatives been in selecting the new wash fabrics that we consider this the best assortment we have ever had. Not only were beauty and fineness of weave considered, but quality was carefully safeguarded. We suggest early buying for best selection.

27-inch half silk brocade crepon, in pink, dark blue, heliotrope, black and white; priced at, per yard	75c
36-inch half silk plain crepe de chine; priced at, per yard	75c
27-inch [illegible] de poplins, in rose, copenhagen, red, brown, tan, light blue, heliotrope, navy and black, per yard	[illegible]
27-inch cord sublime, in tan, light blue, rose, gray, navy, brown, copenhagen, red, heliotrope and black, per yard	35c

They Lace in Front

To know them is to [illegible]

The women who know Gossard Corsets best are those who [illegible] them most

Special Demonstration of Gossard Corsets

Mrs. [illegible], an expert corsetiere, is with us this week, demonstrating the good qualities of Gossard Corsets. We would be pleased to have you call and learn the many fine points that are to be found in this corset. You will be surprised to know how your figure can be improved and what comfort can be obtained by wearing the proper model of Gossard Corset.

GOSSARD CORSETS "lace in front," and represent the most important innovation of history in the art of corsetry. Gossard Corsets are modeled on scientific lines, imparting grace, poise and beauty to the figure. They are comfort conferring, and support the figure without the least suspicion of compression.

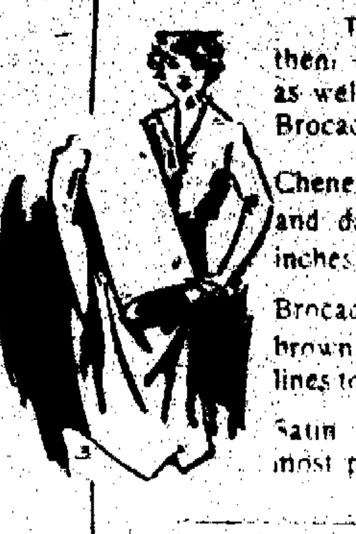
The wonderful back of a Gossard Corset is a joy to see. The smooth, unbroken line, unmarred by laces, faithfully follows the curve of the spinal arch, which the artist, Hogarth, declares to be the most beautiful line in art. The woman who wears a Gossard Corset knows that her back, as well as her figure, is correctly corseted.

Even the most indifferent figure is quickly changed to comeliness and develops beautiful lines, by wearing a correctly fitted Gossard Corset. We have models to fit all figures.

Gossard Corsets are economical and durable; they are made from the best materials, and the steels will not rust. Prices range from $3.50 to $12.50.

DEMONSTRATION AND FITTING ABSOLUTELY FREE. YOU ARE INVITED.

New Silks—Autumn Display

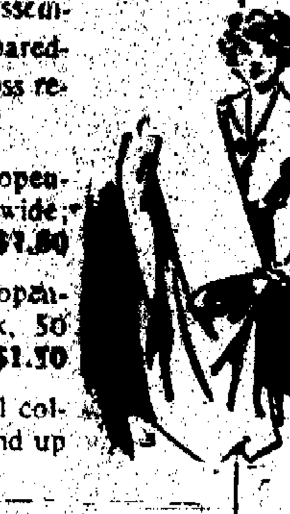


The new fall silks have been coming in for the last two or three weeks, and we are showing them in a great variety fresh from foreign and American manufacturers. They show beauty as well as having practicability. We especially call attention to the Imported Novelties, Brocaded Bengalines, Velvets, etc.

Cheneys brocaded silks, all colors in both light and dark shades, also blacks and whites, 25 inches wide; per yard	$1.25
Brocaded bengalines, 42 inches wide, in navy, brown and taupe, per yard $4.50. Plain bengalines to match, 42 inches wide; per yard	$2.50
Satin charmeuse, 40 inches wide, in all the most popular shades; per yard	$2.00
Crepe meteors, 45 inches wide, in all the most wanted colors for fall, per yard	$2.50
Crepe de chine, 40 inches wide, in all the season's most popular shades, per yard	$1.50
Brocaded velvets, 40 inches wide, colors, amethyst, copenhagen, golden brown and black; per yard	$5.00
Velveteens to match the velvets, 24 inches wide; per yard	$1.25

Coatings and Suitings for Autumn

Fashion's complete message of what is to be worn by well dressed women in every assemblage this autumn and winter. Weave after weave, tone after tone, tell the story of preparedness and supremacy, and no woman need turn away from our present display feeling at a loss regarding what to choose now or later for the fashionable dress, suit, skirt or coat.



Chinchillas in light colors and creams, very popular this fall, 54 inches wide; per yd.	$5.00
54-inch coatings astrachan, chinchillas, velours, fancy zibelines, diagonals, plush and plaid back velours; per yard	$2.00 to $5.50
Silk and wool Tango crepes, in all colors, for fall; priced, per yard	$2.50
All wool eponges, cut velours, illuminated diagonals and whipcords; colors, navy, copenhagen, brown, taupe and black, 54 inches wide; per yard	[illegible]
Epingle cloth and Bedford cords in navy, copenhagen, brown, wine, nell rose and black, 50 inches wide; per yard	$1.50

We Are Now Showing a Complete Stock of the New Fall Furniture 3rd and 4th Floors

Isn't there often a time when you want a new piece of furniture for your sitting room, your library, dining room or hall, when you hesitate about choosing or find it difficult to secure a piece that will harmonize with the furniture you already have? Such complete stocks as we are showing on our 3rd and 4th floors make it possible for you to match any suit or to find just what you want to fit in here or there about the house. Our stock consists of the most popular periods of the day, such as Sheraton, Adam, Louis the XV and XVI and Colonials in bedroom, dining room and living room furniture by such well known factories as Berkey & Gay, Royal, Grand Rapids Furniture Co., Stickley Bros., etc., of Grand Rapids. A visit to this department will be time well spent. You are invited to come in; we will gladly show you through.

TO MARS IN A SKYROCKET

From the New York Mail.

Probably the wildest idea that ever found its way into a man's brain was a trip to Mars in a skyrocket. Herr Ganswindt, a [illegible] German manufacturer, was [illegible] confident that he could perform the feat and was so enthusiastic over the scheme that he wrote a book on his plans and dedicated it to Emperor William.

The vessel in which Herr Ganswindt contemplated making the trip was to be in the shape of a cartridge, which was to attain its first momentum by being shot from a huge cannon. This, he figured, would carry it nearly to the outer limits of the earth's atmosphere, and from then on it would be driven forward by a succession of explosions in its rear compartment.

Propelled by Nitroglycerin

To accomplish these explosions the thick wall of the car was to be bored [illegible] from end to end and the [illegible] filled with nitroglycerin cartridges which could be slipped into place and discharged at the will of the driver. Herr Ganswindt stated that by this means the direction as well as the speed of the projectile could be controlled.

[illegible] the shock of the start and later explosions he designed the shell [illegible] double [illegible]. Between [illegible] was to be water [illegible] shock breaker, and [illegible] springs. His compartment was to be heavily padded and [illegible] with straps in such a way that he would be able to suspend himself in its interior.

The head of the car was to be fitted with a powerful telescope, and various other scientific instruments carefully stowed were to be taken along.

To Get There in 42 Hours

After the atmosphere was once passed the daring explorer believed that he could travel at almost limitless speed, and that the 47,000,000 miles could be covered in the course of 42 hours. All the provisions necessary would be a little water and a few packages of compressed food tablets. The required oxygen was to be manufactured when needed by the use of certain chemical powders.

The scheme stirred up a great deal of interest at the time and many scientists expressed the opinion that the idea was perfectly plausible. It was even reported that the emperor himself had taken some stock in the enterprise. Ganswindt was determined to undertake the expedition, and even went so far as to get a contract for the building of the vessel, but at last the entreaties of his wife and children conquered and he reluctantly abandoned his adventurous dream.

REMARKABLE WATERPROOF PAPER RAINCOATS

Many unusual kinds of waterproofs and raincoats are found in use in various parts of the world, some of which shed water to a remarkable degree, according to our own standard that rubber is the only serviceable waterproof. There are grass raincoats and bark raincoats and fiber coats and [illegible] as the [illegible] Navy blankets and many other [illegible] contain no rubber, but [illegible] made of paper may be [illegible] the limit. Yet these [illegible] more impervious, more [illegible] waterproof than the raincoats and [illegible] of Mitsumata paper made from the [illegible] of a plant growing [illegible] mountains of Japan. [illegible] the rains [illegible] of the highlands [illegible] this paper [illegible] protection to their [illegible] against all wet. The Mitsumata paper is capable of [illegible] and creasing. It is as [illegible] as well tanned leather, and unlike leather it is not affected by moisture. It may well be believed then that this remarkable paper has a wide range of uses. Besides raincoats and robes it is made into all sorts of articles by the clever Japanese—pocketbooks, paper satchels, [illegible]. Since it can be bleached to a beautiful white it makes the finest bond paper and money paper in the world, paper which will withstand the ravages of time for thousands of years. Given an indestructible ink, a will or deed written on this paper in the time of the Pharaohs would undoubtedly today be in perfect condition. It would outlast parchment as parchment would outlast ordinary newspaper.

The Mitsumata paper is made from the leaves and stems of a small shrub which grows in the mountains of Japan, and until one of the experts of the department of agriculture discovered it a few years ago its existence was unknown to the outside world. Even now but little is known of it except that the plant has thriven in some mountainous portions of the United States, and further that the method of manufacturing the paper is quite crude. An effort is being made by the department of agriculture to introduce the plant into this country [illegible] the manufacturing process will be readily worked out. Large quantities of this paper material are imported into the United States.

The Japanese are pastmasters in the art of durable paper making and the use of paper among the people for almost every purpose is surprising. The walls of houses of the Japanese mean [illegible] wooden framed covered with thin transparent paper which keeps out the rain and wind, but lets in the light. These papers are exceedingly durable. As a cover for his load of tea when a rainstorm overtakes him the Japanese farmer spreads over it a tough pliable paper, as impervious as tarpaulin and as light as gossamer. He has doubtless carried that cover for years neatly packed away in his cart. Every farm house has these tough papers which may be in almost constant use for several years. The process of manufacture includes a sort of "tanning" which takes all the "crack" out of it and gives its remarkable durability.

WOOD FLOUR IS USED IN NORWAY

From the Chicago Tribune.

A product of Norway is wood flour, which is made from sawdust and comes from clean spruce or pine logs which are first freed from any particles of bark. This Norwegian wood flour is a different article from the wood pulp which is used in the various manufactures of dynamite and linoleum. Most of the flour which is made is exported, and the principal markets are England and Germany, though the United States does take a small amount.

FULLER'S EARTH FOUND AT PANAMA

An extensive deposit of fuller's earth has been discovered on the shore of Gatun lake, near Gatun. Superficial examinations indicate that it is of the best quality and one of the most extensive found anywhere.

It lies so close to the water's edge that the construction of a railway to connect the deposit with a wharf would cost but little, while the wharf itself could be built on the edge of the lake within a few feet of deep water. The deposit is on land owned by the United States government.

Fuller's earth is used in the manufacture of woolen goods and in removing grease from fabrics of wool. The largest deposits are found in England and it is imported into the United States. The peculiar value of the deposit lies in its location on the edge of Gatun lake. It may enter largely into the solution of the problem of return cargo for ships that carry coal from Hampton Roads to Panama.

WASHINGTON'S ALLEY SLUMS

EVERY VOTER IN THE COUNTRY IS RESPONSIBLE

By JOHN IHLDER.

(Exclusive Service The Survey Press Bureau.)

What do you, Mr. Man From Home, know about Goat Alley, Washington, D. C.? You have seen the Capitol, the White House and the Washington monument. But your responsibility extends also to Goat Alley and all the other back alleys. Your vote counts in the municipal affairs of the nation's capital. Congress is the city government of Washington but the people who live there have no vote.

For more years than a few some of the people of Washington have been aware that there is in the city's inhabited alleys a menace to the public health, morals and police records. But the majority of that changing fraction of its people who hold federal office and ex-officio govern the city, have refrained from taking any interest in them.

So during all these years the requests and demands of local social workers and of citizens with a social conscience but without a vote fell on ears that were hard of hearing. Only from President Roosevelt did they get any comfort from his President's Home Commission, which made a study of alley dwellings and published a report with recommendations. Its only tangible result to date has been the beginning of the conversion of Willow Tree Alley into an interior park. That is something, though many of the [illegible] believe that such an interior park will be almost as [illegible] a nuisance as the inhabited alley, but Washington has some 275 inhabited alleys.

There has been some legislation that has improved conditions. The board for the Condemnation of Insanitary Buildings has been created. Up to May 1 of this year it had demolished 1,692 of the worst shacks and caused 1,555 to be repaired. There is a law prohibiting the erection of new houses on alleys less than 40 feet wide. But that works two ways. Old houses are kept in commission, the owners' chief fear being that the board for the condemnation will catch them if they don't watch out. There is a law providing for the conversion of alleys into minor streets, but like some other laws which mean well, it doesn't work. So Washington has made very little progress on its alley problem.

The voteless citizens of the capital did more than ask Congress to do something for them. They studied their problem and published books and reports just as citizens with votes in other cities do. They brought in men like Jacob A. Riis to arouse general interest. And to show their earnestness they organized two housing companies on a five per cent and a four per cent basis to provide good housing in competition with bad.

But it was not until last winter that the general public—including both the resident and the constitutional term elements—began to take interest. Two more pamphlets were issued, one by the Monday Evening club, the other by the Women's Welfare department, the ministers of the National Civic Federation preached about bad alleys, and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson joined the ranks. In May the welfare meeting at which Secretary of Commerce Redfield and the field secretary of the National Housing association spoke.

Two weeks later the Committee of Fifty outlined a plan of campaign. It was proposed to ask Congress for an amendment to the law for the conversion of alleys into minor streets designed to meet the court ruling which had put the spoke in the wheel of the present law. It was further proposed that the request to Congress be broadened that Congress be asked to finance a commission created to study the whole alley question and to make recommendations for converting the alleys into a system of minor streets within a definite number of years. Such a commission would add to the valuable information gathered by organizations like the President's Home Commission definite data on the number, length, width, direction, etc., of the alleys and plan a street system which would make the greatest possible use of these existing passages. This would not only solve the alley problem but would give Washington what it and every other city needs—a system of minor streets affording sites for inexpensive small houses.

The committee adopted this program and at a second meeting the chairman, William H. Baldwin, appointed a committee to take it up with Congress. As a result bills designed to solve the alley problem have been introduced in both houses.

All this is encouraging as showing that the present agitation has stirred Washington's population from top to bottom. But it carries with it the old danger that some among the agitators, wearied by their efforts, may persuade themselves that having started the movement they can now safely leave it to take care of itself, may fail to realize the great opportunity now before them and be satisfied with half-way measures.

Washington has long enjoyed the reputation of being the best planned city in America, the one large city in the world which from the day of its foundation has been built more or less consistently along the lines of a carefully thought out plan. Only recently has it been realized that from the beginning this plan has been incomplete. While it provided for great public buildings and for dwellings of the wealthy and the well-to-do, it not only failed to provide homes for wage earners but actually offered temptations to house these wage earners in an unwholesome manner. The magnificent, wide avenues designed by Major L'Enfant bordered along a great part of their distance by very deep lots, led inevitably to the construction of winding, branching alleys and the erection of hidden houses which had no place in the original plan.

Modern city planning lays the emphasis less on public buildings and boulevards and more on providing sites for homes. So the original plan of Washington must be supplemented by a modern plan providing a system of minor streets to let the wholesome light of publicity into the hidden slums of Washington and to provide economic use for the backs of the overdeep lots that line the avenues. They will do away with the present temptation to keep the old shacks standing or to build houses fronting on the avenues but extending so far back that their middle rooms are dark and airless. Half-way measures at this time may wipe out the alley slums of the Capitol only to give in place of them a far more difficult problem, the deep, unlighted and unventilated [illegible].

Dirt Colors Commercial Chewing Gum

[illegible] and Other Trash Which Accumulates When the Fresh Chicle Is Gathered

Despite the [illegible] efforts of food and drug inspectors operating under [illegible], Commissions, and [illegible] body of consumers appears to have escaped investigation: chewing gum. This product, which is essentially a mixture of gum chicle with sugar and flavoring oils, has no fixed formula. No standards have been set, and each manufacturer is at liberty to make up his gum as experience and expedience may dictate. But, at the same time, manufacturers would naturally be expected to conform to the ordinary rules of cleanliness in their processes and materials. Chewing gum should reach its millions of users in a cleanly condition, and it should not contain substances which indicate gross carelessness in its making. But, according to the Pharmaceutical Era, not only are nearly all brands of gum now on the market [illegible], but apparently no general effort is made to turn out a pure, wholesome confection.

The basis of all modern chewing gum is chicle. No other substance has been discovered which answers so well the requirements. The gum must be tasteless, it must have the proper consistency at the temperature of the mouth, it must be insoluble in water, must not change to any appreciable extent with age, and must admit of the incorporation of essential oils. Other materials have been used in the past. The original chewing gum was spruce gum, and this delicacy is still chewed in the rural districts. Later on, paraffin wax was sweetened and flavored, and gave us the "coal oil" gum of 20 or 30 years ago. After the introduction of chicle (said to have been brought into use for chewing by a lucky accident), the survival of the fittest decreed that the chicle should oust its competitors, and it has held the field till the present.

How Chicle Is Gathered.

Gum chicle is the dried or coagulated sap of several species of Sapotaceae, especially Achras Sapota, which thrives in Mexico. The sap is collected in much the same manner as rubber, and is coagulated, according to some accounts, by adding juice from the fruit of the same tree. The methods of tapping are crude. The native gum collector hacks the bark in a number of places with his machete, allowing the sap to run over the outside of the trunk. No efforts are make to avoid contamination. The cleanly "cup and gutter" system, now used in the turpentine orchards of the United States, is unknown in the chicle forests.

The result inevitable under the existing conditions, is that all loose material, of whatever sort, is gathered up by the sap in its downward flow, and is carried into the collector's receptacle. All the flotsam and jetsam of the tropical forest during the rainy season finds its way into the crude gum. The processes applied at the main gum camp do nothing in the way of purification beyond the removal of a few of the coarser pieces of wood and bark. The foreign matter in the crude consists of pieces of moss, bark, chips of wood, pebbles, sand, soil, dust, bits of leaves and nut shells, seeds, insects and parts of insects and their larvae.

Impurities in Chewing Gum.

The first operation in manufacture is to break up the large lumps and remove as many as possible of the coarse bits of bark, wood, leaves, nut shells and moderate-sized pebble. The pieces vary from about an eighth of an inch in length to over an inch. The finer refuse matter, which is not amenable to hand-picking, contains soil, sand, [illegible] pebbles, fine particles of bark and wood, bits of leaves, insects, wing cases, legs, and other fragments of their bodies. According to the procedure usually followed in modern gum manufacture, this finer material goes into the batches, and is ground up on the rollers. This foreign matter is the pigment to which ordinary chewing gum owes its brown color.

In a piece of crude chicle, as it reaches this country, can be seen the clear areas of the pure sap, interspersed and streaked with the impurities. The color of the light portions is a cream-gray, and the darker areas vary from yellow to black. If a piece of the clean part of this gum is chewed, the resulting mass is of much lighter color than almost any gum on the market. The tannin of the bark gives it a light brown tint, but there is an entire absence of the dark brown to which gum users are accustomed.

When carefully treated to take out all impurities, except the trace of tannin which clings so tenaciously, chicle gum is of a pale cream color, with a slight grayish cast in some lights. It closely resembles, at a distance, pure lime made from marble.

The clear parts of the crude gum approach in shade the tint of the pure gum, and are lighter in color than the usual manufactured gums. If the starch and sugar used in packing the latter are washed off to reveal the true color of the sticks, the contrast between this color and a pale cream-gray is startling.

The Chemistry of Chicle Gum.

This subject is in a very unsatisfactory state. What is known is due in large measure to the researches of Tschirch, of Berne, and Prochazka and Endemann. The former classes chicle under the "lactoresins," that is resins produced by the coagulation of milky saps. From it he has isolated a number of bodies, among which are chiclafluavil, alpha-, beta-, and gamma-chiclalban, and chiclagutta, the real chicle hydrocarbon. Chiclafluavil is yellow, the other substances are white or nearly so. The gutta is nearly allied to gutta percha and balata. The other substances are oxygenated bodies, and although formulas have been assigned to them, recent work casts some doubt on the fact of their being true chemical individuals. Analyses by the two other investigators showed nine per cent of insoluble lime salts, 10 per cent of arabin, five per cent of sugar, 0.5 per cent of soluble salts, and 75 per cent of resin. Albumen, tannic acid, and other soluble organic matter is removed in the gum camps, where the crude sap is boiled up with water. The point of chief interest is, that none of the constituents of normal chicle is dark colored.

Pure Chicle Gum Not Opaque.

An interesting experiment to show the presence of dirt in ordinary chewing gum is described in the Pharmaceutical Era. Three one-cent tablets of two well known brands of gum were worked up with hot water and a spatula, on a sheet of glass, so as to get rid of sugar and everything soluble. The gum was not touched with the fingers, so that any contamination and darkening of color from that source were precluded. After pressing the water out, the gum was spread on a blank photo plate, and another plate pressed over it. The plates were kept at a fixed distance apart by means of a 10-cent piece at each corner, so that the sheets of gum have the thickness of a dime. Then the whole was placed back of a mask of black paper, with an octagonal hole in it, and photographed with a 16 c. p. lamp behind it. The commercial gums are practically opaque, even in such a thin layer. A few light spots were due to light leaking around the edges of the irregular sheet of gum, or to inequalities in the thickness of the layer. The sheet of purified chicle was almost as translucent as bleached wax. There is no excuse for a chewing gum which contains so much dirt that a naturally translucent material in pieces as thin as a dime should be made opaque.

A Convincing Experiment.

The specks of dirt in ordinary chewing gum are quite plain to the eye, if the sugar and starch coating is washed off in cold water. But in order to bring out the contamination still more strikingly and to give some idea of its extent the following tests are conclusive. Two one cent sticks of three well known brands were worked up with hot water and a spatula, on a sheet of glass, until all soluble matter had been removed. During the kneading the first wash water took on a rich brown color, and was so full of suspended matter that it was almost opaque in a layer half an inch thick. This was doubtless due to the flotation of the finer particles of woody material, reduced to an almost impalpable powder during the grinding of the batch.

The gum was then spread in a thin layer on a plate of glass and allowed to dry as thoroughly as possible in the air. This method of drying will not remove all the water, but the little that remains has practically no influence on the solubility of the gum later. The gum was then dissolved in hot benzine, the solution taking place with some difficulty, and requiring about 15 minutes of heating on a water bath. The bottoms of the tubes, after standing a while, were covered with a dark brown deposit, in which could be distinguished particles of various sizes. The same treatment was given a piece of pure chicle. Solution was complete in about three minutes, and the only insoluble matter was a few flocks of a brownish-yellow color, probably vegetable albumen colored with tannin.

The solution of the purified chicle, in addition, was of a pale brownish-yellow color and the liquid was practically limpid, as could be seen by a patch of white paper, which was visible through the solution. On the other hand, the solutions of commercial gums are very turbid, and dark brown in color. The turbidity may partly be due to moisture, but the dark color is due to the refuse matter left in the gum during manufacture.

One other point. It is supposed that chewing gum, as usually made, contains only chicle mixed with dirt from the forests, with sugar and flavors added. Why should it go into solution in benzine so slowly? If the dirt particles had any effect they would probably hasten solution, as they would aid in disintegrating the gum. But the opposite is the case. The solution of ordinary chewing gum is not affected at all in the clear menstruum in which pure chicle dissolves, but closely resembles that in which some grades of rubber pass into solution.

Moreover, the solution after dropping the dirt particles should be of the same color as that of the pure chicle, but in fact it is entirely different both in appearance and color. Can this be due to the presence of cheap rubber in the gum? The old bugaboo used to frighten children that chewing gum was made from castoff rubber shoes may have some foundation in fact. And there are many varieties of cheap rubber to choose from, [illegible] rubber [illegible].

"A Filthy Vegetable or Animal Substance."

The chicle in chewing gum as usually made [illegible] adulterated substance coming under Article VI of Section [illegible] of the Pure Food and Drug Act, which states that a food is adulterated if it consists in whole or in part of a filthy [illegible] animal or vegetable substance. [illegible] little effort is made to supply the public with pure chewing gum. It would not be difficult for manufacturers to break away from the old methods and market a clean product on the market. The chewing gum public should not be compelled to swallow [illegible], and it is but a matter of time before the consumer will reach the same conclusion and demand cleanliness in chewing gum, just as they demand it in other foodstuffs.

New Plants Discovered in Study of Grazing Lands

In making a study of grazing lands on the national forests 125 entirely new species of plants have been discovered by the government's experts and will be named and classified by the botanists of the department of agriculture.

Their discovery came about through the collection of some 9,000 different plant specimens, with notes as to their habits of growth and forage value. This work is part of a comprehensive plan to determine the grazing value of every acre of national forest land, in which the capacity of the soil to grow certain forage crops is to be determined, and an effort made to decide for which class of stock—sheep, cattle, or goats—the range is best suited.

The men who have made the studies have combined the qualities of practical stockman and trained botanists. They divided the areas into such small subdivisions that maps have been prepared which show in detail the kind of feed which grows on each acre and the time of year it is needed for grazing. The maps also show the water supply and indicate the kind of stock best suited to the area.

The investigation also showed the examiners that areas covered with flourishing plants which apparently would furnish excellent grazing, but which were not of a character relished by stock, these areas therefore having little or no stock carrying capacity.

As a result of the study the forest service announces that it will be in a position to perfect its system of grazing management to bring about still better conditions for both stock and range.

Miss Norris' Answers to Correspondents

Raffia Hats.

Mrs. P. N. D.—Anyone familiar with crochet can make a raffia crochet hat. These are the latest developments in practical raffia crochet.

To make a hat secure a wire frame the shape you wish the finished hat to be. Start in the center of the crown and crochet in the simple star stitch, widening to fit the wire frame. The underside of the brim is made separately and sewed to the upper brim over the wire frame.

A large [illegible] crochet hook should be used so that the work will be coarse and quickly accomplished.

To Embroider Block Letters.

E. P. H.—The large block letters can be embroidered in a most attractive way by means of voiding.

The wide portion of the letter is only padded to the center thus dividing it into two sections. When padding the center each part is made higher than the sides, and the work is laid from the edge to the center of the letter, covering one section at a time, thus making a distinct division through the center of the letter.

Leaves and flowers are often embroidered in this way, but it is something of an innovation for block letters to be voided. The effect is splendid but the work must be very carefully done.

Batik Making.

Miss E. M.—Batik work gives an effect very similar to stenciling, only in batik the background is dyed and the pattern left in the natural color of the material.

The method of doing the work is as follows:—The design is first transferred to the goods, then the pattern is covered with melted wax, which is applied with a brush, so that the design is completely covered care being taken to keep the edges even. After the wax has cooled, the fabric is dyed the desired color by dipping into a cold dye. The dye may be made by boiling, but should be cooled before coloring the material. When the fabric is entirely dry, it is washed in a suds of pure soap and warm water, which takes out the wax and leaves the pattern in the original color of the goods.

Loosely woven materials should be used for batik making, and dull blue, soft browns and reds are the best background color.

Only large, bold designs should be used for this kind of work, as the more intricate pattern would not only be harder to cover with the wax, but would not be so effective, for the beauty of the work depends upon its bold, striking appearance.

German Naval Program Is Cause for Alarm in Great Britain

By PHILIP EVERETT.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—These are the days when even serious newspapers are often forced to worry along on a no more substantial diet than stories of sea serpents and gossip from the bathing resorts and are glad to grab any political rumor no matter how mysterious its origin or how flimsy its value.

Fortunately for newspaper [illegible] the crop of political [illegible] is rather above the [illegible] to the traditions [illegible] we are living. Really I cannot [illegible] we would find to [illegible] we were living under [illegible] government with [illegible] tion between the [illegible] and that of the lords, and no prospects of home rule or land [illegible] to play in the horizon as [illegible].

[illegible]

But, as I said, [illegible] is rather abundant [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] to the gallery. His [illegible] [illegible].

No Danger of Arrest.

No man in the country [illegible] better than Sir Edward [illegible] that no [illegible] how violent his speeches he will never be in danger of arrest, not only because he is personally exceedingly popular with [illegible] members of the government, several of whom are his [illegible], but also because no one for a moment thinks of taking him seriously, when he plays the part of the political villain.

"To be sure," a leading liberal paper wrote about him the other day, "Sir Edward's speeches are violent, but his treason is merely hypothetical. In the case of the suffragettes the words are followed by acts, but in Sir Edward's case the only result is applause, and applause of so amiable an orator is not a crime.

"The alleged warrant is a fairy tale, doubtless intended to stimulate a flagging campaign. If the government were taking Sir Edward seriously the first step would be to strike his name off the privy council, but he remains 'right honorable,' his oath of allegiance is still in force, and, at the bar, he continues to wear silk. The fact is that revolution, however admirable as a presentation blackthorn with which to threaten the cabinet, bears a very different aspect when it is seen that the menaces do not frighten the imperial authority.

"Sir Edward is bound to go on talking wildly, but the financial interests of Belfast are dead against a policy of extremes."

German Naval Scare.

A paragraph in a Berlin newspaper, the Taegliche Rundschau, which is very often inspired by the government, has aroused great interest in naval and political circles here because it prophesies the creation of a special German cruiser squadron for the protection of German oversea interests. The squadron, it is said, will be ready for service next spring.

Commenting upon this announcement several English papers agree that it looks as if the kaiser's government were about to fall into line with the demands of the powerful German Navy league and inaugurate a new era in German naval policy.

For many decades, practically all the German navy was concentrated in the Baltic and then it overflowed into the North sea.

A few years ago two large armored cruisers were sent to the far east, and they cruise there in association with three light cruisers. This strengthening of the force in the Pacific was the first indication of the new policy. Last year the battle cruiser Goeben—a dreadnought ship—was sent into the Mediterranean with four light cruisers, to show the German flag in those waters. This was the second stage.

Hitherto, except in China waters, the German fleet has been represented overseas only by a few comparatively small cruisers of very limited fighting value. Now it is apparently intended to establish a flying squadron [illegible] at any moment to go anywhere to show the German flag and support German diplomacy.

It goes without saying that several imperialistic Tory papers take advantage of this opportune announcement to renew the cry for construction of more British battle cruisers for service in distant seas but also to remind the overseas dominions and particularly Canada that England expects them to contribute their share towards the naval defenses of the empire.

[illegible] SASSOON.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—[illegible] of Lord [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] will be [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] lived [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible].

Club That Takes Advantage of Waning Season to Ply Art

LONDON, August 23.—London's [illegible] are now [illegible]. The law courts are [illegible], the galleries are deserted, the [illegible] are all [illegible] pleasure in summer climes. Clubs are having their summer cleaning and those [illegible] who still remain in town have to [illegible] to other quarters till the beginning of October.

This is the psychological moment for the professional club thief. He is an ingenious scoundrel and for the next two months he will be overhauling the crack clubs in quite a different way from that adopted by the lady with the pail and her sister with the broom, who will also be much in evidence in these patrician haunts. Detective M— who has charge of this section of the west end out of the season tells some [illegible] particulars of the "check fraud" swindles in the "off season."

"You see, the way they go about it is this, sir," he said. "Say Club X is [illegible] up and Club Y has found a [illegible] for [illegible] meantime. Of [illegible] the servants of Y club don't know all the members of X club by sight, or even by name. This is the [illegible] the check [illegible] follows up. He [illegible] coolly into the club, immaculately [illegible], enters into conversation with the hall porter, and inquires what members of X club are in town and so on. Then he asks for the club check book, strolls into the smoke room, writes out the biggest checks which the club will cash—of course he knows the limit—orders a brandy and soda and perhaps scribbles an imaginary note on club paper while he is waiting for the money. Other thieves carry their own check books, draw a check, sign the name of a prominent member.

"There," said the lynx-eyed officer, pointing to a man crossing the road further down, "is one of the fraternity who no doubt is on a voyage of inspection this moment. There's no end to their devices, but hall porters and club servants are now furnished with descriptions of some of these light fingered gentlemen. They dress well, they live well and might easily be mistaken for real gentlemen.

"Sometimes they play the game by telephone, saying I am Sir Richard This, or Lord That and clubs have been frequently done by this simple ruse. Lor' bless yer, you never know where they'll have you. But we have our eye on one or two of them this year, who know they'll get it hot if they're caught."

ENGLISH DOG FANCIERS WILL VISIT U. S. KENNELS

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The constant buying and selling of valuable dogs, which goes on between England and America, is causing many society women to take up breeding seriously, but how long the craze will last it is difficult to tell. Mrs. W. H. Herbert of Kensington, one of the greatest experts on Pekingese dogs in this country, will go out to New York later on to judge the Pekingese club's show there at the Plaza hotel. Mr. William C. Codman of Providence, R. I., is now in London paying visits to all the dog shows, large and small. He is said to have been the first man to introduce high class English bulldogs to America.

Although now an American citizen, Mr. Codman was born in London. He will return to America in time for the Rhode Island Kennel club show, which is held at the Newport casino. Mrs. Roy Rainey of Huntington, L. I., is also in town making purchases of valuable terriers. Mrs. Rainey's kennel manager was formerly in the service of the Duke of Argyll. Mrs. Rainey bought some time ago the champion wire-haired fox terrier of England, champion "Guycroft Saloz," and also the champion puppy "Teddy of Holywell." She has now secured two of the best white West Highland terriers in the country and has shipped them off to America.

RUSSIA DISCRIMINATES AGAINST YELLOW RACES

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 23.—Governor General Gondatti of Siberia and the Russian Pacific coast territory, has just concluded a long struggle with the Russian state department in which Gondatti takes the side of the white Russians against both Chinese and Japanese, and Mr. Sazonoff and the state department seek to avoid offending Japan. Gondatti, who is now returning to his post, says that he is to discriminate against the yellow people where they live in areas governed by the whites.

He has not been allowed to do this on open political grounds, but he is to issue a series of compulsory orders regarding housing, sanitary arrangements, and general domestic habits which he thinks will make the yellow people prefer not to live under his regime. He says that already they get the same wages as whites, but that their competition is unfair, because of their mode of life which is impossible alongside whites.

AUSTRO-GERMAN RELATIONS NEAR BREAKING POINT

MUCH DISCONTENT IN DUAL MONARCHY

Merchants in Fatherland Are Protesting Against the Military Plans

By FREDERICK WERNER

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—The German Michel is certainly a very patient and long-suffering person, and so great is his docility that it is not to be wondered that our rulers have come to the conclusion that there is no end to his patience. Our new minister of war, however, went a little bit too far when he expressed the opinion the other day that German merchants should be proud to offer easy and well-paid positions to army officers whose days of military usefulness had passed, but who could not be expected to live in the style befitting their rank on their pension.

The minister's [illegible], the only one he has had so far, by the way, since he took up office, has been greeted with derision. [illegible] as a whole [illegible] even now far [illegible] toward the [illegible], and probably as [illegible] to fill commercial [illegible] officers, whose [illegible] the mercantile world [illegible] to [illegible] the daughters of [illegible] to pay their [illegible].

It is [illegible] that our [illegible] of war will not [illegible] after this [illegible] [illegible] before the [illegible] [illegible] from the [illegible] by the [illegible] [illegible].

With what joy the German military press is announcing that the French military dirigible "Spiess," which it had been hoped in France would prove itself equal if not superior to the German Zeppelins is an absolute failure. There is a feeling of general relief in military circles here that France has evidently failed to make full use of the opportunity to discover the [illegible] of the construction of our Zeppelins when one of the big dirigibles some months ago made an invol- [illegible] [illegible] on French parade grounds.

With considerable anxiety German [illegible] are watching [illegible] events in Austria, [illegible], for evidently things are not going very well politically in the dual monarchy. [illegible] is chiefly to be sought in the mutual hatred of the [illegible] nationalities of which it consists. Barely a week passes without the discovery of a new weak spot in Austrian armor.

The absolute failure of Austria's policy in the Balkans during the recent crisis was generally attributed to the regard which the central government was forced to show the southern Slavs in the empire, who were in a state of dangerous political fermentation. But it now appears that conditions in the northern part of the empire are almost as bad.

The experiment of home rule in Bohemia is proving a complete failure. The province is absolutely bankrupt politically and financially. For five years the Germans in Bohemia have stayed away from the Bohemian landtag in order to incapacitate it and prevent the Czechs from getting the upper hand. As a result it has been impossible to carry through any laws of taxation and now the treasury is empty. The whole province has been placed under administration of a commission consisting of five Czechs and three Germans presided over by a Count Schoenborn, a large landed proprietor, of German origin belonging to the class which in Austria is the most insidious enemy of the German cause.

Revelations Expected.

The only efficient remedy would be to divide the country into two parts, but this, it is safe to predict, Austria will not do under the present veiled form of semiautocratic government.

As long as things are not yet definitely settled in the Balkans and all interest is focused in that direction the domestic misery may be hidden but in a few months revelations must come which will startle Europe, while they will not surprise German statesmen who have kept an eye on conditions in Austria.

Germany cannot, of course, interfere direct in purely Austrian affairs but at the same time it cannot afford to close its eyes to the mischief which is brewing near the frontier of Bavaria, Saxony and Silesia. The time is drawing near when Germany must raise her voice in protest and then will come the crucial moment for Austro-German political friendship and no one can say what will then happen to the triple alliance.

MRS. CORNELIUS VANDERBILT

LONDON, Aug. 23.—There is no American woman who received more attention from the rulers of Europe than young Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, whose husband was partially cut off in his father's will because the elder Vanderbilt was displeased with his son's marriage. But ever since the visit of Prince Henry, brother of the kaiser, to [illegible], at which time he was entertained but once in a private home, Mrs. Vanderbilt being the hostess on that occasion, the American woman has moved from one social triumph to another. During the recent week at [illegible] she and her [illegible] [illegible] much in evidence. They were entertained by King George and Queen Mary on the royal yacht Albert and [illegible] [illegible]. [illegible] Mr. Vanderbilt was so delighted with the results that he proposes to build a [illegible] to take part in the [illegible] next year.

GENERAL SAVOFF OF BULGARIA.

SOFIA, Aug. 23.—There is an expression of widespread regret here that a difference should have arisen between General Savoff, head of the Bulgarian army, and Czar Ferdinand. This great soldier, who is about to be stripped of his command, will undoubtedly go down in history as the foremost military genius of the Balkans. It was he who led King Ferdinand's army to a series of victories unparalleled in the history of the Balkan states. He all but succeeded in driving the Turk from his last lair in Europe, and there are many who think he would have accomplished this if he had not been interfered with.

General Savoff is now blamed for the sweeping defeat of the Bulgars at Kotchna, where Ferdinand lost more men in a few days than in the entire campaign against the Turks. Savoff is held responsible for the defeat by ordering his troops to attack the Servians and the Greeks, and it is not improbable that he will be compelled to face a court-martial.

AROUND THE WORLD IN A BARREL

From the Wide World Magazine.

There seems to be no limit to the foolish things some people will do for the sake of a wager. Early in 1910 two Venetian brothers named Viancllo, blacksmiths by trade, made a bet that they would travel around the world in a barrel. During the month of June they duly set out from Venice and later arrived at Berlin, where they received an enthusiastic reception. The barrel was a special construction, open at the end and having a "perch" inside so constructed as to remain always upright. On this one brother sits while the other trundles the barrel along. Food is stored along the sides, and at night if no other shelter is available both brothers sleep in their queer rolling home. They estimate that the trip around the world will occupy at least 12 years, so that they have some nine years of barrel-trundling to do before they can claim their bet.

RUSSO-ROUMANIAN ROYAL MATCH HAS AUSTRIA ANXIOUS

VIENNA, Aug. 23.—Popular anxiety is aroused in Austria over the announcement of the arrangement which is proposed in the marriage of the Roumanian heir apparent to the Archduchess Olga of Russia. Young Carlos, though entirely of Anglo-Saxon blood and Protestant lineage, is one of the few prospective Greek church royal eligibles, who is still on the marriage chess board of the semi-orient.

The nearness of Princess Olga to the Russian succession makes the marriage a most unpopular suggestion to the Austrian empire, which feels itself so overwhelmed by the Russian tactics from the eastern frontier, and puts Roumania in the rank of even closer alliance with the unspeakable Russ, who is dreaded in Austria and Hungary with quite as much sincerity as is the yellow peril by the Californians.

The delicacy of the health of the czarovitch, again hangs over the whole a certain mystery not to be fathomed, and keeps the Austrian army with one foot in the stirrup, for surely the Russian pressure into the Balkans threatens not only their bread and butter, but their very state's existence.

The news of this engagement has set fresh eddies to spinning in the "whirlpool of Europe," as Austro-Hungary has been most effectively designated. In the meantime, the innocent half-grown children, who ought yet to be at their play and in no wise related to the affairs of state, which monarchies practice with impunity; this [illegible] look quite as shapely and intelligent as little Yankees, [illegible] plenty of roguish good nature.

PRINCESS MARY TO WED DANISH PRINCE?

Daughter of King George May Not Be Sacrificed on the Altar of Politics

By PHILIP EVERETT.

LONDON, Aug. 23. Is the engagement of Princess Mary to be announced immediately after the wedding of Prince Arthur of Connaught? Rumors to that effect have been heard and it cannot be said they are without foundation.

My readers may remember the romantic tale I told them of how our king's only daughter fell in love at first sight with her young relative Prince Eric of Denmark when he came to this country to study English agriculture. It seems that this love affair has been more than a whim and that the two young people have kept up a very lively correspondence in the intervals between their meetings at Queen Alexandra's home in Sandringham.

Queen Alexandra who is at present at "Villa Hvidoere" in Denmark with her imperial Russian sister and will return to this country shortly before the Connaught wedding and with her will come her youngest brother Prince Valdemar of Denmark, father of young Prince Eric.

Prince Valdemar, who has worked his way up from the bottom in the Danish navy, has not been in England for a long time, and that he should come just now is taken as a sign that Queen Mary has at last given her consent to her daughter marrying for love instead of being sacrificed on the altar of politics.

American Given Permit to Take Russian Pictures

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 23.—Mr. Alfred Gottschalk, United States consul general at large, has come to St. Petersburg to overhaul the organization of the service here and in Moscow. He has recently been similarly occupied at Warsaw, after having undergone a two months' cure near Vienna. Mr. Gilbert H. Grosvenor, editor of the American National Geographical magazine, is now in St. Petersburg, and with his family will make a tour through central and southern Russia.

Mr. Grosvenor has been able to get from the Russian government a photographic permit to take pictures wherever he may happen to be. This is the permit which was refused to John H. Mears, the galloping reporter, who rushed through here [illegible] in his flight for the speed record [illegible] the World.

The photographic restriction [illegible] illustrated the other day when [illegible] of Mr. Kazinsky, a famous Russian actor-manager, [illegible] abroad for burial in St. Petersburg. A large crowd of theatrical [illegible] assembled [illegible] tion and were arranged [illegible] for the purpose [illegible] tive picture. The railway gendarme officer, seeing what was being prepared, broke in and [illegible] the photographer from setting to work. The party appealed [illegible] out the [illegible] character of the photograph [illegible] but [illegible] had to move off at once to the hearse and thence to the cemetery where again, having no permit, they were not allowed to take any picture.

FRANCE TO HAVE FIRST AERIAL FLEET IN WORLD

GOVERNMENT APPROVES MILITIA SCHEME

Plans Being Perfected for Tourist Season Next Year in Paris

By GEORGES DUFRESNE.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—Not satisfied with increasing the size of our army on a peace footing of 820,000 men the war department is now planning to provide France with the first aerial militia in the world. The kernel of this already exists in the form of 200 civilian aviators who have been formed into a permanent military organization which in case of war will be under the direct control of the minister of war.

The scheme of aerial militia was originally invented by M. Alfred le Blanc and has now been definitely approved by the government. It consists in a project to [illegible] all the suitable civilian [illegible] into a body liable to service [illegible] when [illegible] upon by the [illegible] authorities. They will have [illegible] [illegible].

[illegible] are [illegible] of builders; third, pilots who have no [illegible]. The first and second categories are the [illegible], and it is believed that the [illegible] will be recruited [illegible] third category. To them the [illegible] of $[illegible] a year will be an important consideration. Hitherto all officers or soldiers who applied to be attached to the aviation corps had to [illegible] their military brevet as pilots, and were then assigned to some center.

The members of the proposed militia will have to go through the same test, but the government will advance the necessary sum about $[illegible]—to the builders, to allow the aspirants to [illegible] the [illegible]. A special committee of officers will examine the applicants beforehand, as to their record and ability. The accepted candidate will have to sign an enlistment in the militia to which he will be bound, and in case he leaves before his time is expired he will have to pay an indemnity.

It is calculated that about 500 aviators are at present available, and will almost certainly enlist in the proposed militia. Fifty pilots are already known to have passed their military brevets, and this would leave about 450 more to pass the tests. The entire scheme would cost only about $200,000 a year.

Parisian Season Approaching.

Slowly the season is approaching when Paris shall once more be inhabited by Parisians and when we may once more begin to expect things to happen after the long summer dullness. The influx of foreign tourists this year has broken all records and at various times the number of Americans here has been enormous probably because the weather in Switzerland and northern Italy has been exceedingly bad, and the amount of money which our visitors from the other side of the Atlantic have left here runs into millions of dollars. Small wonder therefore that we are told officially by M. Thierry, the minister of public works, that France is going to make strong efforts to lead an ever greater part of the world's tourist traffic into the country and as far as possible prevent it from crossing our borders visiting France only in transit for Switzerland.

With this object in view a new official tourist department has been opened by the minister, the chief aims of which are, first, to assist the owners of country hotels to bring their places up to the American standard and also to give France the finest roads in the world for automobiling. M. Thierry, with whom I [illegible] long talk the other day assures me that the new department will greatly appreciate all and any suggestions from American tourists and particularly [illegible] automobilists. He is fully aware that although the food [illegible] French country hotels is [illegible] to what you find at similar places in England our country hotel keepers are not yet able to compete with those of Switzerland, Tyrol and even parts of Germany.

In regard to our roads which have been damaged considerably by the heavy motor traffic for which they were never intended, it is the intention of the minister to spend the enormous amount of $50,000,000 during the next few years to improve them and especially to keep them sprinkled with tar [illegible] away with the dust nuisance. A special automobile tax is to provide the necessary money but foreign automobilists—that is to say those who do not spend over six months here, are not to be taxed.

Colorado's Art Pottery

Probably the point of interest most attractive to those of an artistic nature is the new pottery plant of the Van Briggle Pottery Company. This is where the world-famed Van Briggle Art Pottery is designed and made, and is easily reached by carriage, automobile or by street car. Van Briggle Pottery is modeled from the peculiarly adaptable clays which are found in the neighborhood of Colorado Springs, and Colorado's beautiful wild flowers form some of the chief decorations. Van Briggle Pottery is especially noted for an individuality of mat glaze which was discovered by Mr. Artus Van Briggle in 1898 and was immediately recognized by the master hands in ceramics. Tourists and visitors to the Pikes Peak region are invited to visit the Van Briggle Pottery, where they may learn how the crude, rough clay taken from the ground is moulded and colored into the uniquely artistic forms which characterize this product of the Centennial state. The display rooms at the Van Briggle Pottery are open from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. The logical souvenir. Have your driver stop at the Van Briggle Pottery. German Naval Program Is Cause for Alarm in Great Britain

By PHILIP EVERETT.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—These are the days when even serious newspapers are often forced to worry along on a no more substantial diet than stories of sea serpents and gossip from the bathing resorts and are glad to grab any political rumor no matter how mysterious its origin or how flimsy its tale.

Fortunately for newspaper writers the crop of political summer rumors is rather above the average, thanks to the troublous time in which we are living. Really I cannot imagine what we would find to write about now if we were living under a conservative government with harmonious cooperation between the house of the people and that of the lords, and no prospects of home rule or land taxes to play in the horizon as heat lightning.

Crop of Rumors Large.

But, as I said, the crop of rumors is rather abundant, and almost every week we hear of a planned rearrangement of the cabinet. While some of these rumors are too absurd to mention especially as it is known that Mr. Asquith is not in favor of any important changes, there is every reason to believe Dr. MacNamara will enter the treasury [illegible] to strengthen the hand of Lloyd George [illegible] land campaign [illegible] the military [illegible] shall [illegible] made lord [illegible] of [illegible]. It is also [illegible] will [illegible] in [illegible] it [illegible] living [illegible] for general [illegible] to be transferred to a [illegible] is no secret to any [illegible] anyone who [illegible] the telephone [illegible]

Aside [illegible] we have the [illegible] to keep us supplied with [illegible] though probably [illegible] takes it seriously. [illegible] its most amusing recent features had undoubtedly been Sir Edward Carson's play to the gallery. His attempts to make the childlike conservative believe he is bravely incurring the danger of arrest and daring the government to lay hands on him as a bold bad man planning to commit high treason have simply been irresistibly funny.

No Danger of Arrest.

No man in the country knows better than Sir Edward himself, that no matter how violent his speeches he will never be in danger of arrest, not only because he is personally exceedingly popular with the members of the government, several of whom are his best chums, but also because no one for a moment thinks of taking him seriously, when he plays the part of the political villain.

"To be sure," a leading liberal paper wrote about him the other day, "Sir Edward's speeches are violent, but his treason is merely hypothetical. In the case of the suffragettes the words are followed by acts, but in Sir Edward's case the only result is applause, and applause of so amiable an orator is not a crime.

"The alleged warrant is a fairy tale, doubtless intended to stimulate a flagging campaign. If the government were taking Sir Edward seriously the first step would be to strike his name off the privy council, but he remains 'right honorable,' his oath of allegiance is still in force, and, at the bar, he continues to wear silk. The fact is that revolution, however admirable as a presentation blackthorn with which to threaten the cabinet, bears a very different aspect when it is seen that the menaces do not frighten the imperial authority.

"Sir Edward is bound to go on talking wildly, but the financial interests of Belfast are dead against a policy of extremes."

German Naval Scare.

A paragraph in a Berlin newspaper, the Taegliche Rundschau, which is very often inspired by the government, has aroused great interest in naval and political circles here because it prophesies the creation of a special German cruiser squadron for the protection of German overseas interests. The squadron, it is said, will be ready for service next spring.

Commenting upon this announcement several English papers agree that it looks as if the kaiser's government were about to fall into line with the demands of the powerful German Navy league and inaugurate an [illegible] in German naval [illegible].

For many decades practically all the German [illegible] was concentrated in the Baltic [illegible] into the North sea.

A few [illegible] two large armored cruisers were [illegible] for east and [illegible] there in association with three light cruisers. This strengthening of the force in the Pacific was the first indication of the new policy. Last year the battle cruiser Goeben, a Dreadnought [illegible] was sent into the Mediterranean with four light cruisers, to show the German flag in those waters. This was the second stage.

Hitherto except in China waters, the German [illegible] been represented [illegible] by a few comparatively small cruisers of very limited fighting value. Now it is apparently intended to establish a flying squadron ready at any moment to go anywhere to show the German flag and support German diplomacy.

It goes without saying that several imperialistic Tory papers take advantage of this opportune announcement to renew the cry for construction of more British battle cruisers for service in distant seas but also to remind the overseas dominions and particularly Canada that England expects them to contribute their share towards the naval defenses of the empire.

LADY ROCKSAVAGE, NEE SASSOON.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The recent marriage of Lord Rocksavage to Miss Sassoon of Park Lane is still one of the main topics of conversation in London society circles. There is much speculation as to why this couple was married in a registry office. The explanation is that mixed marriages cannot be performed in a synagogue and the mother and father of the bride were very strict Jews, especially the mother, and out of [illegible] to her memory Miss Sassoon did not wish to be married in a Christian church.

[illegible] Rosebery and the late Lord Battersea married into the Rothschild [illegible]. Though their wives did not become Christians, the marriages were celebrated according to the rites of the English church and another ceremony was performed in a registry office. When the Duc de Grammont and the Prince de Wagram married sisters of the present Baroness Rothschild [illegible] had previously become Catholics and the weddings were celebrated in a Catholic church.

Lady Rocksavage is an exceptionally clever woman and is enormously wealthy. Since the death of her parents she has lived with her brother in a great Park Lane mansion built by Barney Barnato, famous during his life for the extraordinary statues adorning the outside of the house.

[illegible] Rocksavage when he succeeds to the title held by his father, Marquis of [illegible], will [illegible] one of the most ancient offices in England—lord great chamberlain.

Club Thief Takes Advantage of Waning Season to Ply Art

LONDON, August 23.—London's fashionable quarters are now visibly thinning. The law courts are closed, the galleries are deserted, the idle rich are all seeking pleasure in sunnier climes. Clubs are having their summer sweeping and those unhappy members who still remain in town have to migrate to other quarters till the beginning of October.

This is the psychological moment for the professional club thief. He is an ingenious scoundrel and for the next two months he will be overhauling the crack clubs in quite a different way from that adopted by the lady with the pail and her sister with the broom, who will also be much in evidence in these patrician haunts. Detective M—, who has charge of this section of the west end out of the season tells some interesting particulars of the "check fraud" swindles in the "off season."

"You see, the way they go about it is this, sir," he said. "Say Club X is being fixed up and Club Y has found a shelter for members meantime. Of course the servants of Y club don't know all the members of X club by sight, or even by name. This is the way the check swindler follows up. He walks coolly into the club, immaculately dressed, enters into conversation with the hall porter, and inquires what members of X club are in town and so on. Then he asks for the club check book, strolls into the smoke room, writes out the biggest checks which the club will cash—of course he knows the limit—orders a brandy and soda, and perhaps scribbles an imaginary note on club paper while he is waiting for the money. Other thieves carry their own check books, draw a check, sign the name of a prominent member.

"There," said the lynx eyed officer, pointing to a man crossing the road further down, "is one of the fraternity who no doubt is on a voyage of inspection this moment. There's no end to their devices, but hall porters and club servants are now furnished with descriptions of some of these light fingered gentlemen. They dress well, they live well and might easily be mistaken for real gentlemen.

"Sometimes they play the game by telephone, saying 'I am Sir Richard This, or Lord That' and clubs have been frequently done by this simple ruse. Lor' bless yer, you never know where they'll have you. But we have our eye on one or two of them [illegible] year, who knows they'll get it hot [illegible] they're caught."

ENGLISH DOG FANCIERS WILL VISIT U. S. KENNELS

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The constant buying and selling of valuable dogs, which goes on between England and America, is causing many society women to take up breeding seriously, but how long the craze will last it is difficult to tell. Mrs. W. H. Herbert of Kensington, one of the greatest experts on Pekingese dogs in this country, will go out to New York later on to judge the Pekingese clubs' show there at the Plaza hotel. Mr. William [illegible] Codman of Providence, R. I., is now in London paying visits to all the dog shows, large and small. He is said to have been the first man to introduce [illegible] to America.

Although now an American citizen, Mr. Codman was born in London. He will return to America in time for the Rhode Island Kennel club show, which is held at the Newport casino. Mrs. Roy Rainey of Huntington, L. I., is also in town making purchases of valuable terriers. Mrs. Rainey's kennel manager was formerly in the service of the Duke of Argyll. Mrs. Rainey bought some time ago the champion wire haired fox terrier of England, Champion [illegible], and also the [illegible] Roddy of Hove [illegible]. She has now secured two of the best white West Highland terriers in the country and has shipped them off to America.

AUSTRO-GERMAN RELATIONS NEAR BREAKING POINT

By FREDERICK WERNER.

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—The German Michel is certainly a very patient and long-suffering person, and so great is his docility that it is not to be wondered that our rulers have come to the conclusion that there is no end to his patience. Our new minister of war, however, went a little bit too far when he expressed the opinion the other day that German merchants should be proud to offer easy and well-paid positions to army officers whose days of military usefulness had passed, but who could not be expected to live in the style befitting their rank on their pension.

The minister's idea, the only one he has had so far, by the way, since he took up office, has been greeted with derision. Our merchants as a whole find that they contribute even now far more than their share toward the maintenance of the army, and probably no persons are less fit to fill commercial positions than our officers, whose connection with the mercantile world has hitherto been limited to seeking out and marrying the daughters of merchants rich enough to pay their debts.

Official Tenure Limited.

It is pretty safe to prophesy that our present minister of war will not continue long in office after this sad initial blunder, which has seriously displeased the kaiser, because it has placed retired officers before the public as beggars to be saved from the poorhouse by the very people whom they are in the habit of insulting every day, and because it has given the press [illegible] part of it [illegible] opportunity to tell what the man in the street thinks of the character and capacities of our haughty officers.

With evident joy the German military press is announcing that the French military dirigible "Spiess," which it had been hoped in France would prove itself equal if not superior to the German Zeppelins is an absolute failure. There is a feeling of general relief in military circles here, that France has evidently failed to make full use of the opportunity to discover the secrets of the construction of our Zeppelins when one of the big dirigibles some months ago made an involuntary descent on French parade grounds.

With considerable anxiety German statesmen are watching political events in Austria, our principal ally, for evidently things are not going very well politically in the dual monarchy, whose weakness is chiefly to be sought in the mutual hatred of the many nationalities of which it consists. Barely a week passes without the discovery of a new weak spot in Austrian armor.

The absolute failure of Austria's policy in the Balkans during the recent crisis was generally attributed to the regard which the central government was forced to show the southern Slavs in the empire, who were in a state of dangerous political fermentation. But it now appears that conditions in the northern part of the empire are almost as bad.

The experiment of home rule in Bohemia is proving a complete failure. The province is absolutely bankrupt politically and financially. For five years the Germans in Bohemia have stayed away from the Bohemian landtag in order to incapacitate it and prevent the Czechs from getting the upper hand. As a result it has been impossible to carry through any laws of taxation and now the treasury is empty. The whole province has been placed under administration of a commission consisting of five Czechs and three Germans presided over by a Count Schoenborn, a large landed proprietor of German origin belonging to the class which in Austria is the most insidious enemy of the German cause.

Revelations Expected.

The only efficient remedy would be to divide the country into two parts but this, it is safe to predict, Austria will not do under the present [illegible] form of [illegible] government.

As long as things are not yet definitely settled in the Balkans and all interest is focused in that direction the domestic misery may be hidden, but in a few months revelations must come which will startle Europe, while they will not surprise German statesmen who have kept an eye on conditions in Austria.

Germany cannot, of course, interfere direct in purely Austrian affairs but at the same time it cannot afford to close its eyes to the [illegible] is brewing near the frontiers of Bavaria, Saxony and Silesia. The time is drawing near when Germany [illegible] [illegible]

MRS. CORNELIUS VANDERBILT

LONDON, Aug. 23.—There is no American woman who received more attention from the rulers of Europe than young Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, whose husband was partially cut off in his father's will because the elder Vanderbilt was displeased with his son's marriage. But ever since the visit of Prince Henry, brother of the kaiser, to America, at which time he was entertained but once in a private home, Mrs. Vanderbilt being the hostess on that occasion, the American woman has moved from one social triumph to another. During the recent week at Cowes she and her husband were much in evidence. They were entertained by King George and Queen Mary, on the royal yacht Albert and Victoria, who always delight in a visit with the Vanderbilts.

The latter attended the regatta on their yacht, the North Star. Mr. Vanderbilt was so delighted with the regatta that he proposes to build a large schooner to take part in the English races next year.

RUSSO-ROUMANIAN ROYAL MATCH HAS AUSTRIA ANXIOUS

VIENNA, Aug. [illegible].—Popular anxiety is [illegible] in Austria over the announcement of the engagement of [illegible] as proposed in the marriage of the Roumanian heir apparent to the Archduchess Olga of Russia. Young Carol, though a mixture of Anglo-Saxon blood and Protestant lineage, is one of the few prospective Greek church royal eligibles who is still on the marriage chess board of the semi-orient.

The betrothal of Princess Olga to the Russian succession makes the marriage a most unpopular suggestion to the Austrian empire, which feels itself so overwhelmed by the Russian tactics from the eastern frontier, and puts Roumania in the rank of even closer alliance with the unspeakable Russ, who is dreaded in Austria and Hungary with quite as much sincerity as is the yellow peril by the Californians.

The delicacy of the health of the czarovitch again hangs over the whole, a certain mystery not to be fathomed, and keeps the Austrian army with one foot in the stirrup, for surely the Russian pressure into the Balkans threatens not only their bread and butter, but their very state's existence.

The news of this engagement has set fresh eddies to spinning in the "whirlpool of Europe," as Austro-Hungary has been most effectively designated. In the meantime, the innocent half-grown children, who ought yet to be at their play and in no wise related to the crimes of state, which monarchies practice with impunity, these children look quite as simple and interesting as little Yankees, with eager eyes and plenty of roguish good nature.

PRINCESS MARY TO WED DANISH PRINCE?

By PHILLIP EVERETT.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Is the engagement of Princess Mary to be announced immediately after the wedding of Prince Arthur of Connaught? Rumors to that effect have been heard and it cannot be said they are without foundation.

My readers may remember the romantic tale I told them of how our king's only daughter fell in love at first sight with her young relative Prince Eric of Denmark when he came to this country to study English agriculture. It seems that this love affair has been more than a whim and that the two young people have kept up a very lively correspondence in the intervals between their meetings at Queen Alexandra's home in Sandringham.

Queen Alexandra, who is at present at "Villa Hvidoere" in Denmark with her imperial Russian sister and will return to this country shortly before the Connaught wedding and with her will come her youngest brother Prince Valdemar of Denmark, father of young Prince Eric.

Prince Valdemar, who has worked his way up from the bottom in the Danish navy, has not been in England for a long time, and that he should come just now is taken as a sign that Queen Mary has at last given her consent to her daughter marrying for love instead of being sacrificed on the altar of politics.

FRANCE TO HAVE FIRST AERIAL FLEET IN WORLD

Plans Being Perfected for Tourist Season Next Year in Paris

By GEORGES DUFRESNE.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—Not satisfied with increasing the size of our army on a peace footing of 820,000 men the war department is now planning to provide France with the first aerial militia in the world. The kernel of this already exists in the form of 200 civilian aviators who have been formed into a permanent military organization which in case of war will be under the direct control of the minister of war.

The scheme of aerial militia was originally invented by M. Alfred le Blanc and has now been definitely approved by the government. It consists in a project to organize all the suitable civilian pilots into a body liable to service at any time when called upon by the military authorities. They will have stated periods of exercise during the course of the year, and it is proposed at the same time to allow a sum of $720 a year as pay to each aerial militiaman. This will indemnify him for his service, and leave him free at the same time to earn more, either as an aviator or in following some trade or profession.

Three Classes of Aviators.

At present the proposal contemplates three classes of aviators; first, pilots who own machines; second, pilots who are at the service of builders; third, pilots who have no machines. The first and second categories are the least numerous, and it is believed that the largest contingent will be recruited from the third category. To them the indemnity of $720 a year will be an important consideration. Hitherto all officers or soldiers who applied to be attached to the aviation corps had to pass their military brevet as pilots and were then assigned to some center.

The members of the proposed militia will have to go through the same test, but the government will advance the necessary sum—about $500—to the builders, to allow the aspirants to pass the tests. A special committee of officers will examine the applicants beforehand, as to their record and ability. The accepted candidate will have to sign an enlistment in the militia to which he will be bound, and in case he leaves before his time is expired he will have to pay an indemnity.

It is calculated that about 500 aviators are at present available, and will almost certainly enlist in the proposed militia. Fifty pilots are already known to have passed their military brevets, and this would leave about 450 more to pass the tests. The entire scheme would cost only about $200,000 a year.

Parisian Season Approaching.

Slowly the season is approaching when Paris shall once more be inhabited by Parisians and when we may once more begin to expect things to happen after the long summer dullness. The influx of foreign tourists this year has broken all records and at various times the number of Americans here has been enormous, probably because the weather in Switzerland and northern Italy has been exceedingly bad, and the amount of money which our visitors from the other side of the Atlantic have left here runs into millions of dollars. Small wonder therefore that we are told officially by M. Thierry, the minister of public works that France is going to make strong efforts to lead an ever greater part of the world's tourist traffic into the country and as far as possible prevent it from passing through France visiting France only on its way to Switzerland.

John Mason in "As a Man Thinks"

[illegible] Vaughn Thomas [illegible] the clever dramatist [illegible] the Far West and [illegible] the Pacific coast. And the action and [illegible] New York [illegible] Theater players [illegible] city almost direct from New York with all the scenic and [illegible] detail that held faith in the metropolitan production.

The scenes are laid in New York in the Fifth avenue drawing room of a rich and powerful banker in [illegible] the sanctum of [illegible] Wall street [illegible] about which [illegible] the better element of New York fashionable centre, not the vulgar white light gentry, but the very best New York can accomplish toward the propagation of hybrid aristocracy.

The theme of the play is beyond mere plot or story used in the ordinary drama and the moral or lesson is deeply scientific. As in "The Witching Hour," Mr Thomas delves deep into man's heart and soul with a vital lesson, a message from God and Nature. The object is precisely the same as the object in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," but the plot is distinctly different.

"The Witching Hour," Mr Thomas' other Mason play, dwelt upon thought transference, telepathy [illegible] mind reading, and the author's new work deals [illegible] of the mind but in [illegible] pure thinking is the playwright's last subject.

The story treats of the domestic relations of a man and his wife. The man, Frank Clayton, has in his early days of married life deviated once—only once from the path of strict propriety—once committed a serious indiscretion. His wife has forgiven this single offense and would have no doubt forgotten the episode but for the later foolish though innocent flirtation of Clayton with a certain Paris beauty model. This incident coming to the wife's ears revives her early day jealousy and in a reckless spirit of revenge she accompanies a household friend, an artist, one Benjamin De Lota, to his bachelor quarters, this with every indication of innocence of wrong doing beyond the mere act of going to the man's apartments, as it proves later. Clayton hears of this visit and forgetting his own guilty acts he forbids his wife to stay in her home and tries to forcibly separate her from her little son. The woman's father, Judge Hoover, persuades Clayton not to turn his wife out, but Clayton is determined to separate from his wife; he will go at once, he says, and take his son with him. As he starts to carry away the boy the mother becomes hysterical and Dr Seelig, the home doctor, confronts the excited husband. The uproar of the household is hushed and there is a mysterious something about the great surgeon that transfixes everybody present. The woman glances appealingly at the doctor she has known and been treated by since girlhood. He nods. Clayton stands with bowed head. There is a long silence. Then the great gentle surgeon—the doctor of mind as well as body—speaks: "The child is a patient. I am the physician. The patient cannot be removed, cannot be taken from the care of its mother without the loss of its life."

There follows two more acts of equal dramatic interest in which the great doctor not only preaches the faith of pure thinking and pure living, but is at last dramatically called upon to prove that he is as well a chivalric follower of his noble doctrine.

Mr Mason in "As a Man Thinks" will interpret his original character of Dr Seelig, Julie Herne will appear as Mrs Clayton, John Flood as Frank Clayton, Warner P. Richmond as Burrill, Lester Chambers as De Lota, Grace Reals as Mrs Seelig, Jane Salisbury as Vedah Seelig and George Graton as Judge Hoover.

The management respectfully suggests that the audience be seated precisely at the beginning of the performance if the full plot of the play is to be correctly appreciated as the story unfolds with the rise of the first curtain and Mr Mason make his appearance almost [illegible]

Models De Luxe at Empress

Miss Lillian Walker, one of the winsome young women of the "Models de Luxe," a company now touring the Sullivan & Considine circuit, has the distinction of being one of the most perfectly formed women in America, if not the entire world, according to a professor in the University of Harvard. Sculptors and artists of international reputation have corroborated said professor.

In proportion to her height Miss Walker is the living Venus de Milo. The world famous Milo Venus, which is one of the permanent art treasures of Europe, is five feet eight and one-half inches in height. Miss Walker is five feet six inches high. With the exception of her shoulders Miss Walker's measurements correspond closely to the classical symmetry of the Venus. A comparison of the actress and Venus de Milo will be interesting.

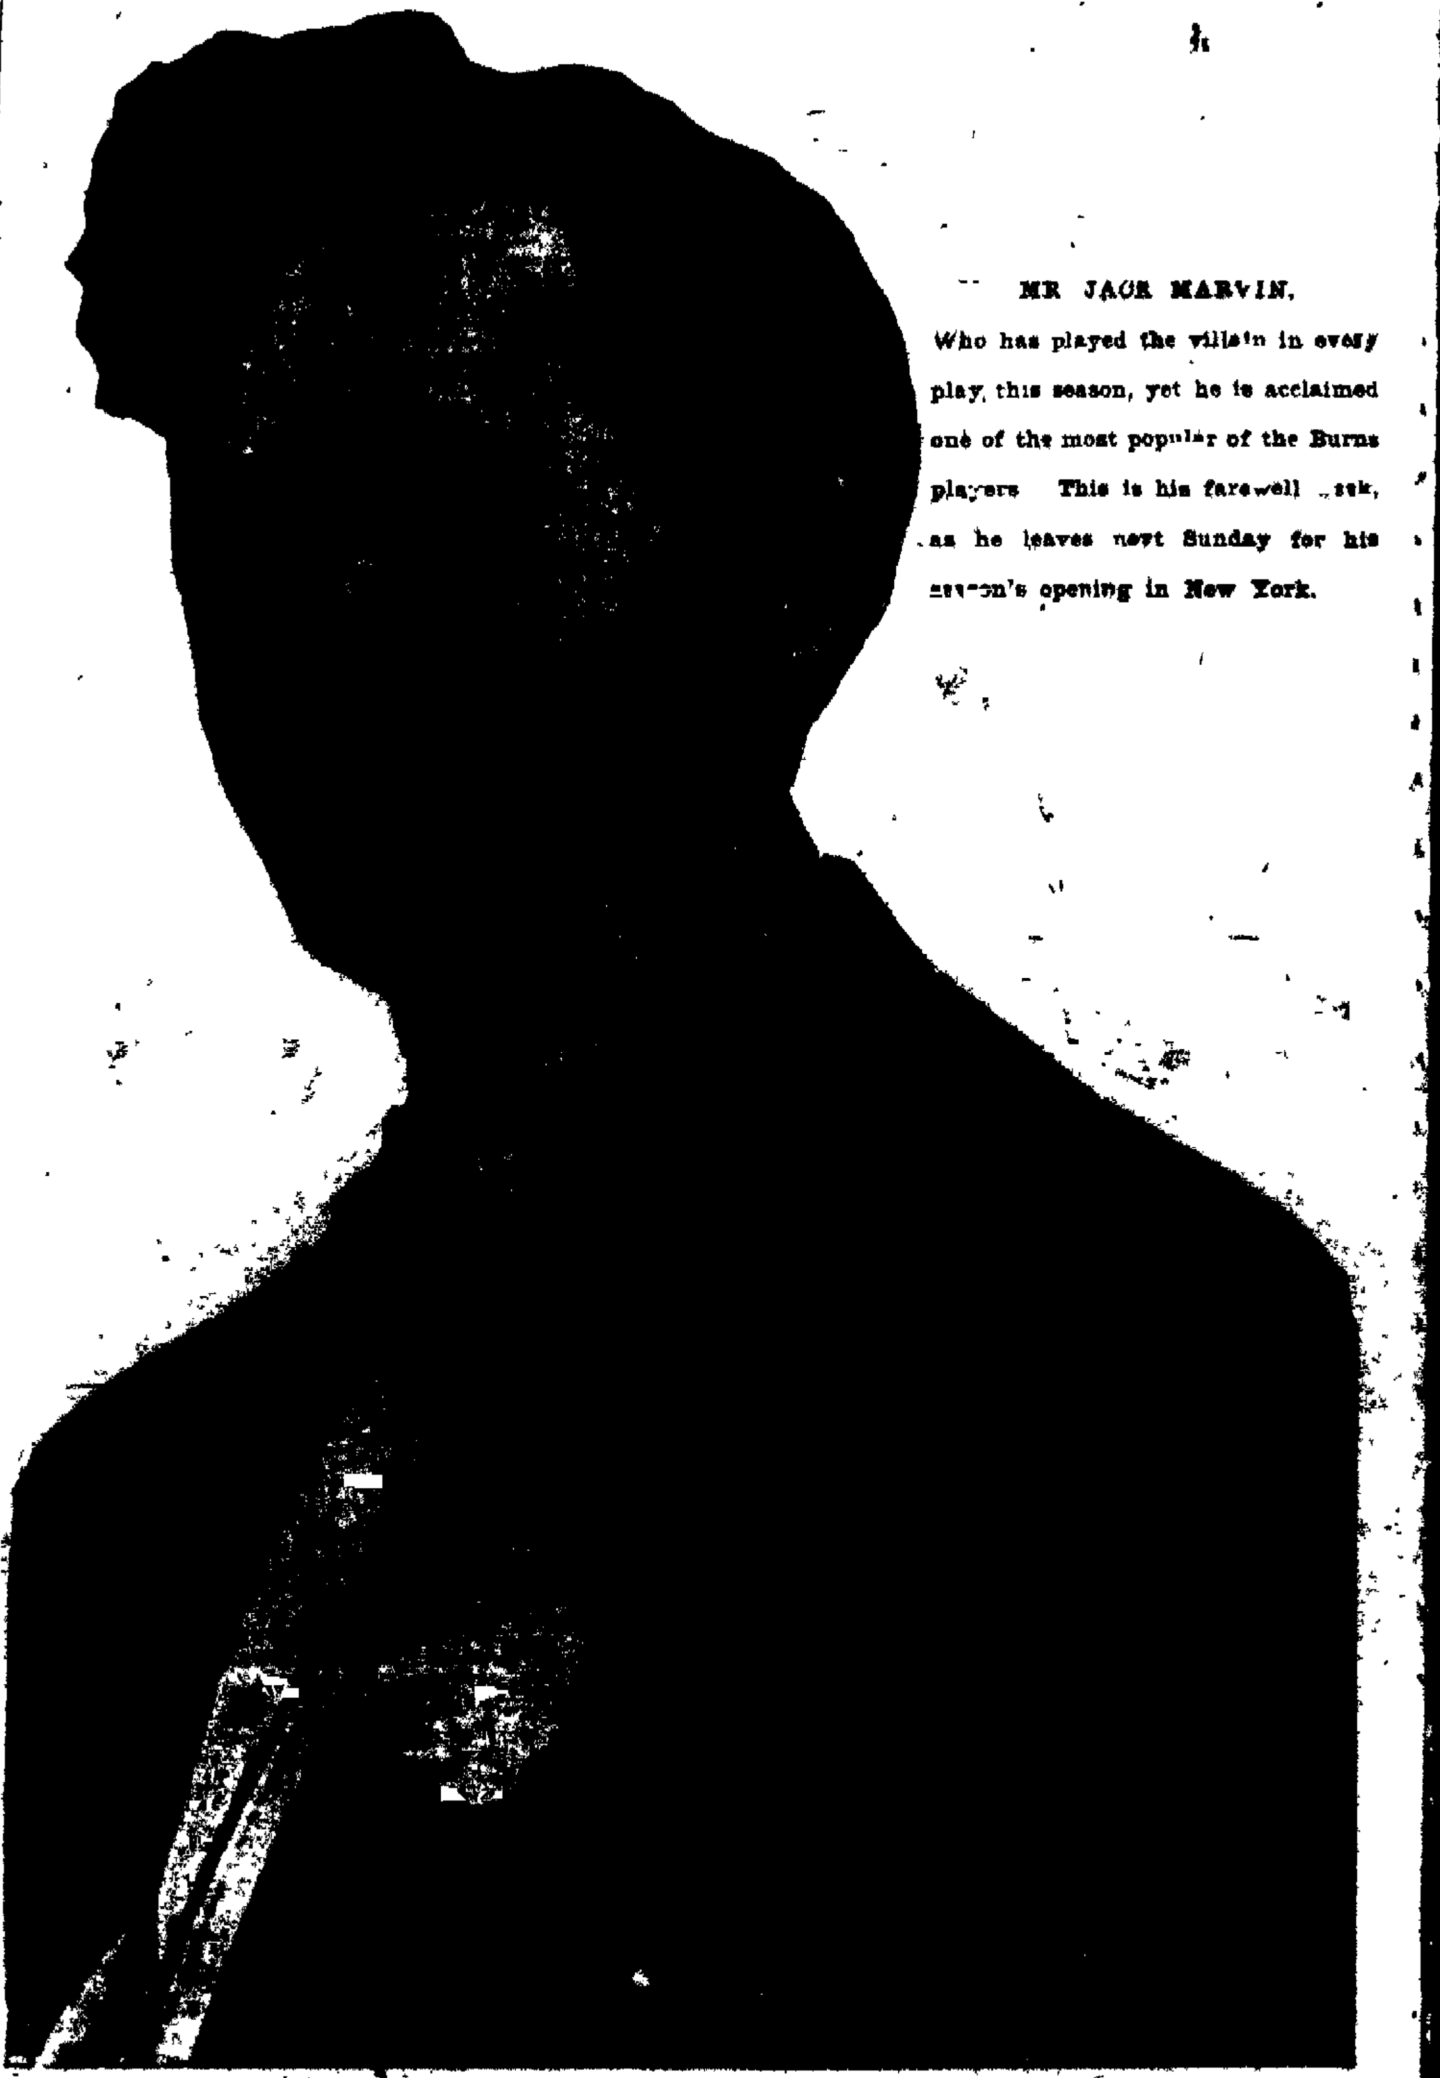
Measurements

	Miss Walker	Venus de Milo
Height	66 in	68½ in
Bottom of feet to thigh	33½ in	41 in
Right arm	13½ in	16½ in
Girth of shoulders	41¾ in.	51 in
Width of shoulders	16¾ in	19 in
Waist	32 in	39 in
Hips	41½ in	51 in
Neck	15 in	18½ in
Height of neck	4 in	5 in
Length of face	6 in	6 in
Width of face.	5 in	5 in
Height of face from under chin	9½ in	11½ in
Back to front of head	7 in	8½ in
Knee to bottom of right foot	19¾ in	23½ in
Length of foot	10 in	12 in

Because of her remarkable figure, Miss Walker is constantly being sought after by artists of oil and clay to pose for their work. Several times she has consented and the results of the artists are now hung in the galleries of Europe, one of them, showing her as a marine divinity, is in the Louvre. It is by Meissonier Millais the noted French artist. Millais also painted another picture of her which is in the National Art gallery in London. This shows her as a warlike goddess armed with a spear and wearing a mural crown of remarkable coloring. She is 20 years old and was born and educated in America, her father being a distinguished landscape painter. Miss Walker is said to be one of the most beautiful young women to tour the Sullivan & Considine circuit.

Many beekeepers beat tin pans at swarming time because they think it makes the bees settle down, but a contributor to Bee Culture says that this practice is merely a relic of a forgotten English law which required the beekeeper to give notice in this way that his bees were swarming and that he was entitled to follow them. If he lost sight of them after giving this warning the bees became the property of the person on whose land they alighted.

"Elevating a Husband" at the Burns



MR JACK MARVIN,

Who has played the villain in every play this season, yet he is acclaimed one of the most popular of the Burns players. This is his farewell week, as he leaves next Sunday for his season's opening in New York.

"Elevating a Husband," a domestic comedy drama in which Louis Mann starred with great success, will be the offering of the Burns players at the Burns theatre this week. The chief character of the play is one Charles Sample, owner of a five and ten cent store. Sample is a sort of [illegible] cultivator but at the opening of the play he has enough dimes and nickels sleeping peacefully in a bank drawing 4 per cent to make a pile so high that the Singer building in New York would look like [illegible] in the subway in comparison.

[illegible] a thrifty merchant who wants 40 per cent on his money, Sample does not permit the dimes and nickles to rest long. He starts a string of five and ten cent stores. He fits out his boarding house friends with good jobs, one villain of whom finally wrecks his business and tries to steal his wife.

Sample is just a plain lovable American who works hard for his home, who is loyal to his wife and mother, who gets his literary food out of the sporting extra and who knows that his wife is derided by all the "Waagneh" geniuses she has gathered into her home.

Sample loses his fortune, believes his wife unfaithful and takes his mother to the farm. Then shifts the scene back to the boarding house two years later. Mrs Sample has retrieved her husband's fortune in part without his knowledge during his two years' absence. Then Sample appears on the scene, learns that his wife has been faithful all the time, and the play ends happily.

There are many spontaneous laughs and many spots of intense interest and sympathy in the action of the play.

[illegible] possession of Mrs I. K. Hudson of Kansas City.

Mrs Hudson [illegible]

[illegible] longed to Carlotta, empress of Mexico, Maximilian's ill-fated consort.

Carlotta is one of the romantic and pathetic figures of history. Born in 1840, daughter of Leopold I of Belgium, she was the belle of European court circles. When 17 years old, she and Maximilian, the Archduke of Austria, fell in love with each other at first sight. They were married, the happiest royal couple in Europe until Maximilian accepted the imperial crown of Mexico.

In 1864 they went to Mexico, Carlotta taking this fan with her, probably as one of her wedding gifts. From the first Maximilian had trouble with his subjects. At length he was forced to send the empress back to Europe to beg help from Napoleon III and Pope Pius IX. Her mission failed. In her distress over her husband's misfortunes she became hopelessly insane. Her reason left her just before the news came of Maximilian's assassination. Carlotta is still living in [illegible] near Brussels under the care of her relatives.

TEXANS

One of your leading citizens has become heavily interested in our beautiful Ouray addition to the city of Manitou and will personally show you over the property. Some very choice building sites can still be had at prices unbelievably low. Whether you intend building a home or purchasing for an investment, an investigation of the property will be equally interesting to you. Why not do as others have done? Buy several for investment and resell them at a profit. One party who paid [illegible] for one of the best lots has refused an offer of $1,000.

Because we are offering them at such a ridiculous low price is no reason that they are without merit. We are attempting to close out the entire addition and are making prices which will enable us to do so.

Your Particular Attention is called to this lot, which remains unsold. Located on the water line with one of the most unsurpassed views to be found anywhere. The pass, the Cave of the Winds, Williams canon, Austin bluffs, Colorado Springs, the Garden of the Gods and many other points can be seen. A fine pine stands as a sentinel just over the front boundary of the lot. Former price asked for this piece of ground $600. Now can be bought for only $125. Terms if desired.

OTHER LOTS

In the vicinity of the above can be bought as low as $70 each. Several good $40 lots can still be had. Call at either our Colorado Springs or Manitou office and make an appointment to see the property. Phone Main 170 [illegible] and Hyde [illegible]

MONEY

Do you want to borrow? Do you wish a loan? If you do, read my ad. in the MONEY TO LOAN column of this issue.

MONEY

If you have money to loan (no matter whether in large or small amounts) it will pay you to see me. I buy and sell loans. My years of experience in the loan business in Colorado Springs qualify me to give you the best service.

INSURANCE

It all looks alike, but there is a difference. Wouldn't you prefer to have your insurance written in a $[illegible] company rather than in a small one? Some agents know how to write insurance, others do not; still others allow inexperienced clerks to write policies. When you have, perhaps, thousands of dollars involved, can you afford to take chances on inaccuracies and inexperience in the agent's office? If I write your insurance, these facts necessarily follow: First, your policy has been placed in a company of unquestioned financial standing. Second, your policy has been written by a man that knows the insurance business. Third, in the event of loss, the same will be adjusted promptly and to your satisfaction.

REAL ESTATE

IF YOU OWN a property which you are very anxious to dispose of, if it's a bargain, list it with me. I want to buy a small property, preferably a three or four-room house. The price must be right.

You Have Made $2,000

When you buy this acre of ground on the Cheyenne canon car line, and the land runs through to Cheyenne road. There is a

6-ROOM MODERN HOUSE

And 3 tent cottages on the ground and room for several more. The land is worth $2,000.00. It would cost $2,500.00 to build the house and about $1,000.00 to build the tent houses. The total cost would be about $5,500.00, or more, and if $[illegible] would buy them, you have made $2,000.00. Cheyenne creek runs through this land with fine shade trees [illegible]. AGRICULTURAL LANDS AND INVESTMENTS

I can offer bargains to immediate purchasers. With good crops and modern methods, land values must soon advance. Come in.

JOHN LENNOX

228 N. Tejon St.

Special Bargain

I own three quarter sections of good level land in the San Luis Valley. It is unencumbered and has full water rights and is well located. Is capable of growing grain and alfalfa and all kinds of vegetables. I will sell either or any of these quarters at an extremely low price of $15 per acre. The land adjoining this is held at a much higher price and this land is reasonably worth $50 an acre.

I also own a 320-acre farm, all under cultivation, with full paid water rights, which is also located in the San Luis Valley, Colorado. I will sell this at the very low price of $35. Land adjoining this place is selling at $100 an acre; but I am forced to sell and will have to make a great sacrifice. The above farm is located near one of the best railroad towns in the valley and it has a flowing well of pure water for domestic purposes. Anyone can get rich on this piece of land growing hogs, alfalfa and peas. To appreciate this bargain you ought to go and see it. Address B-93, Gazette.

330-A. RANCH

What do you think of eastern El Paso Co. farms under modern methods now being instituted?

A trip to that country will convert any unbeliever as to its merits.

Dairying is proving to be a very profitable industry.

Congested conditions in our cities are such that the "back to the soil" movement must increase.

I have a 330-acre ranch, southeast of Calhan in the very heart of the farming district of the county.

It is all fenced and cross-fenced with good wire fencing, and on main traveled road.

There is a small two-room house, a number one barn of cement blocks, good chicken houses, good well with windmill, large groves of cottonwood, locust and evergreens, considerable fruit.

There are about 100 acres in cultivation.

This farm is a money maker.

I should like to sell it as I am not situated so that I can give it the attention it deserves.

CRIPPLE CREEK MINES

IMPORTANT DISCOVERY ON GOLD BOND CONSOLIDATED

CRIPPLE CREEK, Aug. 23.—A new ore shoot for the Gold Bond Consolidated Mining company has been opened up by that well-known mine operator, George Hummer, at a depth of 300 feet, in the Sweet shaft, on that Gold hill property.

The production to date from this Gold hill estate has slightly exceeded $100,000, and the ore has been taken out from above the 200-foot level, where a good average grade of ore is also being mined by the lessee. The vein, designated the "Sweet" vein, as exposed in the 300-foot level is fully six feet wide between walls, and while the new ore shoot has been but little exploited the shipments made of ore taken out in the course of development, have shown a good average grade. The quartz, an altered granite, carries sylvanite and as the drift is extended it is confidently expected that the values will improve.

The World's Fair claim of the Gold Bond company has been leased to eastern parties, under favorable working conditions and royalties, and the operators will shortly commence work.

ELKTON CO. DISBURSES $50,000 IN DIVIDENDS

CRIPPLE CREEK, Aug. 23.—Checks for the quarterly dividend of the Elkton Consolidated Mining and Milling company were mailed stockholders today. The dividend at the rate of two cents per share amounts to $50,000, and brings the total amount paid in dividends to date to $3,220,460.39.

The gross production of the Elkton company as certified to the Colorado Springs Mining Stock association to January 1, 1913, had amounted to $16,[illegible] Taking this year's production on the output of the six months [illegible] 31, 1912, [illegible] to $[illegible], the Raven hill [illegible] has produced approximately [illegible]

The [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] LEASES ARE SHIPPING STEADILY

CRIPPLE CREEK, Aug. 23.—[illegible] leasing on [illegible] mining a fair grade of milling ore, and although handicapped by lack of steam or electric [illegible] are making a production of from six to eight cars a month. This ore is hoisted to surface by whim.

J. Pike, operating at the 1,500-foot level of the incline shaft, at an approximate depth from the surface of 1,100 feet, is mining a smelting grade of ore from the Grave vein and a car recently shipped gave returns of 3½ ounces gold or $70 to the ton. A shipment of milling grade ore taken out in course of development is being prepared.

General Manager John T. Hawkins further reports two prospecting permits have been issued to local parties, on other levels of the incline shaft, on the Ophir mine, through which this Raven hill property is operated.

WATER MAKES SILVER TIP LEASE IDLE

CRIPPLE CREEK, Aug. 23.—Seepage water has caused a temporary shutdown of the Silver Tip mine on Bull hill, owned by the United States Gold Mines company and operated under lease by Hemby and Anderson. The lessees, who have been mining a good grade of ore at the 300-foot level, were obliged to pull their tools yesterday. With the rainy season over operations will be resumed.

METAL MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The metal markets were quiet and practically nominal today. Lake copper, $16.00; electrolytic, $15.87½@16.00; casting, $15.62½@15.75.

Iron unchanged.

NEW YORK MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Stocks ruled at moderately higher figures during most of today's half session. Trading was on a small scale, but the undertone showed pronounced strength. The supply of stocks was not large, and it did not require heavy buying to lift figures all through the list. Reading, Union Pacific and Steel moved forward together, followed by an array of less conspicuous stocks and advances were well held until just before the close, when a quick reaction reduced gains.

The upward movement was stimulated by optimistic advices regarding the Mexican situation.

Some buying of Canadian Pacific on direct orders from Berlin was reported. That stock made a substantial advance on a small volume of business.

Chesapeake & Ohio touched 60, making a gain of more than three points since its dividend rate was reduced from 5 to 4 per cent.

The decline in the list at the close was ascribed to profit taking, and to vague rumors of a sudden change for the worse in the Mexican situation.

Changes shown in the bank statement were only nominal. The cash gain was less than $500,000, and there was an expansion in loans of about $8,000,000.

Bonds were steady. Total sales, par value, $445,000.

United States 4's declined ½c and the Panama 3's, coupon, ¼c on call on the week.

CHICAGO MARKET

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Liquidation of September corn that in the final trading carried prices of that option down nearly 2 cents was the feature of the grain market today. At the close, corn prices were ⅝c to 1⅝c net lower. Wheat finished at a net decline of ⅛ @¼ to ⅜c, oats were down ⅛ to ⅜c, and provisions were unchanged to 17½c lower.

Improvement in the fields since the recent rains was the chief bear influence in the corn pit, and this was increased in effectiveness by estimates of large increase in receipts of cash corn in this market next week. Leading longs began to unload early and as the day progressed the volume of the September option dumped on the market became larger. There was more than the usual free week-end selling of the other options, and they declined also, but not to the extent of the near month. Cash corn in the sample market was off ½ to 2c. Easier cables also helped the bears.

Wheat dropped with corn, in spite of reported sales for export of about 150,000 bushels. Improved milling call failed to help prices, nor could the bulls check the downward trend even under a large falling off in primary receipts. The bears were helped by clear weather in the spring and winter belts, favorable for harvesting; threshing and marketing in the former and for plowing and seeding in the latter. Trading in wheat today was comparatively small, corn receiving the greater part of attention.

Free selling of oats on expected larger runs from the country next week carried prices down.

A very narrow market ruled in provisions. The best business was in ribs.

FINANCIAL REVIEW

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—There were elements of uncertainty in the outlook both for financial and general affairs which accounted for a hesitating movement of stocks this week. Two doubtful factors had a special force in view of the extent to which the recent rise in prices had [illegible] a clearing of the financial ho[illegible]. The strained relations between the United States and Mexico, the continued drought in the southwest and the imminence of the interior crop-moving demand for cash, were the dominant influences on securities.

Stocks of corporations having direct interests in Mexico responded conspicuously to the varying news of the week. The Mexican position, however, had a far wider bearing than on the special stocks as shown by the sensitiveness of foreign [illegible] markets to the news.

Foreign [illegible] of little [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] of [illegible] New York [illegible]

The showing of the great foreign [illegible] of the [illegible] which have been [illegible] for [illegible] expected strain of the [illegible]. Reserves and bullion holdings of the Bank of England exceed those for any August since 1896. The German Imperial bank's gold holdings have risen to new record figures for many successive weeks. The Bank of France's holdings of gold now stand at a record for this season, except in 1908.

The New York clearing house banks also, while now stronger in reserves than a year ago, have been pursuing a cautious policy about putting out new loans except for short periods. The placing of government funds with southern and western banks promises, however, to relieve part of the expected demand on New York cash reserves. The engagement of gold in Argentina for shipment to New York marks the reopening of a source of supply that has been closed to this market for several years past.

Indications pointed to further deterioration of the corn crop, and apprehension of damage from the drought spread to southwestern cotton states.

Copper and electric stocks responded to good trade news. The steel trade feels anxious over the question whether buying is to be stimulated by slight price concessions.

GOOD FOR CANADA!

From Mining and Scientific Press.

Mining in Canada, it is said, is about to receive further recognition by the appointment of a Dominion minister of mines. At present the geological survey and the mines branch of the department of mines are under the charge of a deputy minister, Mr. A. P. Low. Owing to Mr. Low's long sickness the effective direction of affairs has been for some time in the able hands of Mr. R. W. Brock, director of the geological survey. If a separate minister be appointed it will give the mines direct representation in the cabinet and in view of the great and growing importance of mining in Canada this would be but deserved recognition.

PRODUCTION AND IMPORTATION OF GRAPHITE

Natural graphite is the product of different geologic agencies, mostly related to the heat of the molten magma which, during periods of convulsion, has penetrated the overlying rock strata from the earth's interior. It has two forms, crystalline or, as it is known to the trade, "flake" graphite, which occurs as small flakes disseminated through crystalline schists and amorphous graphite, which has no grain or structure. Coal beds in some places have been turned into graphite by the confined heat of intruded molten rock, and this natural phenomenon may have suggested the feasibility of manufacturing artificial amorphous graphite, an industry which of late years has become of considerable importance in the United States. Importations of graphite, however, largely exceed domestic production, the figures for 1912, according to the United States geological survey, being for the imports 25,643 short tons valued at $1,[illegible], and for the domestic output 2,445 tons of natural graphite, valued at $207,033, and 6,448 tons of manufactured graphite, valued at $830,193. The island of Ceylon is the greatest contributor to American imports of graphite.

Graphite is a mineral of great and increasing industrial importance, and has many uses, though the graphite from any one source or mine is not adapted to all these uses. One of the oldest and most important applications of graphite is in the manufacture of crucibles for use in the steel, brass and bronze and other industries. Such crucibles must have good tensile strength, and for their manufacture a fibrous or flaky graphite is used, the interlocking of the fibers adding to the strength. Ground Ceylon lump graphite is the material most in favor in the United States for making crucibles, although small amounts of American flake graphite are also used. Amorphous graphite has never been successfully utilized in crucible manufacture, except for [illegible] crucibles.

The United States geological survey has just published, as an advance chapter from Mineral Resources for 1912, a report on the graphite industry in the United States by [illegible] [illegible]

ARE BIG BANKERS TRYING TO KILL THE CURRENCY BILL?

Frank A. Vanderlip of New York.

The mystery surrounding the statement of Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo that the big New York banks have tried to influence action against the Owen-Glass currency bill has been cleared up by the discovery that the secretary based his statement on a letter issued by the National City bank of New York, the largest bank in the United States, of which Frank A. Vanderlip, once a Chicago newspaper man, is president. Mr. McAdoo said a powerful group of New York bankers was trying to depress the government 2 per cent bonds, which now sell below par, to defeat the administration currency bill.

The statement, it is learned, was based on something written in the regular July letter of the National City bank. The letter does not show on its face that such was the intention, but the secretary believes it contained misrepresentations of the currency situation, perhaps unintentional, which would influence country bankers, who depend on the big banks for advice, to request their congressmen to vote against the bill.

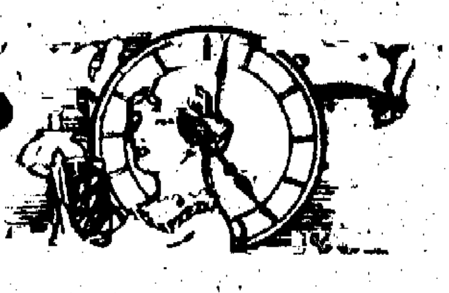
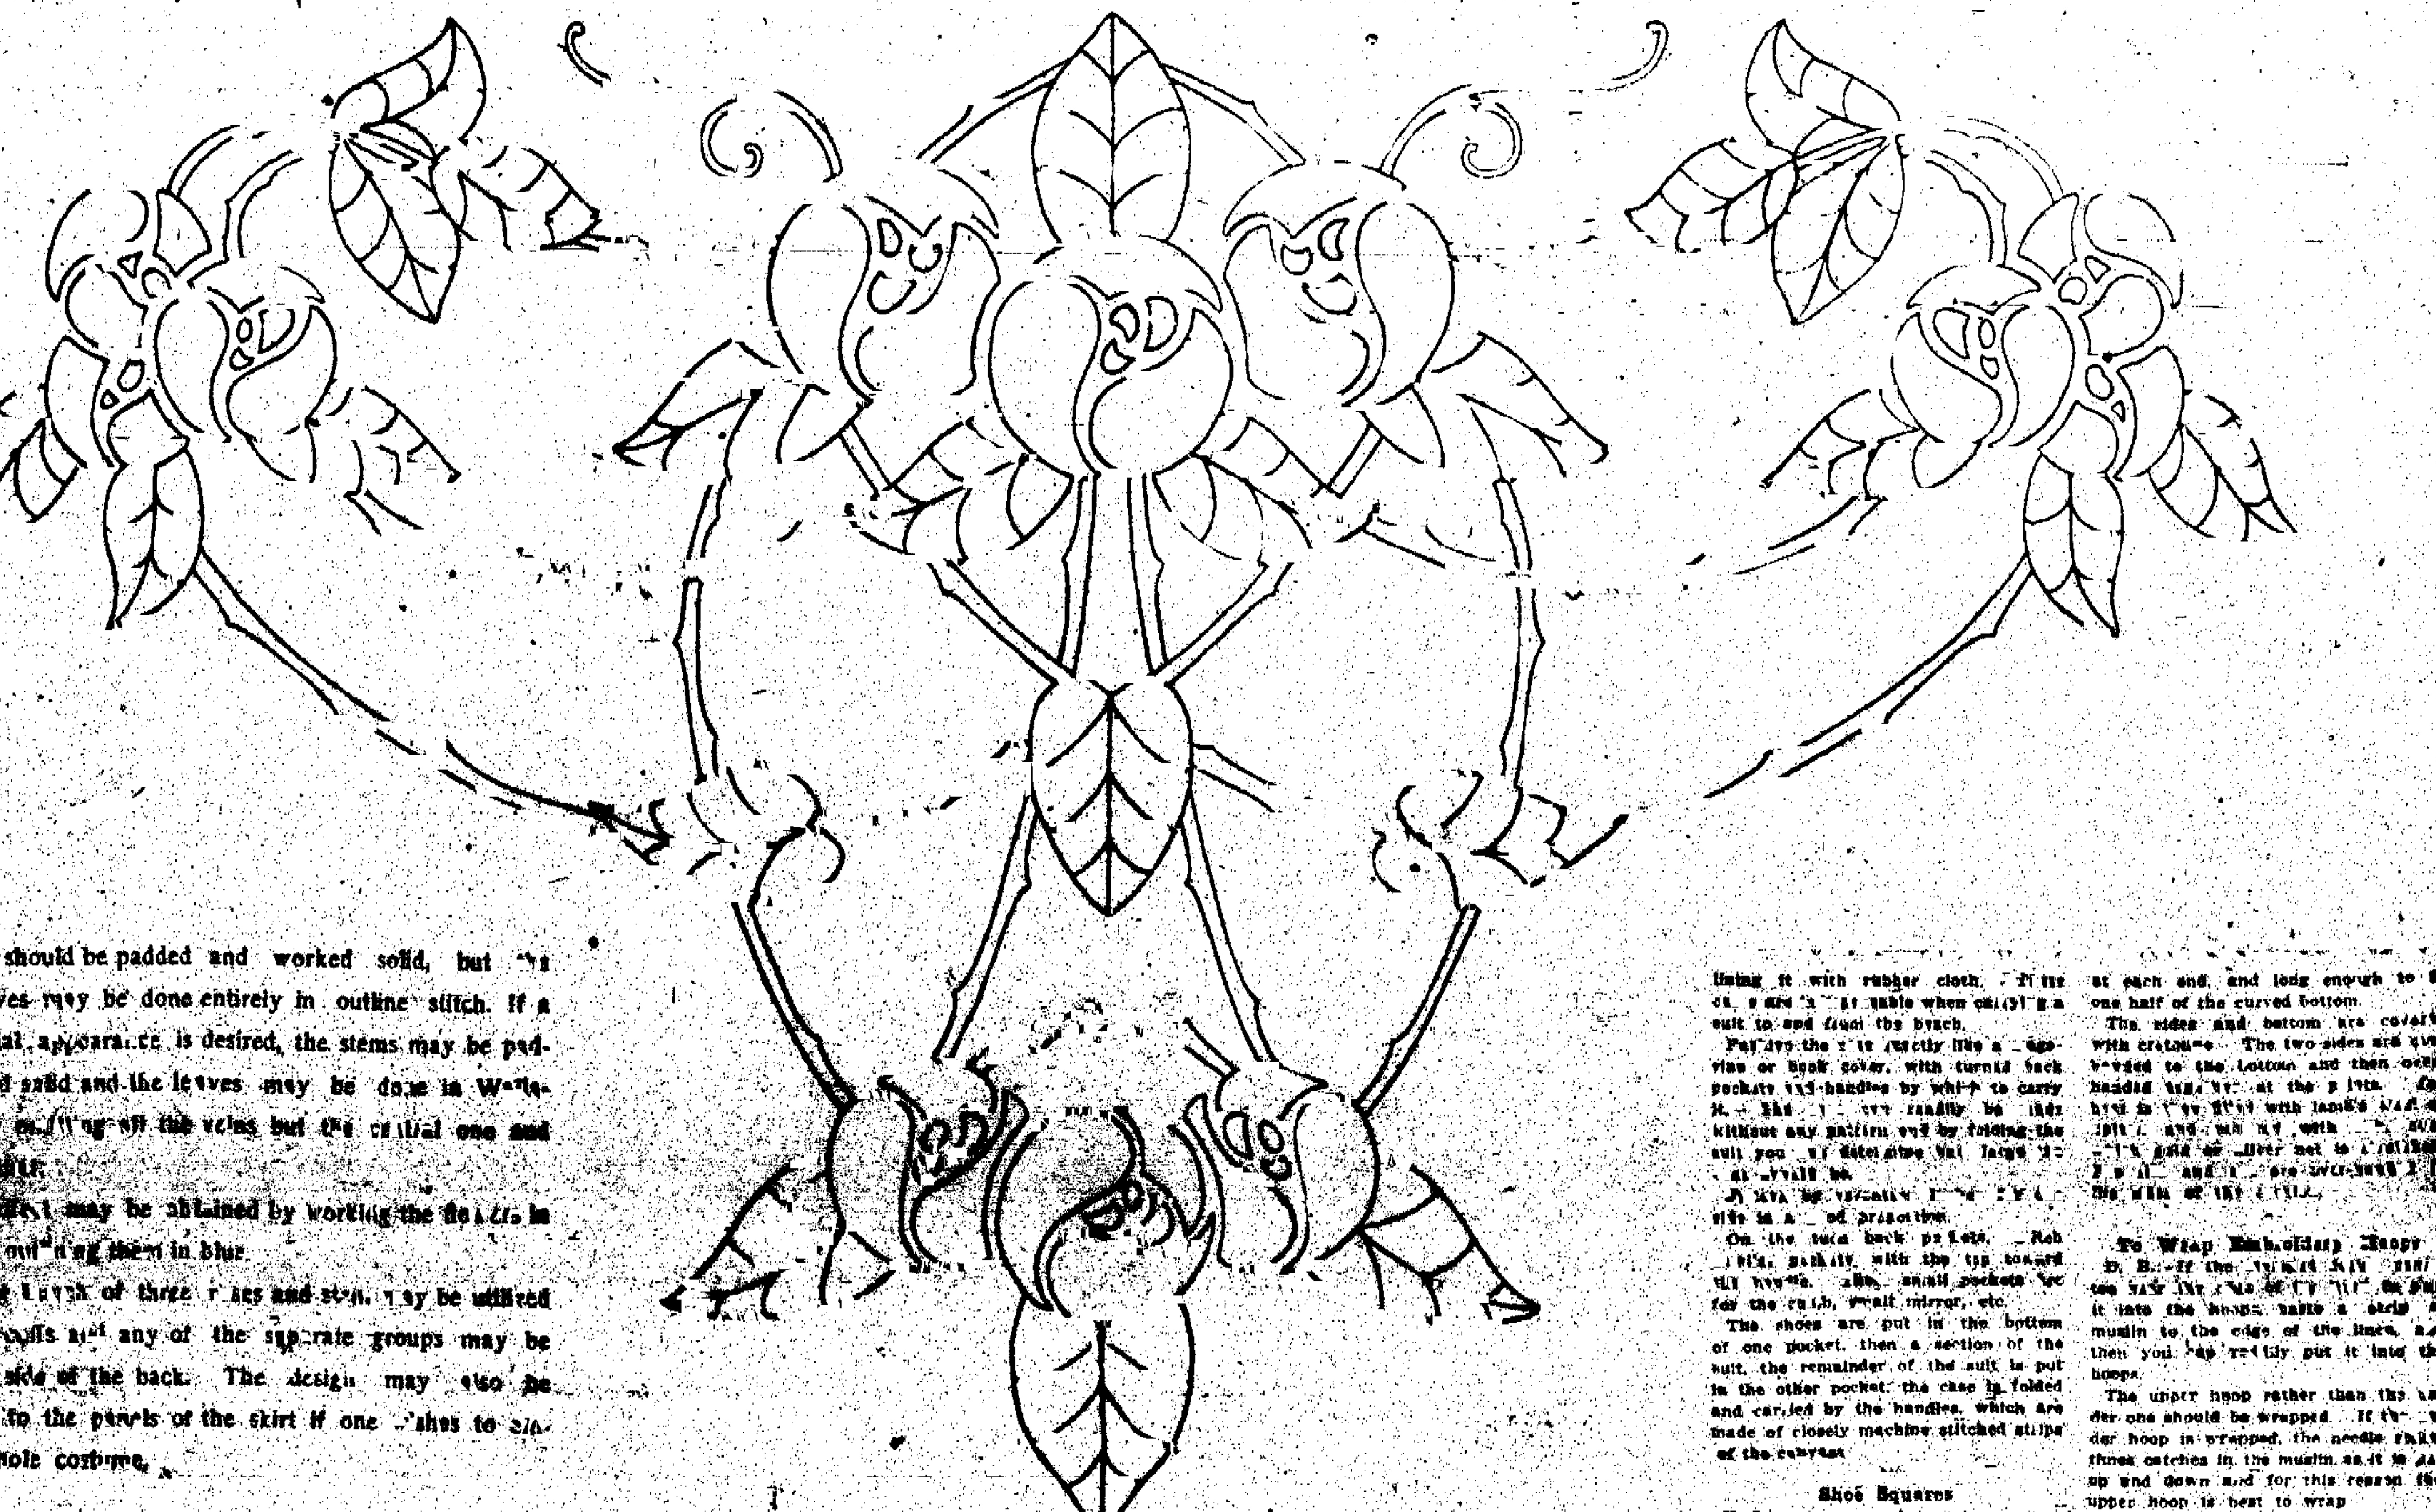
WORK and PLAY for the IDLE HOUR



CONVENTIONAL ROSE DESIGN FOR BLOUSE



The roses should be padded and worked solid, but the stems and leaves may be done entirely in outline stitch. If a more substantial appearance is desired, the stems may be padded and worked solid and the leaves may be done in Wallachian stitch, by leaving out the veins but the central one and working from this.

A good effect may be obtained by working the flowers in white and then outlining them in blue.

The lower group of three roses and stems may be utilized for collar and cuffs and any of the separate groups may be used on either side of the back. The design may also be easily adapted to the panels of the skirt if one wishes to embroider the whole costume.

Miss Norris' Answers to Correspondents

Swedish Weaving.

MRS. H. O.—Swedish weaving is not only very effective for towels but is used for dresser scarfs, bags and collar and cuff sets.

To make Swedish weaving, draw out the threads to a certain point. Forty threads is usually a very good proportion for towels, although if the huck is very coarse, thirty threads is usually enough. After the threads are drawn the edges should be overcast and the design is then carried out with a darning stitch, over and under groups containing an equal number of threads.

If it is hard to keep the threads separated into equal groups, they can be divided by double hemstitching. This, of course, takes longer to prepare for the weaving. But it is really a great help for the beginner, as it keeps the threads distinctly divided into groups having an equal number of threads.

Two colors are usually used so that the pattern will be more clearly accentuated. After a design has been worked many pleasing variations can be made with a little ingenuity.

English Meadow Daisy.

T. B. J.—The English meadow daisy is generally developed in this way: The stitches forming the petals are carried across from tip to base, the work being done with rope silk. The stitches are taken over a small stiletto, which causes the threads to remain lose and raised.

No padding is used and the work is very effective for small flowers scattered over crepe or voile. Borders of these flowers make an attractive dress trimming for any of the soft, clinging materials.

Any small flower design, such as the forget-me-not, could be used for an English meadow daisy design if carried out as given above. Four petals are usually sufficient to successfully represent this flower.

Block Printing.

A. L.—Block printing is closely related to stenciling and gives very much the same effect, but the work is done with wooden blocks, hence its name.

For block printing the design is transferred to a smooth block of soft wood. The background of the design is then cut away with a sharp penknife and chisel. This throws the pattern into high relief. A cloth is then saturated with the coloring mixture, which is mixed the same as for stenciling and of the same consistency. The block is then stamped on the cloth and then on the material. If two colors are used they are put on the block with a brush and then stamped on the material.

Because the wood design is more difficult to make the work is not as popular as stenciling. The pattern when finished looks as though it were printed on the fabric, while stenciling looks as though it were woven into the goods.

Very effective block printing may be done with a child's playing blocks which come in the different geometrical shapes. By arranging a geometrical pattern these blocks can be used with splendid effect, thus eliminating the process of wood cutting.

Block printing can only be successfully done on loosely woven materials, such as Russian crash, canvas or [illegible].

Applique Work.

Mrs. W.—Very pretty [illegible] quilts and counterpanes can be made by means of applique patchwork. Applique patch work is not new, but it is just being recognized as an artistic form of handicraft and is being revived. The new designs are particularly attractive.

The different sections are cut from material of different colors and sewed to a plain foundation. Very effective counterpanes, especially for a child's bed, can be made by outlining with colored floss a design intended for applique patchwork.

An applique spread with curtains and scarfs, done in outline stitch of the same design would make a very attractive room.

Embroidered Squares.

Miss G. G.— It would require nine medallions for the lunch cloth. There are various ways to put the squares together. They can either be joined with cluny insertion, with an edging of cluny lace, or they can be joined with Irish ladder insertion. After the squares are joined with the ladder insertion the ladder work is put around the entire square thus formed and joined to a hem. This latter method is especially good if you wish the cloth to be made large, as a wide hem can be added in this way.

The center medallion may be embroidered with a monogram instead of the eyelet pattern. The center monogram will lend distinction to the cloth and is very attractive with the embroidered squares.

The small squares in Richelieu embroidery, which usually measure five or six inches, can either be joined with insertion to form one large square or they can be arranged to form a border around a large square center of plain linen. They can also be used with lace insertion to decorate a buffet or dresser cover.

There are many ways in which either the large or small squares can be applied to practical use and as one square can be embroidered at a time they offer a splendid medium for Summer needlework.

New Buckle.

E. D.—Enormous French knots, made with heavy mercerized floss, form a most attractive decoration which is very popular just now in fact. French knots of all sizes have come into their own again as a form of ornamentation, not only for dress trimmings, but for household linens as well.

A buckle seen the other day which would be very effective indeed for a lingerie or evening frock was made of French knots, three rows being used.

The buckle was round in shape and the knots were made on a piece of [illegible] and when finished were stretched over a card board foundation. The knots were made very close together and alternated, one very deep pink and the light pink. The rows of knots were also made to alternate, so that the result was what looked like a wreath of small roses, for the large French knots offer very good representations of the rambler rose. Very heavy silk or mercerized cotton should be used for these large knots. A buckle like the one described above could be quickly made by any girl who is at all familiar with needlework and it is a decoration that is very striking and effective for a sheer gown, for it forms just the right finish for a ribbon sash.

French Knots.

A. H.—To make French knots successfully requires practice, although the stitch is not hard to master.

Throw the needle through to the right side of the goods, then hold the needle in the right hand and with the left hand twist the silk or cotton around the needle three or four times. Now put the point of the needle through the goods again, very close to the point where it was first brought up. Throw the twists close to the needle and push the needle through the material. Hold the thread with the left hand while pulling the needle through so that the twists will not uncoil.

The size of the knots is determined by the number of twists around the needle and by the size of the cotton used.

Traveling Apron.

Anna M.—A traveling apron is always a nice present and can be very readily made.

Cut the foundation and then baste two long strips across the apron, binding the edges with tape. Divide the strip into pockets of various sizes for the different toilet articles, lining one of the pockets with rubber to hold the washrag. Bind the entire apron with tape and add strings so that the apron can be tied around the waist.

Either brown or dark blue linen is a good selection for the apron material.

This convenience is inestimable when traveling and is a gift that will surely be appreciated by anyone contemplating a long journey.

Gifts from Flowers.

Mrs. W. T.—A heart-shaped bag, which can be made of dimity, having a white ground with lavender flowers would be just the thing for your dried lavender. Fill the bag and tie it at the top with a row of lavender ribbon. These bags would make most welcome gifts to put lavender among the linen.

A small cushion which can be used for a nap pillow, may be filled with rose leaves. Make a cover of rose sprigged dimity, with an edging of German Val. lace, putting the lace on plain around the edge.

Anyone would enjoy taking a nap on a rose pillow and pillows of this kind could also be added to your gift closet.

Lettering.

Mrs. B. G.—Initials should always be padded in a frame, so that the work will be straight and firm. The padding consists of rows of darning stitches, placed very closely together, the stitches being piled higher in the center. Darning cotton may be used for the padding, although the same cotton, as that used for the initial, only in a size heavier, usually produces the best results.

When making a curved letter, the stitches are slightly crowded on the inner edge to preserve the correct shape.

When letters of a monogram are all one size and placed so that one closely follows the other, the letter of the last name should be placed last, but if the monogram is designed so that the middle letter is given prominence and is larger than the others, then the last letter of the name is placed in the center.

The letters for marking a sheet are usually three or four inches in size, the same size is also used for table cloths.

For a bedspread the letters are larger and can be placed either in the center or diagonally across one of the lower corners of the bed. If the spread is made to extend over the pillow roll then the letters can be placed in the [illegible] inches, are used.

Pin Ball

Mrs. M. O.—A very quaint pin ball can be made with three small dolls. The small bisque dolls with pointed arms and legs measuring about two inches are used.

Cut a piece of silk in circular form about five inches in diameter. Turn in the edge and gather. Cut holes for the arms and legs, then stuff with cotton and gather the edge around the neck.

Choose the little dolls without hair and put a pointed cap on each little head so that the little stuffed dolls will look like goblins.

Tie a narrow ribbon around the neck of each doll making the ribbons of different lengths and fasten the three together under a rosette.

These doll pin balls are very cunning and offer a good suggestion for a gift that children could fashion.

Guest Towel

Anna B.—One of the newest ways to decorate guest towels is by means of flower motifs in crochet, and then arrange them to form a border above the hem of the towel. The motifs are placed, basted and then whipped to the material.

Daisy motifs in white would make a most attractive border. After the motifs are whipped to the huckaback, the center can be filled with French knots in yellow mercerized floss. In place of the crocheted motifs, flowers of venetian embroidery could be used, over-casting them to the material, as the loose petals would not be so practical for towels.

The motifs can be made in all white, with a touch of color in the centers or colored cotton can be employed to make them.

Bathing Suit Case

Miss W. N.—You could make a bathing suit case from a long strip of canvas, lining it with rubber cloth. This case is [illegible] suitable when carrying a suit to and from the beach.

Fashion the suit exactly like a [illegible] or book cover, with turned back pockets and handles by which to carry it. The [illegible] very readily be made without any pattern and by folding the suit you will determine just large the case will be.

[illegible] in a good protection.

On the turned back pockets [illegible], with the top toward the handles. Also small pockets [illegible] for the comb, small mirror, etc.

The shoes are put in the bottom of one pocket, then a section of the suit, the remainder of the suit is put in the other pocket; the case is folded and carried by the handles, which are made of closely machine stitched strips of the canvas.

Shoe Squares

V. D.—A very good way to preserve and pack slippers and shoes is to bind squares of Japanese crepe with tape. Tape is also sewed on each side to tie when the shoe is folded into it. Each shoe and slipper is then rolled into a square and tied.

More elaborate squares could be made by lining the crepe with silk and having the ties of ribbon. These could be used for the party slippers and "best" shoes, while the more ordinary ones could serve for the slippers and shoes of every day wear.

Boat Pin-Cushion

Alice W.—A boat shaped cushion is unusual, being one of the newest shapes in pin cushions.

Make a cardboard foundation, cut in an oval shape, tapering at each point like a boat. Two sides are then cut, shaped at the top, being slightly higher at each end, and long enough to fit one half of the curved bottom.

The sides and bottom are covered with cretonne. The two sides are [illegible] to the bottom and then overhanded [illegible] at the points. [illegible]

To Wrap Embroidery Hoops

D. B.—If the [illegible] it into the hoops, baste a strip of muslin to the edge of the linen, and then you can readily put it into the hoops.

The upper hoop rather than the under one should be wrapped. If the under hoop is wrapped, the needle sometimes catches in the muslin as it is put up and down and for this reason the upper hoop is best to wrap.

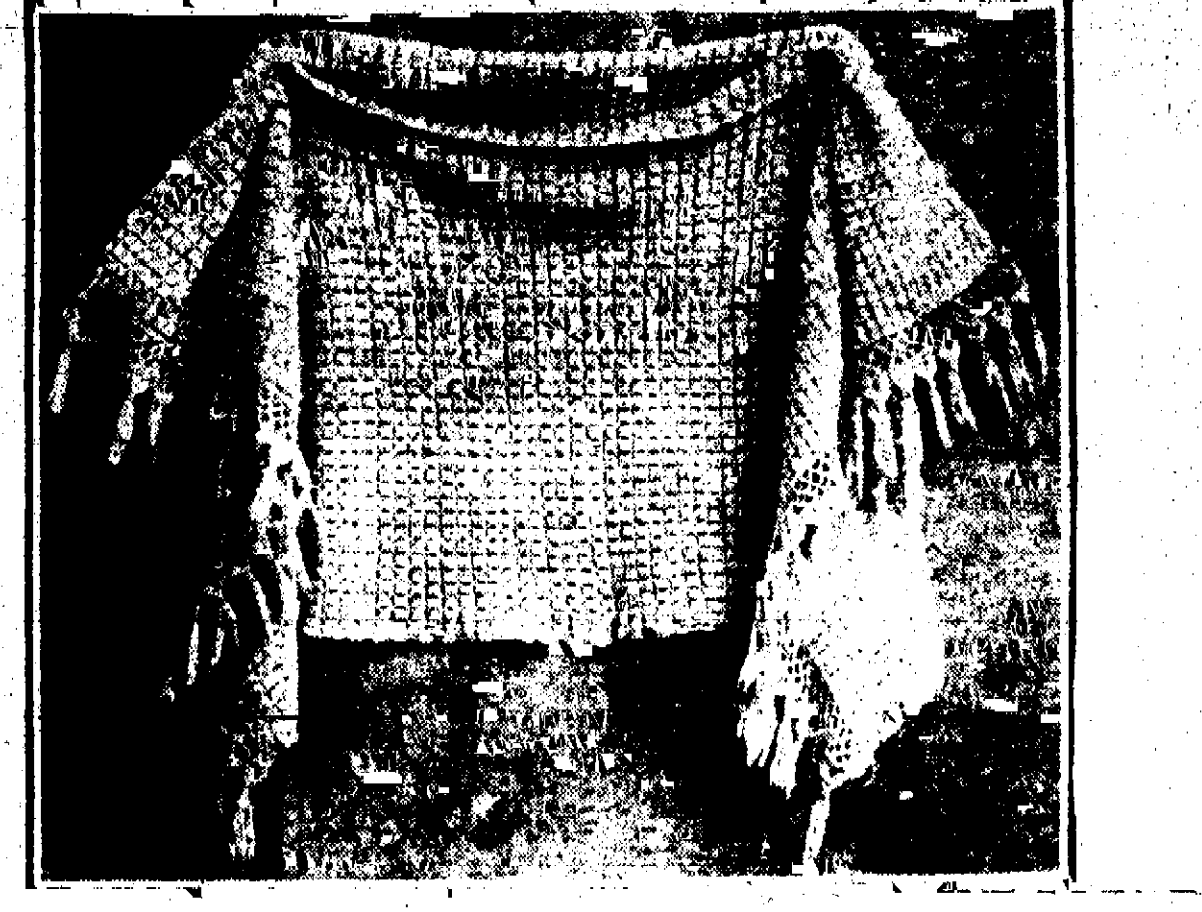
The long strips of muslin that are cut from beading or embroidery insertion can be utilized to wrap the embroidery hoops. The wrapping of the hoops should be very neatly done. Wind the material around the hoop several times and then bring the goods back over it, so that the end of the strip will be covered and not slip out from underneath the material. The strip is sewed securely at the end when the wrapping is finished.

Rolled Hem

G. A.—A quick substitute for a rolled hem can be made in this way. Cut the goods with a sharp clear cut so that there will be no loose threads. Hold the beading or lace insertion toward you just below the material and overcast it.

If neatly done the work will look like a very tiny rolled hem.

The New Crochetted Scarf Shawl



THERE are times, especially in the late Summer, when a [illegible] scarf is indispensable. This design possesses the good qualities of both, and can be made as wide or narrow as one desires. For a young girl it is lovely made in pale blue and pink or white and pale green, while it is just as charming for an elderly lady in lavender and white. The pattern gives the effect of squares of one color, outlined on two sides with the contrasting shade, while the border is usually of the darker shade.

This shawl requires five skeins of white Shetland floss and two skeins of any color desired. Bone crochet hook. Make a chain of one hundred and fifty stitches with the white floss, then turn and go back, putting a single crochet in each stitch. Join on the colored wool, make single crochet in first stitch, then a chain of three stitches fastened in every third stitch with single crochet. Do this to the end of the line. Join on white again and crochet four stitches of double crochet in each loop, going on continuously to the end of the line, without making an extra stitch between loops. Always start the white wool on same side, and when finished cover the ends of worsted all along the [illegible].

Border at ends. With the colored wool make chains of five stitches fastened with single crochet into every third stitch along the end of the [illegible]. Each loop is fastened in middle of [illegible] of loops crochet six double crochet [illegible]. Finish with a scallop, placing [illegible] wool between stitches of the scallops.

Society Attends Opening Day of Polo Tournament

Prominent society folk watching the polo matches yesterday afternoon at the country club. They are: Mrs. W. H. Evans, Mr. Evans, Mrs. Frederick Hitchcock Morley, Miss McCandless, Miss Dorothy Woods, Miss Dorothy Matthews of Cincinnati, Miss Elizabeth Davis, Mrs. John G. Shields, Mr. J. Addison Hayes; and three Denverites, Mrs. Lafayette Hughes, Mrs. George Adams and Mrs. Lawrence Phipps, Jr., who was Miss Gladys Hart of this city.

Lovely Weather, Fine Polo and Brilliant Society for Polo Games

"A Polo Day." It was just that, the opening day of the long-talked-of, long-planned-for polo tournament at the Cheyenne Mountain Country club.

The God of the Weather smiled and, of course, that was a wonderful thing for there could have been no fine polo watched by fascinating women in natty costumes otherwise.

The players and their ponies were in the best of training, eager and impatient for the games, determined to outdo even their own splendid records on the field.

Society was out en masse in stunning attire to lend the support of their presence to the teams they cheered so loyally. Many smart motors gathered in the parking spaces, filled with gay parties of the fashionable set and their house guests. The boxes presented a gay kaleidoscope of color and motion with the bright gowns of their occupants, and stunning parasols shading smart little hats that closely fitted bewitching, smiling faces.

Many members of the automobile parties left their machines for canvas chairs on the grass near the edge of the field, and between the two games they strolled back and forth, to and from the club house, chatting here and there with friends and stopping whenever a polo helmet came in sight to wish the wearer well or congratulate him on victories already won, while some of the smart set remained on the cool veranda of the club house, playing the inevitable bridge between exciting moments of the games.

Among the motor parties were: Mr. and Mrs. Chaloner Schley and their guest; Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Baldwin and a party; Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Penrose, Mrs. Robert Walsh, Major and Mrs. Charles T. Lowndes and their children; Mr. J. Addison Hayes and Mrs. John G. Shields, Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Shober; Mr. and Mrs. Ashton Potter and Captain Long of the Fort Robinson team, Mrs. Lewis Gibbs Carpenter and Mr. Gardner; Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Kernochan and their guests; Mr. and Mrs. Leonard E. Curtis and a party, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Dunning and Mr. and Mrs. Guy Waggoner of Texas, Dr. and Mrs. William V. Mullin and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Giddings, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph C. Giddings, Miss Barbara Chase and [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. William O'Brien, [illegible] Mrs. A. G. Sharp and party, [illegible] Mrs. M. H. Wilbur and guests, [illegible] Mrs. George Birdsall, and [illegible].

In the boxes were Mrs. Joseph Har[illegible] children, Mrs. F. H. [illegible] Mrs. Frederick Hitchcock [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. William H. [illegible] Mr. George K. Shields, Mrs. James T. Anderson and Mr. Fred L. Sherr[illegible], Mrs. Chester Alan Arthur and Mr. Gordon Russell Thayer; Mrs. Lawrence Phipps, Jr., Mrs. George Adams and Mrs. Lafayette Hughes of Denver, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Hungerford, with Mrs. Travis, Miss Smith and Mr. Smith, Mrs. Franklin Bartlett, who had Mr. and Mrs. Robert Seeney of New York, Mr. C. H. Eisenmenger, whose guests were Miss Muhlberg, Miss Dorothy Woods, Miss Dorothy Matthews of Cincinnati, and their chaperon, Miss McCandless, Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey Kissel, who had in their box Mrs. Armit, Mrs. Egbert Smith and [illegible], Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Hunt, Miss Joy Hale and [illegible] [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. [illegible], Mr. and Mrs. Copeland of Nebraska and Mrs. W. S. Johnson; Dr. and Mrs. Arthur C. H. Friedmann and Miss [illegible] Hopkins; Mr. and Mrs. William Colman Sturgis, Mrs. F. W. Goddard; Miss Holmes and Miss Julie Sturgis; Mr. and Mrs. R. W. L. Holland, Mr. and Mrs. John Tait Milliken and Mr. and Mrs. Grant Hemenway, Dr. and Mrs. Paul M. Lennox, whose guests were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel and Mrs. Fisher of St. Louis, and Mr. Gunsaulus; Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Halsell of Kansas City, who had Mr. and Mrs. Ewing Halsell and Mrs. L. F. Parker of Vinita, Okla., and Miss Mary Halsell; Dr. and Mrs. Frantz of New Rochelle, N. Y., whose guests were Dr. and Mrs. L. G. Brown, Miss Ethel Frantz and Mr. Horace Frantz; Miss Addie Hemenway, whose party included Miss Vesta Tucker, Miss Jennie Pinckney, Miss Louise Kampf, Miss Cora Kampf and Miss Octavia Hall, and a host of others.

On the Calendar

This week will be a very busy one socially, as there are many affairs planned for the visiting poloists, the numerous house guests and the governors. Today numerous informal dinners are being given at the Country club and the various homes of society folk. Tomorrow Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. MacNeill are giving a large luncheon at the Country club for Governor and Mrs. Dix of New York, who are expected to arrive at noon for a week with the Arthurs. In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Arthur are entertaining at dinner at their home for Mr. and Mrs. Dix, and tomorrow evening, too, there will be a real cabaret supper at the Country club, a subscription affair for the members and their guests.

Tuesday Mrs. Turner Cooke is giving a very large and very elegant luncheon at the Country club. She will have as her guests all of the fashionable set and their many visitors. Then, Tuesday evening at the Antlers hotel there is to be the formal reception given by Governor and Mrs. Ammons of Colorado to the visiting governors and their families. This will be preceded by numerous dinner parties—among the hostesses at dinner will be Mrs. James T. Anderson and Mrs. Spencer Penrose—and is to be followed by a brilliant ball.

Wednesday the Potter polo ball at El Pomar will be the climax of social events of the week. It is to be most elaborate. Among those who are entertaining at dinner before it are Mr. and Mrs. Chester Alan Arthur, Mrs. Charles Farnsworth and Mr. and Mrs. George Buell Russell.

Mr. and Mrs. McNeill will preside over another smart luncheon for many guests Thursday at the Country club for Mr. and Mrs. Moncrief and the others of the Schley house party. By Thursday many of the Denverites and other visitors for the tournament will be leaving for their homes, and after that day the entertainments will be hardly as formal as during the early part of the week. Many other affairs are being planned that will make the week one continuous round of gayety.

Announcements have been received here of the wedding of Miss Jessie Caroline Barclay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Barclay of Yonkers, N. Y., to Mr. Roger H. Motten, son of Mr. and Mrs. Zachariah Motten of Colorado Springs, on Thursday evening, August 14, at 8 o'clock.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Olin Jones of Cleveland, O., a fraternity brother and college chum of the groom, in the large hall of the bride's home. An alcove was exquisitely decorated to form a church chancel and here the bride and groom stood beneath a large floral bell during the beautiful Episcopal ring service. A green and white color scheme was used in all the dainty appointments, the house having been turned into a veritable bower of palms and ferns and cut flowers.

Mendelssohn's Wedding march, played by Miss Mary Thompson, the bride's cousin, was the signal for the entrance of the bridal party. Miss Barclay entered the hall on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. Her bridal robe was an exquisite creation of white charmeuse with graceful draperies of silk shadow lace caught here and there with orange blossoms. A filmy veil fell from a crown of orange blossoms to the bottom of her train completely enveloping the slender figure. She carried a shower bouquet of brides' roses and valley lilies, and wore the groom's wedding gift, a Phi Delta Theta fraternity pin set with opals and diamonds.

The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Ethel Hudson of Brooklyn, as bridesmaid. Her gown was of white chiffon over pale green silk and she carried a shower of Maryland roses. The groom was attended by Mr. Terry Ritchie, formerly of Pueblo, but now of New York city.

Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom received the congratulations and best wishes of the relatives and intimate friends who were present in the drawing room, which was adorned with quantities of Richmond roses. An elaborate buffet supper was served later, the dining room and supper table being decorated with brides' roses. After a honeymoon tour Professor and Mrs. Motten will return to the Springs and make their home at 7 Pelham place.

Mad, Merry Bal Masque During Shan Kive Week

Box seats for the Shan Kive masque to be there, but because of the real spirit of good fellowship and mingling unrestrained with your fellow creatures. They were all there, ladies of quality, society debutantes rubbing fancy costumes with Indian dames and maidens right from a reservation; shop girls quadrilling alongside of their employers' ladies; millionaires who have dipped successfully in oil and gold and land, having no more fun in a six-dollar box than their own clerks climbing down from the top row of fifty-cent seats.

At the hall on Kiowa street one gets the real spirit of the carnival season. This year there are 73 boxes each seating six people, and the price is a dollar a seat.

A number of these boxes have been reserved by the committee for governors or other distinguished guests who may appear at the last moment. Those who have ordered boxes so far are Mrs. Francis W. Goddard, Mr. C. M. MacNeill, Mr. Chester Alan Arthur, Chaloner B. Schley, Mr. Spencer Penrose, Mr. M. H. Wilbur, Mr. J. S. Tucker, Mr. Guy Wagner, Mr. W. S. Dunning, Mr. Willis Armstrong, Mr. Wilmer Hemming, Mr. T. C. Kirkwood, Mr. Grant C. Hemenway, Mrs. E. A. Sunderlin, Mr. Nickerson, Mr. Frank Sherwin, Mr. Harry T. Lowe, Mr. R. O. Visiting Governors Will Be Royally Entertained

When the governors and their families arrive here in Colorado Springs tomorrow and Tuesday they will find that every minute detail has been arranged for their comfort and pleasure. They will be greeted by committees of our most prominent men who have been citizens of [illegible] who are interested in the [illegible] [illegible] to the hospitality of the [illegible].

Formal Reception and Ball.

Tuesday night the conference will be formally opened with an elaborate reception and ball to be given by Governor and Mrs. Ammons of Colorado to the visiting governors and their families. The reception, which will be by card only, is to be held in the ballroom of the Antlers hotel. [illegible] the guests will be ex-Governor and Mrs. Alva Adams of Pueblo, Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. S. R. Fitzgerald, Secretary of State and Mrs. J. B. Pearce, State Treasurer and Mrs. M. A. Leddy, Attorney General and Mrs. Fred Farrar, State Auditor and Mrs. [illegible] Kenehan, Superintendent of Public Instruction Miss Mary C. C. Bradford, Adjutant General and Mrs. John Chase, Mayor and Mrs. C. L. McKesson of Colorado Springs and a number of our representative citizens.

Following this reception there is to be a ball which will be preceded by several smart dinners and followed by informal little supper parties galore. The reception rooms and the ballroom are to be handsomely decorated with the national and state flags, palms and flowers. Fink's orchestra will furnish its usual splendid music for the dancers.

Wednesday the visiting executives will be the guests of the Mount Manitou Scenic Incline company on a trip to the top of Mount Manitou, and a really western out-of-doors luncheon. This trip will undoubtedly be unique in the manner of entertainment. The picnic lunch is to be cooked and eaten out-of-doors and will include delicious spring chicken, tender beef steaks, coffee and all the other good things we have out here in Colorado when we go into the mountains. After luncheon there has been arranged a program of races and other features that will make these men forget the weight of responsibility upon their shoulders and become just boys again for a while. Won't it be great sport? Just imagine 20 or 25 high and mighty men of affairs racing about up there in the clouds on burro-back!

When the party returns to Manitou it will be greeted by the Manitou Springs Hot Iron club that has arranged an all-state reception to be held in the Soda Springs park. Here the governors will have opportunity to meet all the people from their respective states who are either residents of or visitors in the Pikes Peak region.

Guests of Country Club.

Wednesday evening there will be an executive session and social affairs will be limited to informal affairs. Thursday afternoon the party will be the guests of the Cheyenne Mountain Country club at the polo tournament. A brilliant red marquee has been set up on the edge of the field, and there the governors will share honors with the polo players. The Colorado Springs Golf club is also arranging something in honor of our distinguished guests, and they have been offered the privileges of the club throughout their stay.

The big Colorado Products dinner will take place at the Antlers Thursday evening. This is being given by Governor Ammons for the state of Colorado, and by the Colorado Springs Chamber of Commerce. The dining room will be decorated with flags and flowers and Fink's orchestra will play. Gov. Joseph M. Carey of Wyoming will act as toastmaster on this occasion, but the toasts and those who will respond to them have not yet been decided upon. Many guests are coming from Denver and Pueblo and other parts of the state, most of the prominent people of our own city will be present and the limit of 300 promises to be a keen disappointment to many who will not be able to obtain places.

Friday afternoon the party will be taken in automobiles over the famous convict built roads, which really were instrumental in bringing the conference here to the foot of Pikes Peak. These roads have attracted a great deal of [illegible] the governors will be taken [illegible] down the Canon City road, up Ute Pass to [illegible] through the Garden of the Gods.

Art and Literature Dept. Plans Charming Musicale

[illegible] until [illegible] will be given by a number of our most talented pupils for the benefit of the art and literature department of the Woman's club. This is the first formal or informal affair to be given this season by any department of the club, and will be a delightful time of meeting for old club friends as well as a very attractive afternoon.

The affair will be given at the home of Mrs. A. J. Carper, 1411 South Nevada avenue, and the public is cordially invited. The members of the department and their many friends among the other clubs are busy selling tickets and undoubtedly a sufficient sum will be raised to defray the expenses of the club work this year—for the program will be splendid.

Mrs. Julia Stevens Bacon, who is known as "St. Louis' well known composer," but whom we claim as our very own, will be present and will accompany Mrs. Katherine Graves, the St. Louis soprano, when she sings. And the songs will be some of Mrs. Bacon's own sweet, appealing things that grip the heart and linger long in the memory. Mrs. Graves has become very well and favorably known here this summer through her splendid work at Stratton park with the Midland band, and with Mrs. Bacon's songs to exhibit her voice their share of the program must needs be most worth while.

Other local talent will assist with the program and several unique innovations have been planned as fur[illegible] [illegible] a lawn fete if the weather permits.

Lawn Party Postponed

The board of directors of the City Federation of Women's Clubs met Thursday afternoon with the president, Mrs. Fonetta Flansburg at her home, 707 North Wahsatch avenue. Routine business was transacted and it was decided that the federation should furnish one of the offices of the new Young Women's Christian association building.

It was also decided to postpone the annual September lawn fete until September 20, on account of the Shan Kive festivities during the first week of the month.

FASHION SHOW IN TEA ROOMS OF PARIS

From the New York Sun.

Nothing in the panorama of Paris life is more Parisian than the tea room. "Room" is the proper title of these establishments, for very few merit the name given them by the French, "salle du the," most of them being small and limited as to seating capacity. This very factor is one of the charms of the Paris tea room, since the little tables are drawn near to each other, people are assembled together as in a family drawing room and the crowd is never too large for any one to pass unnoticed.

Between 4 and 6 o'clock the scene is constantly changing. Visitors are coming and going, some to remain only long enough to take the tea they have ordered, others to listen to the music and others still to while away the best part of the afternoon pleasantly engaged in the occupation of viewing the bewilderingly beautiful toilets or the many [illegible] of society [illegible]

Many of the best cuts and modes are first recognized in the tea room, and the couturier, appreciating the value of gowns launched here, is not slow in sending his animated models, who are generally beautiful and distinguished looking women.

The perfectly arrayed person at the next table for instance, with her waxed, waved locks and rich robe that fits like a glove, may have been an apprentice in a dressmaking establishment at 50 cents a day a year ago. Now she is no longer a chrysalis in the workroom, but a glorious butterfly, taking all the luxuries she can out of the life she has chosen.

Her companion, who is perhaps piloting her around, was herself probably a little workgirl, a Mimi Pinson of the pen of Alfred de Vigny, the kind pictured by the pencil of Gavarni. Eleanor: The girl who laughed at your "make up" must have had some little cause at least. Most face powders give that artificial look. Besides, they rub off so easily and do damage to sensitive skins. Here is a formula which I find has met with wonderful success. Dissolve four ounces of spurmax in ½ pint water and add two teaspoonfuls glycerine. Apply this lotion to face, neck and arms and rub until dry. It whitens the skin naturally, will cling a long time, seeming really a part of the skin, to which it gives a dainty glow and velvety softness, and is a good preventive of all skin blemishes.

(From Feminine World)
The use of creams on the face sometimes causes hair to grow. You can avoid the risk of acquiring superfluous hair by avoiding cosmetics and using mercolized wax instead. There is nothing better for any condition of the skin, as the wax actually absorbs the offensive cuticle. The latter is naturally replaced by a clear, smooth, healthy complexion, full of life and expression. It's the sensible way to discard a freckled, tanned, over-red, blotchy or pimpled skin. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at any druggist's and apply nightly like cold cream, erasing in the morning with soap and water. It takes a week or so to complete the transformation.
The ideal wrinkle eradicator is made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. Bathing the face in the solution brings almost instantaneous results. Adv.

Society Attends Opening Day of Polo Tournament

Prominent society folk watching the polo matches yesterday afternoon at the Country club. They are: Mrs. W. H. Evans, Mr. Evans, Mrs. Frederick Hitchcock Morley, Miss McCandless, Miss Dorothy Woods, Miss Dorothy Matthews of Cincinnati, Miss Elizabeth Davis, Mrs. John G. Shields, Mr. J. Addison Hayes; and some Denverites, Mrs. Lafayette Hughes, Mrs. George Adams and Mrs. Lawrence Phipps, Jr., who was Miss Gladys Hart of this city.

Lovely Weather, Fine Polo and Brilliant Society for Polo Games

"A Perfect Day."

It was just that, the opening day of the long-talked-of, long-planned-for polo tournament at the Cheyenne Mountain Country club.

The God of the Weather smiled and, of course, that was a wonderful thing, for there could have been no fine polo watched by fascinating women in natty costumes otherwise.

The players and their ponies were in the best of training, eager and impatient for the games, determined to outdo even their own splendid records on the field.

Society was out en masse in stunning attire to lend the support of their presence to the teams they cheered so loyally. Many smart motors gathered in the parking spaces, filled with gay parties of the fashionable set and their house guests. The boxes presented a gay kaleidoscope of color and motion with the bright gowns of their occupants, and stunning parasols shading smart little hats that closely fitted bewitching, smiling faces.

Many members of the automobile parties left their machines for canvas chairs on the grass near the edge of the field, and between the two games they strolled back and forth, to and from [illegible] chatting here and there [illegible] and stopping whenever [illegible] came in [illegible] to wish the [illegible] well or congratulate him on [illegible] already won, while some of the smart set remained on the cool veranda of the club house, playing the [illegible] between exciting moments of the games.

Among [illegible] were Mr and Mrs [illegible] and their guest, Mr [illegible] Mr and Mrs Spencer Penrose, Mrs [illegible] Walsh, Major and Mrs Charles T. Lowndes and their children, Mr J. Addison Hayes and Mrs John G. Shields, Mr and Mrs S. L. Shober, Mr and Mrs Ashton Potter and [illegible] of the Fort Robinson team, Mrs [illegible] Carpenter [illegible] Mr and Mrs [illegible] and their guests, Mr and Mrs [illegible] and Mrs [illegible] Mr and Mrs A. H. Hunt, Miss May Kyle and Master Hunt, Mrs Rebecca J. Lowe, whose guests were Mr and Mrs Charles B. Seldomridge, Mr and Mrs Copeland of Nebraska and Mrs W. S. Johnson, Dr and Mrs Arthur C. H. Friedmann and Mrs Berne Hopkins, Mr and Mrs William Codman Sturgis, Mrs F. W. Goddard, Miss Holmes and Miss Julie Sturgis, Mr and Mrs Rush L. Holland, Mr and Mrs John Tait Milliken and Mr and Mrs Grant Hemenway, Dr and Mrs Paul M. Lennox, whose guests were Mr and Mrs Renoud and Mrs Fisher of St. Louis, and Mr Gunsaulus; Mr and Mrs W. E. Halsell of Kansas City, who had Mr and Mrs Ewing Halsell and Mrs L. F. Parker of Vinita, Okla., and Miss Mary Halsell; Dr and Mrs Frantz of New Rochelle, N. Y., whose guests were Dr and Mrs L. G. Brown, Miss Ethel Frantz and Mr Horace Frantz, Miss Addie Hemenway, whose party included Miss Vesta Tucker, Miss [illegible] Pinckney, Miss Louise Kampf, Miss Cora Kampf and Miss Octavia Hall, and a host of others.

This week will be a very busy one socially, as there are many affairs planned for the visiting poloists, the numerous house guests and the governors. Today numerous informal dinners are being given at the Country club and the various homes of society folk. Tomorrow Mr and Mrs Charles M. MacNeill are giving a large luncheon at the Country club for Governor and Mrs. Dix of New York, who are expected to arrive at noon for a week with the Arthurs. In the evening Mr and Mrs Arthur are entertaining at dinner at their home for Mr and Mrs Dix, and tomorrow evening, too, there will be a [illegible] supper at the Country club, a subscription affair for the members and their guests.

Tuesday Mrs Turner Cooke is giving a very large and very elegant luncheon at the Country club. She will have as her guests all of the fashionable set and [illegible] many visitors. [illegible] Tuesday evening at the Antlers [illegible] the formal reception given by Governor and Mrs. Ammons of Colorado to the visiting governors and their families. This will be preceded by numerous dinner parties among the hostesses at dinner will be Mrs James T. Anderson and Mrs Spencer Penrose, and is to be followed by a brilliant ball.

Wednesday the Potter polo ball at El Pomar will be the climax of social events of the week. It is to be most elaborate. Among those who are entertaining at dinner before [illegible] are Mr. and Mrs Chester Alan Arthur, Mrs Charles [illegible] and Mr and Mrs [illegible] Russell.

Mr and Mrs MacNeill will preside [illegible] another smart [illegible] for many [illegible] at the Country club for Mr and Mrs Moncrief and the others of the [illegible] party. By Thursday many of the Denverites and other visitors for the tournament will be leaving for their homes, and after that day the entertainments will be [illegible] as formal as during the early part of the week. Many other affairs are being planned that will make the week one continuous round of gayety.

Mr Leslie Williams and daughter, Miss Bertha [illegible] Dallas, Tex., and Mr King Ellis of Lancaster, Tex., are stopping at the Antlers. Mrs Clyde [illegible] and [illegible] also of Lancaster are at 715 North Tejon Tejon street.

Notes From Cupid.

Announcements have been received here of the wedding of Miss Jessie Carolyn Barclay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Barclay of Yonkers, N. Y., to Mr. Roger H. Motten, son of Mr. and Mrs. Zachariah Motten of Colorado Springs, on Thursday evening, August 14, at 8 o'clock.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Olin Jones of Cleveland, O., a fraternity brother and college chum of the groom, in the large hall of the bride's home. An alcove was exquisitely decorated to form a church chancel and here the bride and groom stood beneath a large floral bell during the beautiful Episcopal ring service. A green and white color scheme was used in all the dainty appointments, the house having been turned into a veritable bower of palms and ferns and cut flowers.

Mendelssohn's Wedding march, played by Miss Mary Thompson, the bride's cousin, was the signal for the entrance of the bridal party. Miss Barclay entered the hall on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. Her bridal robe was an exquisite creation of white charmeuse with graceful draperies of silk shadow lace caught here and there with orange blossoms. A filmy veil fell from a crown of orange blossoms to the bottom of her train completely enveloping the slender figure. She carried a shower bouquet of brides' roses and valley lilies and wore the groom's wedding gift, a Phi Delta Theta fraternity pin set with opals and diamonds.

The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Ethel Hudson of Brooklyn, as bridesmaid. Her gown was of white chiffon over pale green silk and she carried a shower of Maryland roses. The groom was attended by Mr. [illegible], formerly of Pueblo, but now of New York city.

Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom received the congratulations and best wishes of the relatives and intimate friends who were present in the drawing room, which was adorned with quantities of Richmond roses. An elaborate buffet supper was served [illegible], the dining room and supper table being decorated with brides' roses. After a honeymoon tour Professor and Mrs. Motten will return to the Springs and make their home at 7 Polham place.

Mr. and Mrs. George Frances Oswald [illegible] announced the engagement of

Mad, Merry Bal Masque During Shan Kive Week

Box seats for the Shan Kive mas[illegible] to be there, but because of the real spirit of good fellowship and mingling unrestrained with your fellow creatures. They were all there, ladies of quality, society debutantes rubbing fancy costumes with Indian dames and maidens right from a reservation; shop girls quadrilling alongside of their employers' ladies; millionaires who have dipped successfully in oil and gold and [illegible] having no more fun in a six-dollar box than their own clerks climbing down from the top row of fifty-cent seats.

At the ball on Kiowa street one gets the real spirit of the carnival season. This year there are 73 boxes [illegible] seating six people, and the price is a dollar a seat.

A number of these boxes have been reserved by the committee for governors or other distinguished guests who may appear at the last moment. Those who have ordered boxes set aside are Mrs. Francis W. Goddard, Mr. C. M. MacNeill, Mr. Chester Alan Arthur, Chaloner B. Schley, Mr. Spencer Penrose, Mr. M. H. Wilbur, Mr. J. S. Tucker, Mr. Guy Wagner, Mr. W. S. Visiting Governors Will Be Royally Entertained

When the governors and their families arrive here in Colorado Springs tomorrow and Tuesday they will find that every minute detail has been arranged for their comfort and pleasure. They will be greeted by committees of our most prominent men who were once citizens of their own states, men who are interested in them and proud of them for "Auld Lang Syne." They will be wined and dined—only the wine is to be Manitou champagne this time—and feted by the foremost people of the city. And when they leave the Pikes Peak region after their conference is ended we are sure that they will have fallen victims to its many charms and to the hospitality of its people.

Formal Reception and Ball.

Tuesday night the conference will be formally opened with an elaborate reception and ball to be given by Governor and Mrs. Ammons of Colorado to the visiting governors and their families. The reception, which will be by card only, is to be held in the drawing rooms of the Antlers hotel. Assisting Governor and Mrs. Ammons to receive the guests will be ex-Governor and Mrs. Alva Adams of Pueblo, Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. S. R. Fitzgarrald, Secretary of State and Mrs. J. B. Pearce, State Treasurer and Mrs. M. A. Leddy, Attorney General and Mrs. Fred Farr, State Auditor and Mrs. Rhoady Kenehan, Superintendent of Public Instruction Mrs. Mary C. C. Bradford, Adjutant General and Mrs. John Chase, Mayor and Mrs. C. L. McKesson of Colorado Springs and a number of our representative citizens.

Following this reception there is to be a ball which will be preceded by several smart dinners and followed by informal little supper parties galore. The reception rooms and the ballroom are to be handsomely decorated with the national and state flags, palms and flowers. Fink's orchestra will furnish its usual splendid music for the dancers.

Wednesday the visiting executives will be the guests of the Mount Manitou Scenic Incline company on a trip to the top of Mount Manitou, and a really western out-of-doors luncheon. This trip will undoubtedly be unique in the manner of entertainment. The picnic lunch is to be cooked and eaten out-of-doors and will include delicious spring chicken, tender beef steaks, coffee and all the other good things we have out here in Colorado when we go into the mountains. After luncheon there has been arranged a program of races and other features that will make these men forget the weight of responsibility upon their shoulders and become just boys again for a while. Won't it be great sport? Just imagine 20 or 25 high and mighty men of affairs racing about up there in the clouds on burro-back!

When the party returns to Manitou it will be greeted by the Manitou Springs Hot Iron club that has arranged an all-state reception to be held in the Soda Springs park. Here the governors will have opportunity to meet all the people from their respective states who are either residents of or visitors in the Pikes Peak region.

Guests of Country Club.

Wednesday evening there will be an executive session and social affairs will be limited to informal affairs. Thursday afternoon the party will be the guests of the Cheyenne Mountain Country club at the polo tournament. A brilliant red marquee has been set up on the edge of the field, and there the governors will share honors with the polo players. The Colorado Springs Golf club is also arranging something in honor of our distinguished guests, and they have been offered the privileges of the club throughout their stay.

The big Colorado Products dinner will take place at the Antlers Thursday evening. This is being given by Governor Ammons for the state of Colorado, and by the Colorado Springs Chamber of Commerce. The dining room will be decorated with flags and flowers and Fink's orchestra will play. Gov. Joseph M. Carey of Wyoming will act as toastmaster on this occasion, but the toasts and those who will respond to them have not yet been decided upon. Many guests are coming from Denver and Pueblo and other parts of the state, most of the prominent people of our own city will be present and the limit of 300 promises to be a keen disappointment to many who will not be able to obtain places.

Friday afternoon the party will be taken in automobiles over the famous convict built roads, which really were instrumental in bringing the conference here to the foot of Pikes Peak. These roads have attracted a great deal of interest and the governors will be taken several miles down the Canon City road, up Ute Pass to Cascade and through the Garden of the Gods.

State Societies Busy.

Several of the state societies are planning to find time somehow between Tuesday and Saturday to entertain their governors. The Texas people who are visiting here this summer and those who reside in Colorado Springs are giving a luncheon for Governor Colquitt of that state at the Antlers hotel on Thursday. Mr. J. W. [illegible] of Fort Worth is the chairman of the committee on arrangements, and Mr. Wilmer Hemming is the local man in charge.

The Chamber of Commerce committee that has so ably arranged for this splendid series of entertainments includes Dr. A. C. Magruder, general chairman; Mr. Willard [illegible], chairman of the banquet committee; Mr. Wilmer Hemming, chairman of the reception committee; Mr. J. F. [illegible], chairman of the automobile ride committee; Mr. C. M. Cole, chairman of the souvenir program committee, and Mr. Charles T. Fertig, Mr. Arthur Cornforth, Mr. W. S. Crosby, Mr. L. A. Pulfer, Dr. D. H. Rice and Dr. Gillett.

[illegible] Among the Pines

The Hotel Ramona at Cascade is a very gay place this month. There is a delightfully congenial party there and innumerable informal social events have taken place recently and are planned for the remainder of the summer. The Shirley orchestra of Denver is playing at the hotel this summer and adds greatly to the pleasure of the weekly Saturday evening hops. Mr. Glen Lee of St. Louis and Mrs. Miller of Peoria, Ill., are giving a series of charming Sunday evening concerts, and next Friday evening the [illegible] Quartette of St. Louis will give a concert.

Miss Clare Warfield and Miss Turner entertained their friends last Thursday evening with a fancy dress party at the hotel in honor of Miss Nancy Barnhart and Mr. Robert Barnhart who are leaving on Friday for their home in St. Louis.

Among the guests at the hotel now are Mr. E. S. Joheiser, the Miss Della and Adele Joheiser, Ray Joheiser, Miss Blanche Turner, Miss Clare Warefield, Mrs. E. J. Curr, Mr. D. O. Miss Muriel [illegible] has gone to Kansas City to join her family. They will make their home in that place.

Mr. [illegible] of [illegible] with his wife and [illegible] are visiting Mrs. W. B. [illegible], 301 Cheyenne road, for the [illegible] days.

Tent Story Hour.

The last of the delightful story hours that the women of Colorado City have been providing this summer for the wee tots will be given next Thursday. School will soon take up, and it is thought that there will be no further need for the stories then, but for the summer they have surely filled a long felt want and charmed the children beyond measure.

Last Thursday Mrs. E. D. Kinney told the stories. There were fewer children present than usual on account of the rainy weather, but the interest and attention of those who did brave the storm was splendid. This week Mrs. Duncan Lamont and Mrs. L. A. Miller will share the duty and pleasure of telling the stories at 3 o'clock in the parish house of the Church of the Good Shepherd. All visiting children are invited.

The Home Beauty Parlor
By Betty [illegible]

Mrs. W.: Your wrinkles, especially in middle age, are inexcusable and a certain remedy for them consists in treating the skin thoroughly with a plain almozoin cream jelly, easily made at home. This is made by pouring 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine in ½ pint cold water, into which is then dissolved 1 ounce almozoin. Massaging with this simple vegetable cream jelly will quickly rid the skin of lines, blackheads and wrinkles, and when used for flabby muscles and hollows will make the flesh firm and smooth.

Sally J.: Your dry hair and dandruff are common troubles which are very easily cured. Try this tonic which I and many of my friends have used and found perfect. Mix one ounce quinzoin with ½ pint alcohol and add ½ pint cold water. Rub this invigorating tonic into your scalp twice a week and the hair-roots will take on a healthy growth. I know of nothing so prompt and sure in destroying dandruff and to remedy itching scalp. This tonic is wonderfully stimulating to hair growth and should be used in connection with canthrox shampoo. I am writing today about canthrox also. See answer to Verity.

Verity: If you will keep your scalp clean and pliant by occasionally shampooing with a teaspoonful canthrox dissolved in a cup hot water, the hair roots will grow strong and vigorous, resulting in a head of healthy, beautiful hair. This canthrox, which is easier to use than any shampoo of which I know, creates a wealth of white, thick lather that dissolves all dust and dandruff and neutralizes excess oil. Rinsing leaves the scalp immediately clean and the hair dries rapidly with a rich, even color, and is ever so fluffy and brilliant.

Mayme: Yes, I know a harmless fat reducer that works rapidly and which many of my too heavy friends used to bring them to normal weight. Into 1½ pints hot water put 4 ounces parnotis; strain when cool and take a tablespoonful before meals until weight is sufficiently reduced. Then stop the treatment. This parnotis treatment requires no dieting or violent exercise and restores the figure's symmetrical lines, and after your weight is where you want it, the flesh will be firm and the skin free from wrinkles.

Bebe: Your yellowness around chin and neck and general "all-gone" feeling mean that your liver requires a regulator, and I would suggest a plain kardene tonic. This will cleanse the blood and give tone and strength to the liver and kidneys and when these organs are in a healthy condition you will be free from bilious attacks, obstinate headaches, and the pains in small of back and groin. To prepare this tonic put 1 ounce kardene into ½ pint alcohol (never use whisky), then add ½ cupful sugar and hot water to make a quart. The dose is a tablespoonful before meals. The kardene tonic is excellent to clear the skin of pimples, blotches and sallowness, and its timely use frequently saves doctor's bills.

M. Williams: I do not know how your eye trouble may be caused. There are many reasons which might make them dull, but I do know a certain way to tone, strengthen and brighten them. To relieve the redness and soothe the eye-strain apply the following tonic: Drop into each eye 2 or 3 drops daily of a simple preparation made at home by dissolving an ounce of crystos in a pint of water. This will relieve inflamed lids and beautify and brighten the eye itself. Absolutely safe and inexpensive.

Eleanor: The girl who laughed at your "make-up" must have had some little cause at least. Most face powders give that artificial look. Besides, they rub off so easily and do damage to sensitive skins. Here is a formula which I find has met with wonderful success. Dissolve four ounces of spurmax in ½ pint water and add two teaspoonfuls glycerine. Apply this lotion to face, neck and arms and rub until dry. It whitens the skin naturally, will cling a long time, seeming really a part of the skin, to which it gives a dainty glow and velvety softness, and is a good preventive of all skin blemishes.

ATTRACTIVE YOUNG SOCIETY GIRLS CHOSEN AS DUCHESSES FOR FETES

Charming Affairs With Woodland Scenes and Dainty Costumes

Some of the talented participants in the coming fetes photographed in their costumes. They are Miss Jacqueline Logan, who will be the Goddess of the Wood in the fascinating fairy play, "The Little Princess;" Miss Leslie Davis, who will essay the role of Cupid, and Master Richard Roby, who will be the Lord High Chamberlain and announce the duchesses of the Queen of Flowers.

What prettier, or more appropriate or more worthy than that the fortunate, the protected, the cared-for children should do for the little unfortunates, the unprotected, the uncared-for ones, by giving for them a happy holiday play wherein the actors themselves derive as much real pleasure as the audience, and at the same time add to the exchequer of a noble and worthy cause?

Such is the motive or keynote of the two children's fetes to be given here for the benefit of the children's ward [illegible] by the [illegible] for a [illegible] youth [illegible].

Miss Harriet M. Edwards of New York, who [illegible] the duties of producing of the two pretty [illegible], has had personal supervision of all the coaching and dramatic details. Abetting her efforts in every way toward success is the capable children's ward committee, whose efforts in behalf of the children's relief is too well known even to need comment. The members of this committee are Mrs. James Ferguson Burns, who is acting chairman of the entertainment committee for the fetes, Mrs. John G. Shields, who is chairman and patroness; Mrs. A. A. Blackman, chairman of the box committee; Mrs. Marx Loris, chairman of the program committee; Miss May Howbert and Miss Avis Jones, chairmen of publicity and decorations.

A brilliant spectacle, full of life, full of color, full of gorgeous pageantry, graceful dances and rememberable songs, is promised in these two midsummer fetes, which are to be given this week, Saturday, August 30, and the Monday following, September 1, at the Grand Opera house, both matinee and night.

[illegible] Rehearse.

[illegible] for the [illegible] as was that [illegible] of the [illegible] of the French fete for this association. [illegible] schools and societies will use their [illegible] boxes they have reserved for each performance, and colored lights from the stage will be continued out across the stage boxes, with flowers and foliage further adding to the charming effect of a woodland grotto.

The scenes of "The Little Princess" are laid in the Garden of Flowers, where the Queen of Flowers reigns over her beautiful subjects. Roses, lilies, violets, golden asters and gorgeous poppies bow their heads and bend their slender stalks to their queen. To reward them for their loyalty, she promises them a fairy play—and has produced for them "The Little Princess." This story forms the prologue of the play.

Charming Duchesses Chosen.

The Queen of the Court of Flowers will [illegible] her duchesses and with them watch the plot unfold, she yielding her sovereign right to rule for the one night to the princess and the [illegible], who must find her Prince Charming. In this flower pageant the [illegible] are to be reconciled and [illegible] who will assume the roles are:

Her Majesty, Queen of the Court of Flowers...To be chosen by the Court
Duchess of American Beauty Rose...
...Miss Ann Shober
Duchess of Carnation...
...Miss Margaretta Harrison
Duchess of Lilac...Miss Mary Lawton
Duchess of Poppy...Miss Persis Perkins
Duchess of Sweet Peas...
...Miss Mary Elizabeth Hamlin
Duchess of Violet...
...Miss Gladys Olivia Burns
Duchess of Daffodil...
...Miss Betty Hungerford
Duchess of Golden Rod...
...Miss Muffet O'Brien

Attractive Ballets.

"The play's the thing
Wherewith we'll catch
The conscience of the king."

The "Little Princess" and "Much Ado" bid fair to parody these famous lines and make them read:

"The play's the thing
Wherewith we'll catch"

the nod of approval and the hearty applause of a large and critical audience.

Scattered all through the dialogue are the dances, classical ballets, bewitching rondels and circle and group choruses, which will change and melt and mould under the calcium lights until a veritable fairyland will evolve out of the background and Titania and all her elves will "take possession of their fairy realm."

Those who love variety will like the fetes. Those who love beauty will enjoy the fetes. Those who love rhythm and motion and artistic groupings will be delighted with the fetes. Why not go to both of them, see the "Little Princess," see Titania in the "Much Ado," enjoy the children for the sake of the children, and be young again for your own pleasure as well as for the profit of the noble cause for which the fetes are to be given.

WOMAN'S CLUB NEWS

Art and Literature Dept. Plans Charming Musicale

Wednesday afternoon from 3 until 5 o'clock a delightful musicale will be given by a number of our most talented people for the benefit of the art and literature department of the Woman's club. This is the first formal or informal affair to be given this season by any department of the club, and will be a delightful time of meeting for old club friends, as well as a very attractive afternoon.

The affair will be given at the home of Mrs. A. J. Carper, 1411 South Nevada avenue, and the public is cordially invited. The members of the department and their many friends among the other clubs are busy selling tickets and undoubtedly a sufficient sum will be raised to defray the expenses of the club work this year—for the program will be splendid.

Mrs. Julia Stevens Bacon, who is known as "St. Louis' well known composer," but whom we claim as our very own, will be present and will accompany Mrs. Katherine Graves, the St. Louis soprano, when she sings. And the songs will be some of Mrs. Bacon's own sweet, appealing things that grip the heart and linger long in the memory. Mrs. Graves has become very well and favorably known here this summer through her splendid work at Stratton park with the Midland band, and with Mrs. Bacon's songs to exhibit her voice their share of the program must needs be most worth while.

Other local talent will assist with the program, and several unique innovations have been planned as surprises during the program, which will be given on the lawn in the form of a lawn fete if the weather permits.

Lawn Party Postponed

The board of directors of the City Federation of Women's Clubs met Thursday afternoon with the president, Mrs. Fonetta Flansburg at her home, 707 North Wahsatch avenue. Routine business was transacted and it was decided that the federation should furnish one of the offices of the new Young Women's Christian association building.

It was also decided to postpone the annual September lawn fete until September 20, on account of the many Shan Kive festivities during the first week of the month.

Woman's Study Club

The first regular meeting of the Woman's Study club of Colorado City this season will take place Monday evening, September 1, at 7:30 o'clock at the home of the president, Mrs. Duncan Lamont, 310 Jefferson avenue, Colorado City. Miss Thill is arranging a program of American music by American composers and the meeting promises to be a very pleasant one.

North End W. C. T. U.

The North End W. C. T. U. will hold a regular meeting next Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock with Mrs. J. A. Frazer, 208 East Dale street. Members are urged to attend, for there will be the annual election of officers. It is important that the Flower Mission reports be brought to this meeting. Visiting members will be most welcome.

Gave Kaffee Klatsch

Mrs. Laura M. Donahue and Mrs. J. Lloyd Ness entertained the ladies of America Anderson Auxiliary, United Spanish War Veterans, with a kaffee klatsch on the summit of Red mountain Friday afternoon. The regular meeting was held and a social hour very much enjoyed.

Francis Willard W. C. T. U.

Frances Willard W. C. T. U. held its regular meeting Thursday afternoon at Miss Atkinson's home, 209 South Nevada avenue. After the routine business was transacted the superintendents of departments read splendid reports showing that much had been accomplished during the year along different lines, particularly in the Flower Mission and L. T. L. departments.

The Union then proceeded to elect the following officers for the ensuing year: Mrs. McRae, honorary president; Mrs. Sater, acting president; Miss Atkinson, vice president; Mrs. Sinton, recording secretary; Mrs. Johnson, treasurer, and Mrs. [illegible], corresponding secretary.

FASHION SHOW IN TEA ROOMS OF PARIS

From the New York Sun.

Nothing in the panorama of Paris life is more Parisian than the tea room. "Room" is the proper title of these establishments, for very few merit the name given them by the French, "salle du thé," most of them being small and limited as to seating capacity. This very factor is one of the charms of the Paris tea room, since the little tables are drawn near to each other, people are assembled together as in a family drawing room and the crowd is never too large for any one to pass unnoticed.

Between 4 and 6 o'clock the scene is constantly changing. Visitors are coming and going, some to remain only long enough to take the tea they have ordered, others to [illegible] and others still to [illegible] away the best part of the afternoon [illegible] new delightfully beautiful [illegible] of the many phases of society bent on amusing itself.

Wonderful Popularity.

Up to a comparatively few years ago the tea room was almost unknown on the Continent. No one thought of taking anything to eat between luncheon and dinner except the English and their imitators, and the tea was generally served them in the hotel dining room, and a few students of the Latin quarter, who gathered in little places around the Sorbonne to refresh themselves with a drink that has now become part of the daily program with people of leisure.

Nothing is done hastily in Paris, and those who go in to take a cup of tea and [illegible] remain all the afternoon at the "Five." A big hotel was the first to announce that tea would be served in its hallway at 5 o'clock, and the innovation created such a [illegible] that tea rooms began to appear everywhere, and people wondered how they had ever spent the long span between midday and sunset without such resource.

One may entertain one's friends at a tea room. Everything is informal at these tea parties, there being no complications in the arrangement of guests about the table, which at best accommodates only half a dozen.

All the world goes to the tea rooms—famous actresses, visiting celebrities, women of society. These fashion chroniclers go to discover the latest modes, and there feminine finery is seen in all its glory, for nowhere on the globe does one view such superbly gowned creatures as in the capital of the French.

To a newcomer it all appears artificial, the setting and dressing of these Parisiennes, but without this phase of life Paris would not be the same. They are a great feature of the ultrafashionable tea rooms and their costuming is a marvel of color scheme and graceful line.

The Show Place of Fashions.

Realizing the power of the tea room, many of the leading dressmaking establishments send employes there, gowned and coiffed in the lastest creations of their workrooms, the idea being to excite interest and curiosity in the new designs to such an extent that other women may come to them for orders. Many of the best cuts and modes are first recognized in the tea room, and the couturier, appreciating the value of gowns launched here, is not slow in sending his animated models, who are generally beautiful and distinguished looking women.

The perfectly arrayed person at the next table for instance, with her waxed, waved locks and rich robe that fits like a glove, may have been an apprentice in a dressmaking establishment at 50 cents a day a year ago. Now she is no longer a chrysalis in the workroom, but a glorious butterfly taking all the luxuries she can out of the life she has chosen.

Her companion, who is perhaps piloting her around, was herself probably a little workgirl, a Mimi Pinson of the pen of Alfred de Vigny, the kind pictured by the pencil of Gavarni. It is impossible to avoid this class. They follow one up, relentless as fate, and their presence is not only known but recognized by every one present, even in the most exclusive rendezvous of fashion.

With its prettily arranged walls and corners, its artistic tables and its delicate china, the Paris tea room is a perfect picture. It is especially attractive in summer when people sit in gardens amid beautiful plants grouped effectively [illegible]. The several rendezvous in the Bois de Boulogne, where [illegible] the [illegible] water [illegible] and the [illegible] of country air, are [illegible] weather.

All the celebrated tea rooms are situated on the right bank of the Seine. On the left bank the leisure habit has been little known, although there still live there a large number of the old French families and not a few foreigners in addition to nearly all the students. A tea room has been recently opened over there too, and it may be of interest to know that a couple of enterprising American girls are the owners and that they are succeeding in the venture.

In the real Latin quarter an entirely different element frequents the tea rooms. All the gossip of the quarter is exchanged in the tea rooms, but it is a harmless sort, for students away from home are too occupied with their own work to give much thought to matters not connected with it.

There is no other foreign student so well taken care of as the American.

The maiden in the bathing suit
Now lounges on the beach,
And scorns to get wet in the waves,
That splash in easy reach.
Why should she? She is shapely
And the sand is soft and warm,
And bathing with the maiden
Is a matter of good form.

She doesn't mind the people
That stop to view her charms,
Or fly to let old Ocean
Enfold her in his arms.
She doesn't mind the cameras
As other maidens might,
For at home she has a mirror,
And she knows she is all right.

To Discard Freckles, Tan, Pimples, Wrinkles

(From Feminine World)

The use of creams on the face sometimes causes hair to grow. You can avoid the risk of acquiring superfluous hair by avoiding cosmetics and using mercolized wax instead. There is nothing better for any condition of the skin, as the wax actually absorbs the offensive cuticle. The latter is naturally replaced by a clear, smooth, healthy complexion, full of life and expression. It's the sensible way to discard a freckled, tanned, over-red, blotchy or pimpled skin. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at any druggist's and apply nightly like cold cream, washing it off in morning with warm water. [illegible] week or so to complete the [illegible].

The ideal wrinkle [illegible] dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. [illegible] face in the solution [illegible] marvelous results. Adv.

The Japanese Blouse is for House Wear Only - Lingerie Waists of Machine Embroidered Organdie Are Winter's Promise - Flesh Tinted Tub Silk Smarter Than Clear White.

ALL things come to him who waits—or rather to her; for here we are again at an era of separate waists and skirts; and the woman who finds this style of costume the easy solution of many sartorial problems may rejoice and be glad; for whoever dreamed the fashion would return within the span of a generation?

This summer on Fifth Avenue, one might count, any day, dozens of women, the quality of whose garments and the accessories thereof, proclaimed them to be among the well dressed class, wearing soft little shirtwaists of chiffon, batiste or net with skirts of draped fabric, and somehow or other the effect was not banal or commonplace, as one has been led to believe it would be during the past few seasons when whole frocks have been having their day. Whole frocks are still the thing for formal occasions, but the fetching little blouses are to be seen at a surprising number of places, like afternoon matinees, restaurant luncheons and teas, and afternoon tea-dances at which the indefatigable youth of town congregate in the late afternoon hours.

Two-Layer Chiffon Blouses the New Note For Fall.

With the coming of cooler weather, chiffon replaces to some extent the airy net and lace effects of summer; though undoubtedly lace blouses will be worn all winter long, so exquisitely lovely and fascinatingly becoming are these delicate little waists. But there is an effect of substance and dignity about a chiffon blouse matching the color of the tailored suit, which makes it appeal to the woman who must study economy in dress. And there is no getting around the fact that skirt and blouse in one color do make the figure look more slender than the light blouse and dark skirt combination. Two shades of chiffon are dropped, one over the other, in the making of the most attractive fall blouses, and such a blouse is never inexpensive for chiffon and especially chiffon in the rich new shades of the Orient has its price. Usually a dark colored chiffon, matching the general color of the tailored suit, is used over a much brighter more vivid shade. Some of the effective combinations noted in new blouse models turned out by authoritative makers, are brown over canary, blue over copper or red, tan over green, taupe over rose, and so on. Sometimes lace is used for the lining instead of chiffon of contrasting tone; and several charming blouses of dark chiffon have been mounted over slips of very sheer machine embroidered batiste, one model of this sort, in A line at the moment, is of plum colored chiffon over cream embroidered batiste, a little collar and cuffs of the embroidery turning back on the tucked chiffon blouse. The fronts of the blouse open in V effect from a wedge shaped vest of cream net, crossed surplice fashion, and buttons of imitation ivory and pink glass are grouped here and there to give bright touches. This charming blouse accompanies a September trousseau tailleur of plum colored mohair and worsted fabric, pleated a bit in the skirt and having a short pleated tunic of plum colored chiffon. Buttoned boots with tops of black kid complete the costume.

Special Waistcoat Blouses For Cutaway Coats.

She who possesses not a waistcoat this fall will be out of the running, as far as fashion is concerned. Every coat now opens to show a contrasting waistcoat and the more conspicuous the waistcoat, the more ultra the effect. Waistcoat blouses with tab extensions below the waistline in front, look well with the cutaway coat of the moment, and when the coat is removed, there is the pretty blouse, quite perfect in itself. This is a better idea than that of the regulation sleeveless waistcoat which some women don under tailored coats. Either the coat must be retained until one reaches home, or the sleeveless waistcoat must be worn, in turn, over a soft blouse, and coat and waistcoat removed together. And though the idea may be all absurdity, there is something not quite attractive in the spectacle of woman removing coat and waistcoat in a restaurant or other public place. One of the most fetching of the waistcoat blouses is of crepe de chine, a soft Persian blue in color, opening in wedge shape over a crossed vest of shadow lace. The edges of the crepe de chine are heavily corded and the blouse buttons in double breasted fashion below the little crossed lace vest, two pointed tabs, corded all around and outlined with corded buttons, extending below the waistline. [illegible] the waist at the back, and is attached [illegible] where the tab [illegible] the [illegible] edge of the cutaway coat.

Some of the lace blouses have vests of heavier lace in Oriental pattern, such as Venise or Bohemian lace set in a blouse of shadow or pointed Alençon lace. A model of this sort, accompanying a tailleur of soft dark green velvet touched up with dark fur, has draped sections of green chiffon rising in points below the bust at back and front on either side of an inset vest of Bohemian lace, the sleeves and shoulder sections of the blouse being of shadow lace. Another waistcoat blouse from Christiane, is of allover machine embroidery in pure white mounted above flesh pink chiffon which gives the sheer embroidery the delicacy of lace. At the front there is a vest of striped Roman silk in pink, blue and violet, with pointed tabs below the waistline. This blouse has long sleeves with deep frills of net over the hand.

Hard to Raise the Arms In New Blouses.

Many of the latest blouse models have a kimono cut at the shoulder with long sleeves set into very large armholes. The sleeve tapers to a tight fit at the forearm, and though the blouse feels comfortably loose at the shoulder, it is almost impossible to raise the arms to the head. Such a trifling feature of discomfort as this, however, matters little to capricious Dame Fashion. Though long sleeved blouses are shown in numbers, there seem to be equal numbers of elbow and three-quarter sleeved models among the late blouse arrivals from Paris, and with these, long wristed silk gloves showing the dainty Niagara maid embroideries are worn. Frills continue to decorate all sleeves, short or long, and while no prettier sleeve trimming has ever been devised, every woman knows how difficult it is to keep net sleeve frills fresh and uncrumpled, especially under coat sleeves.

Simple Waists For Morning Wear.

Tub silk blouses, and tailored blouses of thin messaline and crepe de chine promise to have the favor for shopping and traveling wear and [illegible] the blonded flesh pink tint is more fashionable than either pure white or cream. Ineffably becoming is the faint flesh pink tint, and in [illegible] these silks launder successfully. The most attractive models open at the front over fichu vests of lace or net and have pleated Medici frills at the back of the neck, the frill tapering toward the front, and turning inward on the vest.

A great use of colored ribbon is made in trimming effects under lace blouses. Sometimes ribbons are carried from shoulder to waist at front and back in V effect, frills of pleated lace falling over the ribbon and partially veiling it. Again, the ribbon may be used on a lace brassiere or blouse lining in trimming bands and bows. The ribbons though veiled by the lace outer blouse are obviously trimmings, and do not suggest the lingerie ribbons that used to show through sheer blouses. Indeed all such trimming ribbons are at least two inches wide and are softly twisted or draped against the net or lace foundation.

The Japanese Tunic Blouse and Abbreviated Kimono.

No more nor less than an ordinary Jap kimono, chopped off at the knee and girdled at the hips by a wide sash, is the new Japanese tunic-blouse which is the moment's sensation in Paris. These blouses are of soft, thin silk, usually in Roman stripe or post impressionist effects and in the V opening at the front of the neck is set a little crossed vest of fine lace. A small, turned down collar and very deep cuffs of dark satin, together with the wide, draped sash, relieve the brilliant color of the tunic and tone it down somewhat. Oddly enough, these kimono tunics are girdled with sashes that tie at the front.

A round half dozen—and one to spare—of the new blouses are pictured; and it is hard to tell which is the most captivating. Most extreme, perhaps, are the Tango blouse and the Futurist blouse, both new models that are promised great popularity. The Tango blouse, with its soft, slouchy lines, is thoroughly in keeping with the modes of this season. It is made of printed silk in blue and red and the sleeve elongated at the top to form the shoulder and tall collar section is a notable feature. The girdle is of Scotch plaid braid.

The Futurist blouse is of apricot pink chiffon embroidered with stiff, modern art flowers in shades of brown, rose and green. Machine scalloped batiste cuffs and collar and a smart tie of picot ribbon, drawn under an embroidered [illegible] motif [illegible] this novel blouse which [illegible] an autumn tailored costume of brown mohair and worsted mixture.

Fall Trimmings Rich with Color

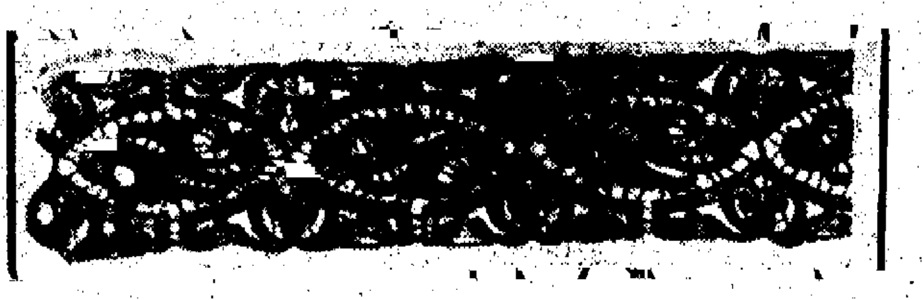
COLOR is to be supplied in the autumn costume, by means of trimming, rather than in the fabric itself; for the consensus of opinion in Paris seems to be that frocks and wraps in themselves will be of rather dark, or at least of neutral toned fabric. Every fashionable toilette, however, is brightened with its dash of vivid color which may be added in the way of a sash, a bolero faced with cerise, or bright green, or blue; collar and cuffs of post impressionist silk, gay buttons or some other trimming device of the sort. Never was there a season when trimmings played so important a part in dress, and the untrimmed frock is likely to look very plain, and prim, this autumn.

The new ribbons come first among the novelty trimming materials. Some of them are half a yard wide and the colors, in rich, glowing shades of the Orient, are skilfully combined in harmonious effects, in jacquard and warp printed patterns, or in the stiff but modish Futurist and post impressionist effects. There are also Chinese ribbons, Egyptian ribbons, and ribbons in Persian and Vale of Cashmere designs, and there are cheerful Scotch plaid ribbons in tartan effects that are, by the bye, just now the enormous fad in Paris. Scotch plaid ribbon sashes and Scotch tam o'shanter caps give the Parisienne quite a lively, Highland appearance and these effects have been noticeable at some of the late summer race meets.

Boleros of beads and chenille embroidery are used with more formal frocks, and the bolero, it may be said, is an important addition to fall trimming effects for these little boleros are to be found at all trimming departments, made of chenille and beads of woven braid and of lace. The modern bolero does not hang loosely below the arms but fits in at the back over the wide girdle, giving a trim line in spite of the much bloused waist worn beneath it.

Button Motif of New Design.

Silks and velvets by the yard may be included among new trimming materials, for bands of these fabrics, as well as collars and cuffs of both velvet and silk decorate simple little frocks and more elaborate suits and wraps. Velvet collar and cuffs and rows of fancy buttons will make a little tea frock of lansdowne or serge quite a festive affair and when it comes to buttons, here is a solution of the trimming question in itself. Thousands and thousands of buttons are ready for autumn costumes and not one kind, but several kinds often embellish a single costume. The most interesting buttons are the Chinese buttons and the buttons in fruit forms. One may expect to see miniature pears, apples and cherries dangling from my lady's fall suit, each little button being a perfect replica in shape and coloring of the fruit it represents. Less sensational are the square, acorn and olive shaped buttons and the ball buttons which are particularly smart and which promise to be as popular as ever all through the coming season.



Crystal Paillettes and Silk Interwoven in a Graceful Festoon Effect.

Braids and passementeries will play their part to a considerable extent—if the counters showing these trimmings are to be taken seriously. Handsome, large motifs of passementerie are ready to applique to costumes and wraps and braids come in all widths from soutache and narrow silk binding braid, to sash-wide braids in plaid effects. A French tailor has brought out a coat and skirt of dark blue serge with wide slashes buttonholed in the coat front, a long strip of [illegible] plaid braid being drawn down the front of the coat in and out through the [illegible] Of course the garment fastens underneath with buttons put on a flap for it would be something of a nuisance to thread that long strip of braid through the [illegible] each time the coat was donned.

Tassels and frogs also come under the head of braid trimmings, and if ever there was a tasseled season, 1913-14 promises to be one. Tassels are added to sashes, to hoods, to scarfs, to sleeves, to every depending part of woman's costume from which a tassel can dangle. One bridge frock that the scribe saw last week removed from a Paris trunk, had dozens of little tassels sewed to bodice and skirt, in rows, like buttons, and the effect though decidedly frivolous, was very gay and fetching. The frock was of heliotrope lansdowne and the tassels matched exactly in color.

Some of the frog fastenings for wraps measure nine or ten inches across and such a fastening often has long tasseled ends depending from it. One may pay as high as seven or eight dollars for a cord fastening of this character, but of course the trimming motif quite "makes" the garment.

Several new trimmings picked at random from the stock of a fashionable Fifth Avenue shop, are illustrated. The braid banding is in black and rich tapestry blue color with jeweled cabuchons of crystal and lapis beads sewed to the center of each medallion motif. Below the braid band is a handsome applique banding of gray net embroidered in Oriental colors and beaded with coral, crystal and pearl.

Another net and bead banding has a running pattern in cut steel and jet beads with large conventional embroidered motifs in shades of green. Above this banding are two button motifs made of tiny metal and glass beads thickly studded on net. The jet beaded banding in a simple Greek honeysuckle pattern will be used to weight the tunic of a black tulle or net evening gown and a fourth illustration shows a small section of a beaded evening robe crystal paillettes and silks in rose and green being embroidered on sheer white net in delicate [illegible] festoons.
